Philadelphia, Sept. 21.—The strike in the anthracite coal region has so far continued without any serious disturbance, though every precaution is being made to assure adequate protection to property in case it is attacked. According to the daily statement issued by the strikers' organization, large numbers still continue to leave work. This is, however, discounted by the declaration of the operators to the contrary. This latter view would seem to be supported by the fact that the Hazleton district oft he Lehigh railway, which handles practically all the coal in the Hazleton district, is only shipping one-third less coal than under normal conditions, which indicates that there has by no means been a general cessation of work. In the Scranton district some excitement has been caused by the attempt of President Mitchell to persuade 2,000 men employed by Markle Bros. to join the strikers. Upon these men it is alleged that the success of the strike to a great extent depends. It is to be regretted, however, that the president of the Mine Workers' Association should have endeavored to induce them to break an agreement of fifteen years' standing, by which they bind themselves to arbitrate all disputes with their employers. This attempt is a bad sign, giving the impression, as it does, that the mine workers are willing to bring about an injustice in order to aid their strike. In addition charges of undue violence on the part of the strikers in efforts to swell their numbers are made from several quarters. From the strikers' point of view the decision of the Philadelphia and Reading to grant an increase of ten per cent. is the most important event since the strike began, as the example may be followed by other companies. Whether the offer will be accepted by the men is not yet known, so that it is idle to speculate as to its effects.

TEN MORE COLLIERIES AFFECTED.

Philadelphia, Sept. 21.—General Superintendent Luther, of Pottsville, to-day telegraphed President Harris, of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company, that ten more of the 34 working collieries of the company were affected by the strike this morning, from 5,000 to 10,000 men having joined the strikers. This action on the part of the mine workers was the result of a meeting held last night at Shenandoah. Twenty-four collieries of the Reading Company are still working. The collieries closed to-day are bunched in the Mahanoy valley.

"VOID IN CASE OF STRIKE."

New York, Sept. 21.—Grove D. Curtis, of the firm of Curtis & Blaisdell, one of the largest retailing coal firms in the country, said yesterday that 95 per cent. of the firms which made contracts with large consumers were protected by a clause invariably insisted upon, that all agreements should be void in case of a strike. The other five per cent., Mr. Curtis added, would probably be upheld by the courts in pleading "usages of the trade." That was a point, however, Mr. Curtis said, which would undoubtedly be tested as an outcome of the strike.

The Pennsylvania Company has already forwarded circulars to its patrons informing them that all contracts will be discontinued under the strike clause. Hardly a ton of coal is being released by the railways, and the stores which they now have, it is declared, will be held fur further contingencies.

ANOTHER REDUCTION.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 21.—There is very little change in the strike situation in the Wyoming valley this morning. The colliery of the West End Coal Company at Mercanaqua suffering another reduction in its force to-day, but the mine is still in operation.

All the other mines in the district are idle.

WATCHMAN SHOT.

Shamokin, Pa., Sept. 21.—Evan Davis, watchman at Hickory Ridge colliery, was shot early this morning by an unknown person as he was patrolling the colliery. The wound is serious.

ACCIDENT AT THE LIFT LOCK

Mr. Andrew Brotherson is Severely Injured by a Falling Bucket.

Andrew Brotherson, an employee at the canal, met with a very serious accident yesterday afternoon. It appears that Brotherson was engaged with several others at a crane that is used for lifting the earth from in front of the big wall of concrete to some distance further back. He was beneath the bucket when one of the guy ropes in some manner gave way, the bucket falling to the ground. Brotherson was pinned in the hole for some time and when extricated was found to be suffering from very severe injuries. His head and face are badly cut. He was immediately removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, and while his injuries are not believed to be dangerous, they are very painful.

INVASION OF ENGLAND.

Apprehension as to What will be Done by France.

London, Sept. 21.—It is difficult to trace the sequence of ideas that has led to the recent scare of an attempt to invade us in November next on the part of France, for if there is one period of the year more than another in which no such danger, except after adequate warning, can possibly threaten us, it is during the month our scaremongers have chosen.

A very elementary acquaintance with the recruiting machinery of the French Army ought to have sufficed to prevent this mistake. It was at least under the impression that any member of the House of Lords could not well be ignorant of the fact that in the last days of September all the young soldiers in France wh ohave completed their three years' service are dismissed to their homes, and during the latter half of October the new recruits are enrolled. As a consequence, the efficiency of the whole army is for the moment at its lowest ebb, and the proportion of trained soldiers with the flag at its minimum. During the Summer months, when the last joined recruits have completed their company training, some 33 per cent. of reservists suffice to bring the units up to a war strength, and, indeed, the units are strong enough at any moment to take the field without any reservists whatever. In October, November, and on to April, not less than 66 per cent. from the reserve would be required, and if a unit swamped by one-third its strength of reserve men is, as a fighting body, eminently undesirable, one with two-thirds of compartive strangers to digest must be very much more so.

The question, then, arises whether, for the special conditions an invasion of England would involve, any calling out of the reserves would be needed at all. Would it not be many times better, and gain all the advantages of surprise, to take the field with the troops as they stand during those months of the year when their efficiency is at its highest—that is, August and September?

STATUS OF THE MEN

At that time the men are in ideal condition for rapid marching, and the units themselves are thoroughly in the hands of their leaders, who have had time to become thoroughly acquainted with all the men under them. The companies, only about 140 strong, are far more manageable and, as a consequence, better adapted for work in our closed and intersected country than the overgrown war strength formation of 250, and the officers present with the colors are all professional, long-service soldiers; there are none of the reservist amateurs.

The advantages of surprise it is almost impossible to overrate. Indeed, it may be doubted whether any French staff officer exists who believes in the possibility of any invasion of this country if time enough be given us to get our fleets to sea; and since it is certain that the French are ready to fight us if we need arises, it follows that their plan of campaign must be based on surprise, and surprise only.

Our great danger lies in the fact that officially we have accepted as aximotic the principle that short service armies must of necessity call up their reserves before taking the field. The Germans did so in 1870, and were successful. The French did not and failed; hence the conclusions industriously fostered by the German military press. The real cause of the French defeat had, however, little to do with this. It lay rather in the complete unreadiness of the French units to take the field for a prolonged campaign a sthey then stood, not in the numerical weakness of the units, and the Germans were very quick to see the point. Within ten years of the conclusion of hostilities they had completed arrangements by which literally every unit in their army could march out and fight within an hour after the receipt of the order in each barracks. It is to test the efficiency of these arrangements that the German Emperor from time to time "alarms" his garrisons, not merely, as people in England appear to imagine, to "show his authority."

READINESS OF FRANCE.

The French have long ago attained an equal degree or readiness, and since they have everything to gain and nothing to lose by moving against us with small handy units thoroughly welded together under officers known to the men and each other, we may reasonably conclude that if a descent on our shores is ever attempted full advantages will be taken of this readiness for immediate action.

Of one thing we may be certain; when the time comes there will be no previous concentration of army corps at Chartres or elsewhere. To mass troops around a railway centre is not the way to facilitate a rapid movement to the coast line; to do so would be about as sensible as to attempt to forward the wholeholiday traffic from Waterloo from a single platform at the same time. The actual distribution of the troops in peace is already calculated to guarantee the greatest rapidity to transport in any required direction; to alter it just before the outbreak of hostilities would require a thorough reconstruction of all the existing railway time tables, the very last piece of folly the the French staff is likely to be guilty of after the lessons of 1870.

Unfortunately our existing arrangements are not disigned to meet this sudden danger, and the French staff can calculate with perfect precision the numbers our system of roads and railways will show us to place in their path between London and the sea, and the result is not enough to inspire them with respect. If our troops were so distributed in peace that, no matter how suddenly the attack was made upon us, even 80,000 men could be massed in time, some thirty miles south of London, this line of least resistance would be closed and even the maddest Frenchman cease from contemplating invasion.

A SHORT SESSION

OF PETERBORO'S CIVIC FATHERS HELD LAST NIGHT.

Two Letters From the Town Solicitor re Stone Borrowed by the Dickson Company Referred to the Board of Works.—Wm. Langford's Tender for Bridge Construction on Reid Street Accepted.

Council convened at eight o'clock last evening, when there were present Mayor Kendry and Aldermen Corkery, Weir, Sawyer, Clinkscale, Robertson and Denne.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Rev. H. Symonds, inviting Council to attend the Harvest Festival at St. Luke's church, Ashburnham, Thursday September 27th.—Moved that the invitation be accepted.

From Edmison & Dickson, claiming suitable compensation to Mr. Thomas Paterson for injuries sustained by him through walking into an excavation on Simcoe street, at or near its intersection with Downie street on the night of Saturday, 15th inst., said excavation not being properly protected or guarded.—Referred to Town Solicitor.

From Health Officer, Dr. Bingham, drawing attention to the pressing need there is for an ambulance in town, to avoid the present dangerous practice of carrying fever-stricken patients tot he hospital in public hacks.—Referred to Finance Committee.

From F. Bartlett, applying for position as inspector for the construction of bridges.—Received.

From J. W. Bennet, Secretary of St. Paul's church, notifying Council that the electric pole on the church corner is a continual nuisance to the congregation in entering and leaving the church, and asking for its immediate removal from that corner.—Referred to Fire, Water & Light Committee with power to act.

From Dr. Bell, asking for remission of his income tax, he being no longer a resident of the town.—Referred to Court of Revision.

From Town Solicitor as follows—Gentlemen.—I have your letter oft he 11th inst., enclosing copy of a resolution as to the stone borrowed by the Dickson Company, and report of the Town Engineer with a statement of the cost of building the new bridge on London street made by the Dickson Company. Mr. Richard Hall called upon me with reference to this matter, and informed me that the Company does not dispute their liability to pay for the stone, although there is a difference of a couple of yards between his account and that of the Town Engineer. He claims, however, that there was an agreement, which was not reduced to writing, between a Committee of the Town Council and the late T. G. Hazlitt, that if the Dickson Company would build a bridge on London street of the extra width required for public travel over and above the requirements of their enlarged canal, the town would bear a portion of the cost. Mr. Hall states that the cost of the bridge was $3,928.87, without counting any portion of the cost of the work connected with the raceway, and he claims that the town should pay $1,300 of this amount, and upon this being agreed to he is willing that the cost of the stone should be deducted from this amount.

Some years ago the question of the bridge on London street was referred to me by the Council, and I was then unable to secure evidence to show that it was in fact a public bridge or part of a public highway. The Dickson Company at that time declined to acknowledge that the road at this point, or the road along the bank of the canal from London street to Hunter street was a public highway. Mr. Hall now states that the road at the end of London street and the road from London to Hunter street are and always have been public highways, and that he Company is prepared to make this quite clear. Mr. Hall suggests that a Committee of the Council, with power to deal with the matter, should be called, and that he should have an opportunity of establishing before them the position be taken as to the agreement to rebuild the bridge.

I think it would be well to comply with Mr. Hall's request, and would suggest that upon going into the matter, the whole question of the position of the roads as public highways, together with the liability for the future maintenance of the various bridges across the openings made by the Company should be definitely settled.

In a later letter, Mr. Edwards says—Referring to my letter as to the claim of the town against the Dickson Company for stone, I think there is no doubt that the town is entitled to collect the amount from the Company by action if necessary. But if the Dickson Company be served, they would doubtless set up a counter claim for the money expended by them in building the bridge. The whole question would therefore come before a court, and it is on this account I deemed it advisable to have the matter enquired into before going into court.

62 DAYS ALONE ON THE OCEAN

Sustained by Grape-Nuts Food.

Captain Blackburn who sailed from Gloucester, Mass., in a small boat 29 feet over all, for Gloucester, Eng., in June, 1899, carried with him, by order of his Doctor, a variety of different foods, also a little oil stove to prepare them. Conspicuous among these foods the doctor named Grape-Nuts.

When Capt. Blackburn got to sea, the weather was so stormy, and the water rough, that he was compelled to stay at the wheel the most of the time and was unable to run his stove and prepare food. He subsisted almost entirely on Grape-Nuts food which is ready cooked and which he poured directly from the little boxes into his hand or mouth.

Although weakened by the continued drenching, fatigue, and exposure, he made the voyage successfully, which his physician says would have been well-nigh impossible, and probably entirely impossible, but for Grape-Nuts food. Having found Grape-Nuts food so wonderful in its invigorating and nourishing effects, the captain, upon his return, acting on the advice of his physician, continued the use of the food, steadily gaining in health and strength.

Capt. Blackburn and the physician, whose name is omitted as a professional courtesy (a well-known doctor in Gloucester, whose name can be given upon application to the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.,) look upon Grape-Nuts as the most perfect form of food known, and especially applicable to the use of those who are subjected to long continued exertions, fatigue, and exposure.

INDIAN UPRISING.

Serious Outbreak Against Settlers in Colorado Threatened.

Denver, Col., Sept. 22.—An Indian outbreak is threatened in San Miguel county, Colorado, according to a dispatch received by Gov. Thomas.

The Governor sent a telegram to the Secretary of the Interior demanding that steps be taken to protect the settlers. The nearest troops are at Fort Duchesne, Utah, 100 miles from Cedar.

Valuable Contribution.

Mrs. T. G. Hazlitt recently presented the Historical Society with two very valuable curios consisting of a rifle and a spear from the Soudan. The relics were brought home by one of the Canadian Voyageurs, and were presented by him to the late Mr. Hazlitt. The rifle was one which was carried through the campaign and the spear was picked up on the spot where General Earle was killed.

SERIOUS DISTURBANCES NEAR CANTON

The District Around Pekin Becoming Somewhat More Peaceable.

DOWAGER EMPRESS BUILDING A NEW PALACE

But It is Well Out of Reach of the Allies—Li Hung Chang on His Way to Pekin—Execution of the Dowager Discussed.

(Special to The Times.)

Berlin, Sept. 21.—The German Foreign Office has received replies from Italy, Austria and France agreeing without reserve to Germany's proposal. Count Von Waldersee has arrived at Woo Sung and will proceed to Niao Chou to-morrow.

(Special to The Times.)

London, Sept. 21.—The outbreak of disorders in the neighborhood of Canton, Southern China, the report of General Chaffee that the country around Pekin is becoming more peaceful and the statement that the Chinese Emperor and Dowager are at Tia Yuan Fu, and have issued orders for the transferance of the capital to Hsian Fu. These are the three most important announcements made this morning, with regard to affairs in China. As to the uprising near Canton, it appears to be of a somewhat serious nature, seeing that the first attempt to suppress it failed, necessitating a second expedition, which is about to start out. The fact that the district around Pekin is becoming quieter proves nothing, unless it is that the Boxers have retreated beyond the small radius within which the allied troops can act with Pekin as base. The revolutionists are doubtless acting with their usual vigor is districts far beyond the reach of European troops, who must follow them all over China if any result is to be attained. Not the least singificant item is that regarding the future intentions of the Imperial court. The Dowager, it seems certain, is too shrewd to trust himself within reach of the allies, who would be quite justified in treating her as a murderess. She does not intend to run any risks, and will remove her capitial to the heart of China, taking with her the docile and imporent Emperor Li Hung Chang may be expected at Pekin in a very short time, when something definite as to the negotiations will be announced. So far the Chinese have succeeded admirably in throwing dust in the eyes of the Westerns, and delaying any action which might result seriously to China. How soon the allies will recognize this fact and adopt a strong policy remains to be seen. Meanwhile the deadlock remains.

DISORDERS IN SOUTHERN CHINA.

Paris, Sept. 21.—The French Consul at Canton telegraphs under date of Thursday, September 20, that disorders have broken out at Sun Tai near Canton. Several villages have been troyed and others are besieged. The missionaries succeeded in escaping. The first batch of troops sent by the Viceroy proved powerless to subdue the disorder, and the foreign consuls made a most urgent request for the despatch of a larger body of soldiers. The chancellor of the French consulate and the French gunboat Avalanche will accompany the force.

COUNTRY GROWING QUIETER.

Washington, Sept. 21.—The following despatch received at the War Department yesterday from General Chaffee was made public this morning.

"Taku, no date. Adjutant-General Washington.

"Pekin Sept. 19.—Rockhill, Wilson expedition returned; object successfully accomplished; no casualties our troops. Forsythe's squadron scouted northeast 40 miles to relieve native Christians, returning bringing in 14. Surrounding country daily growing less hostile and more peaceful, so far as my expedition can determine questions. (Signed) Chaffee."

The date of this cablegram (Pekin, Sept. 19,) shows that close communication has been established with the Chinese capital.

Berlin, Sept. 21.—The Lokal Anzeiger's Shanghai correspondent cables that the allies to-day captured the Peitang and Lui-Tui forts with great losses.

The Tien Tsin correspondent of The Daily Mail, referring to the attack on the Peitang and Lu Tai forts, already captured by the allies, after heavy losses, according to advices received at Berlin says.

"The surrender of the forts was demanded at 2 o'clock on Tuesday with the threat of immediate attack by the Germans and Russians in the event of refusal."

A FEW IRRECONCILABLES

(Special to The Times.)

London, Sept. 21.—The War Office gave out the following despatch from Lord Roberts this evening—"Watervalboven, Thursday, Sept. 20.—Pole-Carew reached Koopwunden yesterday. Practically there was no road and a way had to be cut through jungles and ravines. He captured 33 cars of flour, one car of coffee and 19 damaged engines at Watervalonder.

"Yesterday evening Lieut. E. W. Clarke was shot, but not fatally by a sentry, while making the rounds. He either did not hear the sentry's challenge or the sentry did not hear his reply."

London, Sept. 21.—According to General Roberts, the Boers have come to such straits that all except the bitterest Anglophobes among them have left the field. General Delarey finds it so difficult to hold his commando together that he had three hundred of them laid by the heels in his laager, force being the only method by which they can be compelled to fight. "Out of the irreconcilables left in the Boer ranks it should not be difficult, however, for the Transvaal generals to continue guerilla tactics for some time, for the irreconcilable is the true guerilla. It is interesting to note that Great Britain has practically declared that she has no desire to capture President Kruger, and is quite willing for him to be conveyed to Holland on a Dutch warship. This is a step which will save her Majesty's Government much futher embarrassment. The ill-timed protest of The Standard is difficult to explain, seeing that it was not only contrary to courtesy but also to the polocy of the Government which The Standard supports.

BOERS ARE FORCED TO FIGHT.

London, Sept. 21.—Further reports from Lord Roberts say the Boers who remain in the field include a few irreconsilables, but that the majority are fighting under compulsion. General Delarey, it is added, holds three hundred burghers as prisoners in his laager.

IN THE ORANGE RIVER COLONY.

London, Sept. 21.—Lord Roberts reports from Nelspruit, under date of Sept. 19.

"Rundle attacked the enemy on Sept. 18 from Bronkhorstfontein, and captured one gun and 30 wagons. Knox overtook the rear guard at Klompjesdoorns His only casualty was one wounded. Hart is moving successfully against another band near Potchefstroom. Hildyard has arrived at Greotviel, 16 miles southeast of Utrecht, and has taken three prisoners without opposition.

"Two BBritish officers who were captured at Cyphergat recently were released on Sept. 11, and reached Bloemfontein on the 16."

ADVANCE IN LUMBER.

Ontario Lumbermen Expect a Big Shortage and Raise Prices Accordingly

The lumbermen's association of Ontario has decided to maintain the present prices of lumber and a statement has been issued that the retail stocks on both sides of the line are lower than ever reached for a number of years and that while the demand may be delayed through political agitation it will come later, and the conclusion reached a ta previous meeting that there was a shortage of 240,000,000 feet is more than confirmed and it is now quite apparent that here is fully 300,000,000 feet of a shortage in the Georgian Bay, including Eastern Michigan points, and the output oft he mills of Eastern Michigan.

Further, it was pointed outt hat the demand from the English market was active and likely to increase. That the condition was never more favorable for an advance in price than at present. This applies to the Minnesota and Wisconsin districts as well as to Michigan and Ontario.

The Peterborough lumbermen are operating largely this year in the woods—especially the Dickson Co., who will have a large force in their winter camps.

Inspected the Asylum.

Orillia News-Letter.—Hon. J. R. Stratton, Provincial Secretary, and Mr. Jos. Noxon, Inspector of Asylums and Public Institutes, visited Orillia on Monday and inspected the asylum. Accompanied by a number of citizens they drove out in the afternoon and were shown over the buildings and grounds. In the evening a banquet was held in the dining hall of the asylum in honor of the occasion and a most enjoyable time was spent. It was a decidedly social function, politics being tabooed. The town people present were Messrs. H. T. Blackstone, H. Cooke, W. S. Frost, J. McKay, Ingles Grant, Adam Anderson, Geo. Hagley and Dr. Beaton and McLean. The guests of the evening were toasted and short talks and speeches were made. Mr. Stratton, in referring to the asylum, expressed himself as well pleased with the way in which the place was being conducted and classed it as one oft he cleanest public instutitions in the province. Yesterday Messrs. Stratton and Noxon visited Penetanguishene to inspect the penitentiary there.

Found Dead in Bed.

A despatch was received yesterday from St. John's, N.B., stating that Mr. W. B. McCubbin, representing the Metallic Roofing Company, of Toronto, was found dead in bed at the Commercial Hotel, Campbellton, N.B., through heart disease. Deceased was a resident of Ashburnham, his home being on Stewart street. The family moved here from Montreal about four years ago. He was a brother of Mr. M. T. Dixtin, of Ashburnham, was about 48 years of age, and leaves a wife and two children. Interment will take place in Montreal.

THE MISSIONARIES IN CHINA.

While the diplomats are straightening out the political tangle at Pekin the missionaries have their own problems to solve. On the one hand, they must consider the danger of further provoking fanatical hatred by their presence in China, and on the other they cannot forget the responsibilities they have incurred as regards the unfortunate native converts. The Rev. Dr. H. H. Lowry, President of the Pekin University, is one of the few Methodist missionaries who will solve the problem by returning at once to China. In passing through Chicago on his way to the Pacific he stated the situation in an interview printed in the Northwestern Christian Advocate. While nearly all the missionaries agree that it would be unwise to push their work into prominence under present conditions, it is conceded that there is some work which demands attention. Many of the native christians, where they have escaped massacre, have lost everything, and are in destitution. Until it is safe for them to return to their homes and occupations they will have to be helped, or they will die of starvation. The missionaries naturally feel responsible in such cases, and for them the question "What next?" must be answered in some way that will not imply the entire desertion of the native Christians. Dr. Lowry believes that the foreign schools should be reopened without delay. He reasons that the new China, which will evolve out of the present disorder will make large demands for educated men. No settlement of the Chinese situation by the powers will prove satisfactory unless it provides for the security both of native Christians and of foreign schools. They will be protected by the Chinese government if it is made clearly to understand that they must be protected.

The proposal to evacuate Pekin appears to have been rejected by Great Britain chiefly because it emanated from Russia. Britain takes no chances with "the bear that walks like a man."

SCYTHE IN THE PINE TREE.

A Curious Reminder of the Son's Going to the War, Never to Return.

Thirty-eight years ago young Augustus Bliss, of Warwick, quit cutting brush on his father's farm, hung his scythe on a pine tree and went off to war. The soldier boy never came back, and the scythe has never been taken down from the tree where he hung it, but has become imbedded in the growing pine until it is a fixture. This pathetic reminder of the great civil struggle is a familiar sight to members of the Shoomet Club of this city, as the tree stands near the club's comfortable quarters in Blissville, a hamlet just across the North Orange line into Warwick.

When young Augustus Bliss left home and parents, to fight his country's battles, Blissville was a busy centre of small industries, traces of which remain to tell the story of the shifting of the scene of manufacturing from the small country hamlet to large centres. The tree has witnessed all these changes, has seen the mill standing near slowly falling into decay, the population changing, but still the scythe hangs there, summer and winter, a mute testimonial to the devotion to duty that animated young Bliss. His father, Milton Bliss, was engaged in building the dam standing by, and sent his son to cut some briers that were in the way of stone that were needed. After the briers were cut the scythe was hung on a small pine tree near, probably without a thought of how long it would remain there.

In a day or two Augustus Bliss went to the front, having enlisted for a three years' term of service in the army some time previous. The young soldier never came back. He was but eighteen years old when he enlisted, August 4, 1862, in Company H, Thirty-sixth Massachusetts Regiment. While with his regiment in the South, he was overtaken by a fatal disease and died in an army hospital at Mildale, Miss. The circumstances of his contracting disease were very sad. He had gone to get water for his comrades, and his company had orders to march while he was gone. He tried to overtake them, and the over-exertion was more than he could stand, and he was taken ill with fever before he had been in battle. He was not brought home for burial, but his name is on the roll of honor on the soldiers' monument at Orange.

In all these years no one has meddled with the scythe. It has hung there a symbol and visible reminder to his father of his son's devotion to duty. As the tree grew, the scythe has become embedded in the wood, until it is a part of the tree. The snath, which has been forced off the scythe by the growing tree, is supported in its original position by a small framework. The woodwork of the tholes has yielded to the action of the elements and fallen away. Around the tree, which is probably a little over a foot in diameter at its base, has been erected a railing.—Springfield Republican.

The Man Who Does Not Hurry.

Many evils in this life come from undue haste in the morning. A Roman gentleman of excellent family and large income killed himself because as he left word, he was "tired of doing the same things." Think of the hideous monotony of morning life. You stretch yourself in bed and yawn; a sense of duty drags you out, just as in earlier years a chapel bell summoned you at school to early and shivering prayers. You poke your feet into slippers. Bath, the operation of shaving, a quick decision as to the necessity of a change in underclothes or linen, then a rush into clothes, as though you were a fireman in active service. You gobble breakfast and a newspaper, there is a wild scramble for a street car, there is suspension from a strap, and you are at the office with a dash of shaving soap close to an ear and biscuit crumbs on your mustache. And for what?

The body is too fine a thing to be treated in haste. We know a man, and we think of him now with reverence, who snaps fingers at conventional duty. He snoozes after he has had eight or nine hours of sleep. After he has made ready his bath he lies down again to recover from the exertion. He then puts a Scotch cap on his head—association of ideas, for he drank Scotch the night before—gets into the tub, where he soaks for fifteen or twenty minutes, and reads a novel. Then in bath-robe he drinks two or three glasses of water and eats a sliced orange. He shaves himself as carefully and slowly as though he were about to be hanged. He then examines his stock of shirts, which leads him to a study of the methods pursued in a modern "American hand laundry." He chooses a cravat to suit the sky and the temperature of the day. About an hour and a half after he parted from sleep he consumes a cup of coffee and a roll. Finally he saunters toward the street corner, and there he waits until he sees a car with empty seats. Do you call him lazy? He has all eternity before him. And we claim that this man is better prepared to meet the problems of the day than you, who are complimented when some one describes you as a hustler. It is true that if the deliberate one is working for others they may not appreciate his deliberation; they may discharge him. But this is a mere detail. Others will gladly hire him at a princely salary.

Unpreparedness.

"The enemy is in motion," he cries, "but it is impossible to decide whether he advances or retreats!"

Again the sickening unpreparedness of the war office, which should have provided charts of the Boer trouser, enabling the strategists at the front to determine at a glance in which direction any person wearing this garment was proceeding.

What the Gentleman Said

Mrs. Crimsonbeak—Did you say that Miss Decolleta was the best dressed woman at the opera?"

Mr. Crimsonbeak—No. I didn't say exactly that. What I did say was that she outstripped all the others.

Special Meetings.

The Peterboro branch of the Salvation army are to have special meetings all day Sunday, Sept. 23rd. Brigadier J. S. Pugmire, of Montreal is visiting on that date, and will give his famous lecture "Sixty Thousand Miles by Land and Sea" at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. This lecture touches on the pathetic as well as the humorous incidents met with during travel, and is a treat seldom equalled. Everyone is invited. The Brigadier will also conduct meetings at 11 a.m., and 7 p.m. Come.

Hopeless and Helpless.

The consequences of a diseased condition of the stomach and digestive and nutritive system are most disastrous to the whole body. One by one every organ may become involved. The misery is maddening. The most extreme cases of "stomach trouble" and the evils resulting from it have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood and builds up the body with sound healthy flesh.

"I was taken with severe headache," writes Thomas A. Swarts, Box 103, Sub-Station C, Columbus, Ohio, then cramps in the stomach, and my food would not digest, then kidney and liver trouble, and my back got weak so I could scarcely get around. I just gave money to the doctors whenever I thought they would do me any good, but the more I doctored the worse I got until six years passed. I had become so poorly I could only walk in the house by the aid of chair, and I got so thin I had given up to die, thinking that I could not be cured. Then I saw one of my neighbor boys and he said, 'Take my advice and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and make a new man out of yourself.' The first bottle helped me so I thought I would get another, and after I had taken eight bottles in about six weeks I was weighed and found I had gained twenty-seven (27) pounds. I have done more hard work in the past eleven months than I did in two years before, and I am as stout and healthy to-day, I think, as I ever was."

ONE CENT A YEAR

Is the Salary That Frank Lynch Will Receive From the Government.

Iowa County, Wisconsin, lays claim to having the lowest-salaried official in the employ of the United States Government. The Government hires Frank Lynch for 1 cent a year to carry the mail between Dodgeville, the county seat of Iowa County, and Mineral Point, nine miles distant.

It is the law that such employes shall be paid quarterly, but Lynch, although he has been carrying the mails regularly since last July, has as yet received no quarters of a cent or check for those amounts. The young man is not looking for any remitances on his salary until next July, when he expects a check for a whole cent. It is supposed this will be the smallest check ever issued by the Government and efforts have already been made to secure possession of it. The mail carrier has received several offers of $15 or $20 for the check, but he has so far warily avoided any definite entanglements.

Both Dodgeville and Mineral Point have railroads, but there is none between the two towns. The trip from one place to the other by rail is so roundabout that it is out of the question, so passengers and mail are driven across country. Whoever has the contract for carrying the mail feels that he is certain of all the passenger trade, for no one has yet had the courage to compete for passenger business with the United States mail carrier. For this reason the transfer of the mail is deemed a valuable privilege.

Every four years the post office department advertises for bids and the contracts to lowest bidders for transfer of mail sack. Last year there was the liveliest competition ever known for the Dodgeville-Mineral Point contract. Several different men signified their intention of going into the contest, and the "talk" was kept up until each bidder knew he would have to go pretty low to get the prize, the man who then held the contract had been receiving about $40 per year for carrying the mail. It is said that when the bids for the new contract were opened in Washington it was found that the three lowest offers for carrying the mail per year were 1 cent, 30 cents and $1.50. Frank Lynch, being the 1 cent bidder, was awarded the contract for four years.

SIDE VIEWS OF LIFE.

As an aid to cutting one's eye-teeth a gold brick is more effective than a rubber ring.

RETIRED.

The ships go by; and one who knew them well
Sits at the close of day, and sits alone

Captain no more! But he remembers yet
The little town in dear old Maryland,
Where first he learned by star and wind and tide
The track of the ocean, and the way of war,
Upon the wave that smote his native land.

Now all is done: a warship rides the bay,
With shining hull and blackened funnels high,
And his old heart leaps at its prisoned side,
For that his boy is there! He minds the time
When little arms were twined upon his neck,
And ears bent low to hear the thrilling tale
Of ships that fought in battles long ago.

He thinks of her who stood beside him then
With shining eyes—the light-house of his heart—
And outward passed, like to a little sail,
That, rocking in the mist, returns no more.

So comes the dusk; he hears the booming gun,
He sees the lowered flag, the night-lamps set;
And watching on the pier he falls asleep,
And dreams of golden anchors far away.

—John J. Meehan, in Leslie's Weekly.

MY DOUBLE DILEMMA.

Thoroughly tired of the pier, the esplanade, and the tennis-court, one afternoon, during my stay at the seaside, I took a solitary ramble round the coast.

With the tall cliffs on one side of me and a vast expanse of ocean on the other, I made my way over sand and shingle, careless of everything save the appearance of my immaculate flannel trousers, until the town of Brinybay was hidden by a chalk promontory, and I found myself alone, or apparently alone, with Nature.

As, however, I approached an irregular mass of rock lying together at the foot of the cliff, a scarlet object appearing above them attracted my attention, and, on nearing the spot, I discovered it was a parasol shading one of the most bewitching girls I had ever beheld in my life—and I have seen a good many.

Comfortably seated on a mossy boulder and deep in the perusal of a yellow-backed volume, she was becomingly attired in a dress of pale pink, and as I passed her I fancied she peeped at me from beneath her shady straw hat; but young men always think that girls notice them, especially when like myself, they are Oxford undergraduates with their college arms emblazoned on the breast of their blue serge jackets.

I had not left this siren very far behind when my progress was suddenly brought to a stop by the sea, which had covered the beach and was lashing the base of the cliff. I at once realised the unpleasant fact that the tide was flowing, and that if I did not speedily retrace my steps, my return to Brinybay would be prevented in the same manner as my advance.

Hastening back, and passing the maiden in pink, who was reading as unconcernedly as ever, I again found my path barred by a sheet of water several yards in width. I was completely shut off from the mainland.

To scale the cliff was utterly impossible, and although I might have resumed my homeward course after wading through the water, I could not have deserted the fair girl near me, who was evidently unconscious of her critical situation. The waves were rapidly advancing towards the rocks among which she was seated, and the seaweed clinging to them told me that at high water they were totally submerged.

Approaching the parasol, I coughed.

"Excuse me," I said, "but the tide is coming in very fast, and, I am afraid, will soon be up here."

"Oh, dear!" she exclaimed, blushing, and hurriedly looking around her. "Oh, dear, how very stupid of me not to notice it; whatever shall I do?"

"The only possible way of getting back," I remarked, as she slowly closed her book and left her seat, "is across this piece of water, but it is rather deep."

In silence she followed me to the spot, and after gazing upon the fast-widening barrier, looked up at me and smiled.

"I think I know how we can overcome the difficulty," I said, "but I hope you won't be offended at my suggestion."

"Oh, no, no," she exclaimed, with a little laugh; "anything as long as I can get out of this horrid fix."

"Then, I believe I could manage to carry you across, if you wouldn't object," I said, after some hesitation.

"Oh, thank you, thank you; I should feel so grateful if you would, so very much obliged."

Throwing off my shoes and socks, and tucking up my immaculate ones, I put the yellow-covered book into one of my capacious pockets, deposited my stick with the scarlet parasol on the bench and gently lifting its fair owner in my arms, in another moment had forded the water and deposited her on terra firma.

She returned with me to Brinybay. Her thanks were overwhelming, and ere long we were chatting together like a couple of old friends.

A proposal I made for taking her mother for a sail in my yacht pleased her more than ever, and when I parted with her near the pier—though ignorant of her name and connection—I thought she was the most charming girl I had met with for a long time.

On arriving at my apartments I found that the yellow-covered volume which she had entrusted to my care was still in my pocket. I opened it and found on the title-page the following: "Bessie Cragg, Sea View Villa, Brinybay."

Not displeased at my discovery, I penned a polite little note to "Miss Cragg"—who was evidently the bewitching possessor of the scarlet parasol—in which, after briefly referring to her book, I had the boldness to fix a day for the proposed yatching expedition.

Next morning I was told that a gentleman desired to speak to me in private. I ordered my landlady to show the visitor in, and forthwith a black-looking man, of middle age, entered my parlor.

"Mr. Lyon, I presume?" he began, eyeing me unpleasantly.

"I am Mr. Lyon; what is it?" I said, annoyed at the stranger's manner.

"What is it?" he sneered; "what is it, indeed young man! What do you mean by sending my wife such stuff as this, and by asking her to accompany you in a yacht, etc., you impertinent fellow?" and he threw my little note to Bessie Cragg on to the table.

"Your wife?" I exclaimed in confusion, "your wife, sir? I think you are in error; I think that you have made a mistake, sir."

"Mistake!" cried the stranger fiercely; "mistake—fiddlesticks. I am Mr. Joseph Cragg, young man, and if ever I catch you insulting my wife with another such billet doux it's ten to one you won't have a chance of repeating the offense!"

I threw myself into a chair and groaned aloud—a pretty ending, forsooth, to the romantic incident of the preceding day.

During the next week I had little bliss; it made me miserable to think that fair and frolicsome Bessie was bound for life to such a wolfish monster as Joseph Cragg.

On reflection, I wondered why she hadn't informed her husband of her adventure by the seaside (for I presumed he was unaware of it,) and why, when she was with me, she had appeared so eager to accept my invitation.

I met Mrs. Cragg several times alone in the town and on the pier, but always passed her without any token of recognition. On one occasion I fancied she smiled faintly at me, but taking no notice of her familiarity, I thought, for a married person, that her behaviour was extremely improper.

Just a week after my eventful ramble round the coast, while strolling listlessly on the esplanade, I was surprised on being accosted by a pleasant-looking old lady who, grasping my hand, exclaimed—

"Are you the gentleman that saved my dear little Marie from being drowned when almost caught by the tide some days ago?"

I was absolutely bewildered, nor was it until I was seated in the gushing old lady's drawing-room conversing with her and her fair grand-daughter Marie—the identical possessor of the scarlet parasol—that an explanation of the whole affair took place.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cragg was a friend of Marie's and had lent her the yellow-backed volume which, on being returned to its original owner, had fallen into the hands of Mr. Cragg.

Without showing either the book or the note to his wife, this gentleman had opened the letter with the above recorded unpleasant result.

It may interest the reader to know that Marie and I took our yachting trip as proposed, and thoroughly enjoyed it, too; but beyond the information contained in the appending newspaper cutting, I cannot furnish further particulars of the consequences of my eventful ramble when, although I eluded the clutches of Neptune, I fell a victim to the snares of Cupid.

How to Read the Tongue.

The perfect tongue is clean, moist, lies loosely in the mouth, is round at the edge and has no prominent papilae.

The tongue may be furred from local cause or from sympathy with the stomach, intestines or liver.

The dry tongue occurs most frequently in fever and indicates a nervous prostration or depression.

A white tongue is diagnostic simply of the feverish condition, with perhaps a sour stomach. When it is moist and yellowish brown it shows disordered digestion. Dry and brown indicates a low state of the system, possibly typhoid.

When the tongue is dry and red and smooth, look out for inflammation, gastic or intestinal.

When the papilae on the end of the tongue are raised and very red it is called a strawberry tongue, and that means scarlet fever.

Sharp pointed red tongue will hint of brain irritation or inflammation, and a yellow coating indicates liver derangement.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap. The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different; we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other [illegible]

Did His "Young Master" a Favor.

A little incident at the police station recently attracted comment from various sources on account of the realistic romance it embodied. An old negro walked into the office and asked in a mild and respectful manner if his "young master," M. C. Goin, was there. He was told that Goin had been fined $2 for being drunk and was on the rock pile. He applied to Mr. Dye, keeper of the rock pile, and had a talk with Goin. The latter was very drunk when arrested and the Recorder fined him $2. He hails from Corinth.

"How much?" asked the old negro, "will you let him out for?"

Mr. Dye replied that $1.75 would purchase his liberty. The old man pulled out a tobacco sack and unloosening the strings got out $2. The young man was released. Being asked why he was interested in the young man the old man said:

"I belonged to his father endurin' the war, and no better man ever lived. When I hear 'em say young marster was in de rock pile I jes' cum up heah ter see him. I'd give my last cent 'foh he shud stay in de prison."

Progress of the Canal

Sections 2 and 3 of the Trent Valley Canal, which have just been contracted for, are 18 miles in length, and when they are completed there will be direct navigation from Orillia to Healey's Falls, a distance of about 150 miles. Between the latter place and Lake Ontario there is still about 15 miles of canal to construct. On sections 2 and 3 there will be ten locks, to overcome the 123 feet difference between Lake Simcoe and Balsam lake. The cost of work in these sections is $1,250,000 and the contract is to be completed inside of two years.

Lindsay Central Fair

Mr. Frank Mason, the well known florist, returned from Lindsay yesterday, where he was a judge of flowers at the Fair in that town. Mr. Mason says that Victoria County farmers and citizens patronize their Agricultural exhibitions both by making exhibits and by attending in person. The Fair in this regard is different from ours, where people have to be coaxed to make exhibits, then in most cases they fail to do so. Our fair, we fear, will never be a success until it is run on different lines.

Result of Early Training.

A boy who used to carry a route for the Hamilton Spectator has been nominated for Senator by the Republicans of the Fourth New York Congressional District. We can beat this. A lad who began life as "devil" in the office of this g. f. j. and who rose to the position of a journeyman printer while in our employ, was a few years ago elected Lieutenant Governor of one of the Western States, and is now, we believe, a candiate for Congress. It's a caution what early training will do.

Buyers Easily Reached.

Business men who have done little advertising would be surprised if they could know how large a proportion of newspaper readers are really interested in "ads." People like to learn facts about almost any business, and do not have to be enticed into reading an advertisement that tells something. How to reach the buyers in a community is no problem to experienced advertisers; the reputable newspaper with the largest circulation is their efficient medium. Everybody reads the Times.

Gets Six Months.

William Jones, who was arrested on the charge of stealing a dozen knives and a fork, from Mr. J. W. Butcher, about a week ago, and who has been awaiting his trial, was found guilty of the charge against him and sentenced to six months in the Central. His defence was that he thought his partner had purchased them but the force of this could not be seen by the Magistrate. Jones is a bad egg.

Harvest Festival.

The annual harvest festival service of All Saints' church took place last night, when the Rev. C. H. Marsh, M.A., of Lindsay, preached an eloquent and interesting sermon. The special music included the harvest hymns, Magnificat by Hawes, Deus Misereatur, by Mannual, and the anthem, "What Shall I render?" by Simper. The church was decorated for the occasion.

BICYCLE ICE TRIP.

Dawson to Skagway, Alaska, by Bicycle.

E. P. Leroy, a newspaper correspondent, was the first one to make the trip successfully from Dawson to Skagway, 550 miles, over the ice, on a bicycle. He was eight days on the way and encountered one of the heaviest snowstorms of the season. He comments on the universal fact that men in the Arctic climate have scurvy and stomach trouble because of poorly cooked food.

He says when he first went to Alaska he had a good stomach, but it finally gave out; and one day in his search for something that a man without an appetite could eat, he came across some packages of Grape-Nuts food. He knew of the food and its value and was willing to pay 1-4 of an ounce of gold dust ($4.00) for one package.

He says—"I can assure you the satisfaction of getting something I could eat and digest without suffering was well worth the price. As soon as it had proven to be just what I wanted, I bought the whole lot, and from that day to this, Grape-Nuts food has constituted my chief article of diet.

"I find that Grape-Nuts is quickly picked up as soon as a new lot comes to camp. There is nothing known that gives the miner and frontiersman the strength, with so little volume, as Grape-Nuts food, and it is always ready for use, being perfectly cooked, and can be eaten dry or with a little cream, milk or water, hot or cold, just as a man likes. I could not have taken any food that would have carried me through my long journey on the ice so well as Grape-Nuts."

"Durability is Better Than Show."

The wealth of the multi-millionaires is not equal to good health. Riches without health are a curse, and yet the rich, the middle classes and the poor alike have, in Hood's Sarsaparilla, a valuable assistant in getting and maintaining perfect health. It never disappoints.

Scrofula—"Three years ago our son, now eleven, had a serious case of scrofula and erysipelas with dreadful sores, discharging and itching constantly. He could not walk. Several physicians did not help for sixteen months. Three months' treatment with Hood's Sarsaparilla made him perfectly well. We are glad to tell others of it." MRS. DAVID LAIRD, Ottawa, Kansas.

Nausea—"Vomiting spells, dizziness and prostration troubled me for years. Had neuralgia, grew weak and could not sleep. My age was against me, but Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me thoroughly. My weight increased from 125 to 143 pounds. I am the mother of nine children. Never felt so well and strong since I was married as I do now." MRS. M. A. WATERS, 1529 33d St., Washington, D. C.

Eczema—"We had to tie the hands of our two year old son on account of eczema on face and limbs. No medicine even helped until we used Hood's Sarsaparilla, which soon cured." MRS. A. VAN WYCK, 123 Montgomery Street, Paterson, N. J.

SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT.

As intimated in our issue of yesterday, Sir Richard Cartwright, Minister of Trade and Commerce, will address the electors of West Peterborough in Bradburn's Opera House, on Wednesday evening, Sept. 26th, in the interests of Mr. J. H. McClellan, the Liberal candidate.

Mr. Peter Hamilton, President of the West Riding Liberal Association, will take the chair at 8 o'clock, and addresses will be delivered by Hon. J. R. Stratton and Mr. McClellan.

Sir Richard is one of the most forcible and logical speakers in Canada, and has long been regarded as the head of the Ontario Liberals in Parliament. He has not spoken in Peterborough for many years, and his appearance here on Wednesday evening will doubtless be taken advantage of by very many.

As usual on such occasions, the gallery will be reserved for ladies.

ECONOMY IS A VIRTUE.

DIAMOND DYES

Will Save Money for Every Home in Canada

When times are hard and dollars scarce, the smart and bright women of our country find that the Diamond Dyes are important helps in economizing. By the use of Diamond Dyes the husband, mother and children can be well and stylishly dressed, although nearly all the clothing may be old material dyed over.

Diamond Dyes make such lasting and beautiful colors that goods dyed with them cannot be told from new. Anyone can use them, as the directions are so plain and simple that no skill is needed. The colors of Diamond Dyes never grow dim; they never fade or wash out. In order to secure the best results in home dyeing, every woman should see that her dealer or merchant gives her the "Diamond Dyes," as other package dyes are only poor imitations.

Rotten Fruit.

The following paragraph from the Kingston Whig has a local application. "The buyers of cheap fruit on Saturday, because it will not keep until Monday, will get a lesson some of these days. There is poison in the damaged fruit, and its consumption is a challenge to disease." There are a lot of people in this city who risk their lives once a week by buying this same sort of fruit. If it would keep till Monday dealers wouldn't almost give it away Saturday night — and if it won't keep twenty-four hours it's not fit to eat.

—THE—

CANADA BUSINESS COLLEGE

Chatham, Ont.

Is doing more for its pupils than any other business school in Canada, or perhaps, than any other in the continent. How can we do this? First.

Second: The business public has learned that there is this vast difference between the graduates of this school and those of other colleges, hence the strong demand for our graduates, which has enabled 230 to be placed in good positions between Sept., '99, and July, '00 a period of ten months.

The good work still goes on, and 72 have been placed between July 1st and Sept. 1st of this year.

ANNOUNCEMENT

To the People of Peterborough and vicinity:

Saturday, September 15th, China Hall was re-opened with a stock which for quality, completeness and variety is unsurpassed in Canada.

During the last six months we have been collecting these goods from every quarter of the globe, and the result will make of China Hall a veritable art gallery.

Added to a full line of staple and domestic wares, we show direct importatians from Egypt, Japan, Austria, France, Germany, Spain, Bohemia, England, America, and last, but not least, from Canada.

This collection comprises the newest styles in Dinner and Tea, Toilet and Salad Sets, Lamps, Cutlery, Silverware, Flower Pots, Cut Glass and Bric-a-bac, including specimens of such reliable wares as Habiland, Doulton, Ridgeway, Wedgewood and Farnival, Royal Bonn, Carlsbad, Satsenna, Awata, Lenura, Yokohama, Terra Cotta, Handengraven Egyptian and Cloisonnee.

Several of these lines are now placed on sale for the first time in Peterborough, and a few of them for the first time in Canada. Amongst these unique pieces may be seen (with a printed guarantee enclosed) a facsimile of the celebrated Portland vase which made Josiah Wedgewood famous.

China Hall in its present form is a model of convenience and beauty, and it has now every facility for the carrying on of an up-to-date trade. A prompt and courteous service may be relied upon, while a cordial welcome is assured to all visitors whether purchasers or not.

For the convenience of customers a cosy waiting room is provided, which we trust may be appreciated to the extent of being used and of becoming a rendezvous for ladies who wish to meet down town.

The accomplishment of all this has been no small task, and it is hoped that the public will take pride in this new store which, without exception is the handsomest of its kind in Canada.

A few words as to our future policy. The business will be conducted upon a cash basis, with one price to all and positively no reduction from the marked figures, which will be as low as is compatible with the character of the goods, our aim being that customers should remember the quality after the price has been forgotten. No article will be represented as being better than it really is. Special attention given to matching and mending.

Thanking our numerous customers for their many expressions of goodwill, and for their adherence to us while in cramped quarters, we shall now take pleasure in welcoming them to our commodious and artistic premises at 360 George-st.

COAL MAY BE $20.00 A TON IN NEW YORK

TWO MEN SUCCUMB TO THE EFFECTS OF FRIGHT

The Coal Fields are Practically in a State of War—Two Thousand Five Hundred Soldiers at Shenandoa—Number of Men Who have Ceased Work.

(Special to The Times.)

Philadelphia, Sept. 22.—If present indications are to be relied upon the strike in the anthracite coal region bids fair to assume a more menacing aspect as days go by. Already the centre of the affected region has become the site for an armed camp of 2,500 troops, whose numbers may in all likelihood be augmented. The district is to all intents and purposes in a state of war, and the first skirmish in the campaign was fought yesterday at Shenandoad resulting, unfortunately, in bloodshed, caused by the undue violence of a portion of the strikers. An estimate has been furnished of the number of men at work and those on strike in the various districts which from the coal fields. In the Scranton region there are usually 33,000men at work, a number which has dwindled to 300. In the anthracite district 200 men out of 11,000 are working; in the Hazleton district 4.000 out of 17,000 are left; in the Shamokin district 13,000 out of 20,000; in the Pottsville district 600 out of 13,000 and in the Mauch district 12,000 out of 20,000. It will be seen, therefore, that out 144,000 colliers 30,300 are at work, and that three districts are almost completely tied up— Spranton, Wilkesbarre and Potteville— while in the remaining three a considerable number of men still remain at work. The effect of the strike is shown on all hands by a rapid increase in the prive of coal in the cities which draw their supply from the coal fields, and it is anticipated that in New York the price may even reach the enormous figure or $20 a ton. With the approach of winter the prospect of a coal famine which stares people in the face is not comforting, though many derive consolation from the certainty that the first really cold weather is likely to have a quick effect upon poorly-provided strikers and send them back to work in short order.

TWENTY DOLLARS A TON.

New York, Sept. 22.—The retail coal dealers in Manhattan and Brooklyn, numbering about 1,500, again took advantage yesterday of the stringency in the coal supply and raised the price about 50 cents a ton. Dealers generally refused to sell more than one ton to each customer, and the price ranged from $6.75 to $8, being regulated by the quantity of coal in the yards. Since the great strike the price has gone up about $2 a ton.

It is predicted by dealers that the price will go up steadily until the stock gets very short, and it would not be surprising to see red ash coal quoted at $15 or $20 a ton.

TWO KILLED, SEVEN WOUNDED.

Shenandoah, Pa., Sept. 22.—A sheriff's posse fired on a crowd of riotous men near here yesterday afternoon, killing two persons and wounded seven others.

Sheriff Toole and Deputies o'Donnell and Breneman wer ecalled to Shenandoah to-day to suppress the mobs that threatened mine-workers and colliery property. At quitting time the three sheriffs had a small posse whom the sheriff had summoned on the ground, went to the Indian Ridge colliery of the Reading Company to escort the working him to their homes. The colliery is located a short distance east of Shenandoah.

The workmen left for home shortly after 4 o'clock. They walked up the middle of East Centre street and reached the Lehigh Valley railroad station. Here they gathered a large crowd of Poles, Slavs and Hungarians, men women and children, who lived both sides of the street. A shot rang out from a saloon. This was followed by a shower of stones. Many of the crowd had picked up sticks and stones and were acting in a threatening manner.

Seeing this, the Sheriff who had previously cautioned his men to keep cool and not to use their firearms, ordered them to fire. The order was obeyed with terrible results. The crowd pursued the sheriff and his posse to the Ferguson house, where they took refuge.

At midnight the 4th, 8th and 12th Regiments, the Governor's troops, and Battery "C" were called out, with Gen. Gobin in command.

ONLY ONE KILLED OUTRIGHT

Shenandoah, Pa., Sept. 22.—It developed this morning that only one person, Mike Yuckavage, was killed outright in last evening's shooting here. Annie Rogers recovered consciousness some hours after the bullet struck her in the back of the neck and was to-day in a fair way of ultimately getting well.

Following the scene of turmoil and riot yesterday, everything was quiet to-day. The Town Council appointed over 300 special policemen to serve during the night, and in consequence everything passed off peaceably. No crowds were permitted to congregate on any of the streets.

Gen. J. P. S. G. Obin, Lieutenant-Governor of the State and commander of the Third Brigade Pennsylvania National Guards, in command of the troops, which arrived here early this morning, made the statement that he would distribute the soldiers between Shenandoah, St. Nicholas, Mohanoy City and other points after he had looked over the field.

Edward Clark, who was shot below the heart, had a remarkable escape, the bullet having been extracted, and he is improving to-day. He had gone into the street to take his children out of the way when he received the wound.

All collieries around Shenandoah, Lost Creek and William Penn were closed down. Not a mine in the region was working to-day.

The deputies who were with Sheriff Toole last evening and did the shooting were all selected from the best citizens of Shenandoah, and the report that they were the scum of the country is untrue. They were forty in number.

OVER TWO THOUSAND MEN.

Shenandoah, Pa., Sept. 22.—All was quiet here up to 9 a.m. Troops began arriving soon after daylight and soon about 2,500 soldiers were on the ground Saloons are all closed and martial law prevails. The collieries are idle, having been closed by the Reading Company at the request of Sheriff Toole in order to avert trouble.

FRIGHTENED TO DEATH.

Henry Knopski, a slate picker, employed at Coleraine, was literally frightened to death. He met a picket on his way homefrom work and he was warned that he woule be killed unless he joined in the strike. He started to run, and as he reached his door he fell dead.

At one of the culm banks near Scranton, the Bellevue, Frank Mangan was gathering coal along with a crowd of others. Suddenly some one shouted. "The watchmen are coming!" and there was a hurry to get away. In the fright of the moment Mangan fell and died on the edge of the dump.

WEATHER NOTES.

The weather has been showery in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, and scattered showers have occurred elsewhere. No strong winds are at present indicated, the general outlook being for fair weather.

A Clever Young Lady.

The Times is pleased to notice in the list of recent appointments to the teaching staff of the Royal Victoria College, the name of Miss Violetta Miss Dover has been appointed rutor in Dover has been appointedtutor in chemistry. She received her B. A. degree from McGill in 1898, and since then has pursued a course of study in science, receiving the Master's Degree (M. Sc.,)last April. She has the honour of being the first lady student to receive that degree at McGill.

BOERS ROUTED BY LORD METHUEN

Fifteen-Pounder Lost at Colenso Recaptured.

GEN. HILDYARD AT VRYHEID

Death of Theron the Scout Confirmed by a Prisoner Who Falls into the Hands of Clery

(Special to The Times.)

Lorenzo Marques, Sept. 22.—The British have occupied Komatipoort without opposition.

London, Sept. 22.—The return of Lord Roberts to Pretoria is an indication that the limit of the work in the Transvaal is accomplished and his intimation that the last organized body of Boers in the southern part of the Orange River Colony is broken up shows that a similar fortunate state of affairs is approaching south of the Vaal. It is not likely that any strong force of Boers are in the field in the northern part of the Orange River Colony. If they are they cannot remain under arms much longer, for so great a number of British troops are now freed from serious operations that they can be crushed early. It will not be long, therefore, before the cessation of the war, except so far as unimportant guerilla operations are concerned, and the return of Lord Roberts to England to be feted by a grateful and admiring nation, will be announced.

BRITISH STILL MAKE PROGRESS.

London, Sept. 22.—The following despatch has been received from Lord Roberts—

"Pretoria, Sept. 21.—Methuen completely routed a Boer convoy at Hart River, west of Klerksdorp, and recaptured a fifteen-pounder lost at Colenso. He also captured twenty-six wagons, eight thousand cattle, four thousand sheep, twenty thousand rounds of ammunition and twenty-eight prisoners.

"Hildyard occupied Vryheid Sept. 19, turning out the Boers from a strong position. The British casualties were few.

"Clery has captured a Hollander-American belonging to Theron's scouts, who confirms the report of Theron's death."

POLE-CAREW AT KAAPMUIDEN.

London, Sept. 21.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts—

"Watervalboven, Sept. 20.—Pole-Carew and Henry's Mounted Infantry arrived at Kaapmuiden yesterday morning. The Guards followed in the afternoon. Pole-Carew reports that the country is practically without roads. The troops had to cut their way through jungles intersected by ravines. At the railway station there were thirteen engines, of which eleven were damaged and eight burned. 38 trucks of flour, 27 of coal, 1 of coffee, 4 of machinery and 8 of stationery. Altogether there were 114 trucks. A great deal of flour and coffee had been destroyed. The other damaget o the railway is being gradually repaired. I hope that Pole-Carew will reach Hector Spruit to-morrow. Ian Hamilton is one march behind the guards.

"Pole-Carew captured on September 19 five wagons loaded with rifles and ammunition.

"Kelly-Kenny reports that the Boer concentration at Doornberg is broken. There is now no organized opposition in the southern part of the Orange River Colony.

"Lieut. N. P. Clarke was severely wounded at Watervalonder while making the rounds, through not hearing a sentry, or the sentry not hearing his reply."

WON'T BRING THEM HERE.

Ottawa, Sept. 22.—The officials of the Militia Department do not favor the proposal to take the returning troops to Montreal and Toronto except those who have to pass through those cities en route to their homes. They say it is preposterous to ask the men from the Maritime Provinces, who will naturally be anxious to get home, to make a long detour by way of the upper province cities.

TREASON BILL PASSED.

Cape Town, Sept. 21.—The Treason bill has passed the House of Assembly by a vote of 46 to 35. The clause in the third chapter of the bill, disfranchising convicted rebels for five years, was adopted by a majority of ten on September 19.

TOPS JOHNSTOWN FLOOD.

The Texas Disaster Greater Than That of 1889.

Only 2,142 Lives lost in the Johnstown Flood as Compared With 5,000 by the Texas Disaster.

Galveston, Texas, Sept. 19.—Until the Texas tidal wave and tornado of September 8 claimed approximately 5000 victims and destroyed property valued probbly at $40,000,000, the Johnston flood was the greatest catastrophe of the century in America.

In seven minutes on May 31, 1889, the rush of water from a burst bam wiped out 2142 lives and destroyed $9,674,105 worth of property in the Conemaugh Valley.

Mineral Point, Conemaugh, Woodvale, Johnston, Kernville, Grubtown, Cambria City, Sheriden, Lang Hollow, Nineveh, Conemaugh Furnace and New Florence were all in the path of the flood and suffered terribly.

Of the 2142 dead, there were 1115 found and identified, 636 found and not named, 319 missing, 99 whole families wiped out and 965 children made orphans or half orphans.

The relief fund turned over to the State Commission appointed by Governor Beaver amounted to $2,912,346.30, of which $2,592,930.66 was expended in the valley, $242,475.26 outside the valley and $5728.89 for administration expenses. The sum of $183,281 was distributed among the widows, giving each about $1500, and $108,500 was set apart for the children, each of whom was to receive $50 annually until 16 years of age.

The Pennsylvania Railroad bridge on the west side of Johnstown made a barrier against which the torrent piled everything movable. There were logs, timber, houses, either whole or in fragments, machinery, iron, in all forms, raw material and manufactured every conceivable kind of household utensil and furniture, dead bodies and living persons imprisoned in the houses. Hundreds of miles of barbed wire held the mass together.

Fire broke out in the debris shortly after the flood subsided. It threatened to be a conflagration. Hunbrebs of persons were supposed to be imprisoned in the wreckage. Some were rescued but more were burned, the fierceness of the flames causing a cessation of the rescue efforts.

Philadelphia gave upwards of $500,000 for the relief of the flood sufferers.

RUSSIA ORDERS MASSACRES

(Special to The Times.)

Pekin, Sept. 19, via Taku, Sept. 22.—Mr. William Rockhill, special commissioner of the United States has already conferred with Mr. Conger, the United States Minister, but he has not yet met Prince Ching. It is understood that he will advise Washington to withdraw the American troops as speedily as would be safe. The plan to withdraw the German Legation from Pekin has been temporarily abandoned, pending the receipt of further instructions from Berlin

The Russians report a Boxer demonstration against the railway authorities, and the Germans are discussing an expedition to Pao Ting Fu after the arrival of their main force.

General Chaffee will go to Tien Tsin soon.

BRITISH FORCE TOO LATE.

London, Sept. 24, 3.30 a.m.—According to various accounts of the Peitang affair, the Chinese had anticipated that the allies would attack in force. The Britishers and others who left Pekin with the intention of cutting off the retreat of the Peitang garrison arrived too late. They were only half way to their destination when the forts were captured.

The Tien Tsin correspondent of the Standard explains that the Russians refused to provide trains for this force, but gave the Germans and Austrians ample notice and every accommodation.

Advices to the Standard from Shanghai places the losses of the allies before Peitang, as three hundred, principally due to the explosion of mines, one of which, 300 yards long, exploded like an earthquake, killing and wounding large numbers, and literally blowing two mounted officers to pieces.

Taku, Sept. 20.—Four thousand Russians 3,000 German, and 1,000 French troops, with a detachment of Austrian marines, began the attack upon the Pai Tang forts at daylight. The attack was answered briskly, from the forts, the bombardment continuing until noon, but it was noticed that the forts did not reply after ten o'clock.

The allies sent forward at noon to discover the reason of the cessation of fire, and found them deserted, there being only four dead Chinamen within the walls.

The allies were much chagrined, as they believed they had the place completely surrounded, making escape impossible; yet over 3,000 men got away in broad daylight. The Russian artillery fire has proved effective, and the forts were badly damaged.

The British and Italian commanders had decided to join in the attack, but their troops had not arrived in time.

Three members of the allied forces were killed and fifty were wounded through the explosion of mines laid along their line of march.

TWENTY-FIVE BLOWN UP.

Washington, Sept. 22.—The Navy Department has received the following cablegram from Admiral Remey—

"Taku, Sept. 21.—Force of Russians Germans and Austrians advanced on Peitang forts last night. Fire opened by Chinese last night, and kept up all night at intervals. Forts evacuated at 9 this morning. Europeans hoisted their colors over forts at 11. Twenty-five Russians and Germans reported blown up by mine. Information from Commander Wise, who followed troops into forts. Only five Chinese killed. (Signed) Remey."

BURNED TO DEATH.

Washington, Sept. 21.—An official communication, coming through diplomatic channels, was brought to the attention of the State Department to-day, giving information as to the conditions in the Yang Tse Kiang valley, and also giving detailed and fully authenticated instances of atrocities in the Province of Hunan against Christian missionaries. The account is given by one of the Christian missionaries who escaped, and who makes the report through the officials of the Government now forwarding it to Washington. In one case it is stated a missionary had his eyes burned out, then a portion of his body was cut off, and finally a red hot staff was driven through his back. In another case given in the report, a missionary was wrapped in cotton, the cotton was soaked in oil, and the mass set on fire. The missionary was burned to death.

ORDEERS MASSACRES.

London, Saturday, Sept 22.—The Moscow correspondent of the Standard says that massacres like that at Blagoveschensk are in another form the order of the day with the Russian troops, who are overrunning Manchuria. These orders emanate from General Grandkey, who must have higher authority. The correspondent adds that the Czar is doubtless ignorant of the orders that have been issued. He further says that his informant has seen a series of telegrams from the officer commanding in Manchuria, every one of which contain the words, "I beseech to be allowed to spare peaceable citizens." The correspondent contrasts the actions of the Russians in Manchuria with the noted humanity of Admiral Alexieff, who is acting in concert with the powers, and suggests that Russia is playing a double game, issuing different orders in Pechili and Manchuria.

PEI-TA-CHU TAKEN.

Pekin, Sept. 20, via Taku, Sept. 22.—General James H. Wilson, the American commander, took Pei-Ta-Chu this morning. No details of the affair have been learned, but the British officials have received a despatch announcing that "the temples were taken according to arrangement."

It is expected that General Wilson will move on San-Hai-Tien (San-Kia-Tien) and destroy the Chinese arsenal at the place.

The Germans moved westward to-day, and it is doubtful if they co-operated in the taking of Pei-Ta-Chu. Japanese scouts report that the surrounding country is free of the enemy.

No word has been received from the 6th United States Cavalry column, which is operating in the northeast.

GERMANY'S NOTE.

Berlin, Sept. 21.—From all the news that has arrived here, it seems that Germany's proposition is finding a favorable reception among the powers. A Foreign Office official said this afternoon—

"We hear from Washington that no official expression regarding the German note has thus far been made, but that the note has produced a favorable impression there. Several answers have already been received, but no information about them can be given out now, except the general statement that the reception of the note has been everywhere favorable.

CHINESE PIRATES.

Hong Kong, Sept. 21.—The French warship Avalanche, which has been investigating the killing of Christians in the Samnoi district, near Canton, reports that the crews of eight pirate junks, by the connivance of influential persons ashore, have sought to destroy all the Christian villages on the Canton delta.

SALISBURY CHARGED WITH UNFAIRNESS

Old Register is Expiring and Those who did not Register Before '98 are Disfranchised

BOMB THROWN INTO THE CONSERVATIVE CAMP.

Allegation that the Wife, Sons and Daughters of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain are Interested in a Firm of Admiralty Contractors —He Calls it a Cowardly Insinuation.

(Special to The Times.)

London, Sept. 22.—The political campaign has commenced in earnest. Only another week remains before the polling begins and it will be only a little over five weeks before the new parliament assembles. That it will be a Conservative body is a foregone conclusion. Mr. Herbert Gladstone admits that it is quite impossible for the Liberals to win over the 160 seats necessary to give them a victory, thus from the outset the election loses its interest, practically resolving itself into an opportunity for politicians on both sides to air their views and to discuss the momentous issues of the last year untrammelled by the conventionalities of St. Stephens. This outbreak of oratory, judged from the initial stages, promises to develop no new or startling facts. The Conservatives confine their energies to a defence of the war in South Africa, and of its management; while the Liberals attempt to ignore it, concentrating their attacks upon the failure of the Conservative to fulfil the promises of benefical home legislation. Though this is officially the Liberal's main plank, the division of their ranks over the war is so great that it is quite impossible to keep all the candidates in line. Thus while Sir Edward Grey and the Right Hon. H. H. Asquith and others are telling the voters that is useless to discuss the war and are admitting that he annexation of the Boer Republics is the only logical outcome, Mr. Morley and other well known members of the party are telling them that the war was unnecessary and that he annexetion of the Republics is a blot on England's fair name. On one point, however, the Liberals all unite; and that point is the unfairness of Lord Salisbury in bringing about a dissolution at the present moment when the register of 1898 is expiring, so that all who were no tregistered over two years ago are disenfranchised. The new register comes into force in February. Thousands are affected and the Liberals maintain that Lord Salisbury's action is not only without precedant, but it is unconstitutional. Ont the other hand, the Conservatives claim that Lord Salisbury acted fairely, as had he waited until after February he would have the undoubted advantage of the votes of soldiers returning from South Africa. In their wrath that the election was precipitated with so little warning, the Liberals are not alone. Business men regardless of party, are furious over the disintegration of trade which always accompanies election contests. Publishers, for instance, after a wretched year, seeing the war in South Africa ending and affairs in China becoming more qiescent, made all preparations for a revival of trade. Just as they were beginning to put new books out, but the announcment of the dissolution of Parliament come like a thunderbolt, spoiling all their prospects. The Stock Exchange on the same grounds has a great grievance against Lord Salisbury, as it will be well into December before the public can be expected to take a keen interest in stocks.

The question of home rule, except in Ireland, is scarcely mentioned. Mr. Herbert Gladstone, who represents West Leeds, advices his constituents to let the matter rest; but the Earl of Sandwick strikes a much franker note in renouncing his adherence to the Government and returning to the ranks of the Liberals, because "Home Rule is dead.."

A miniature bomb has been thrown into the Conservative camp by the Liberal Morning Leader, which publishes a lengthy story showing that wife, sons and daughter of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the Secretary of State for thee Colonies, hold almost all the shares of the firm of Hoskins Sons, contractors to the Admiralty. Among the sons holding large amounts of the stock is Mr. J. Austen Chamberlain (the eldest son of the Secretary), who is a civil lord of the Admiralty. To put a worse complexion on the matter, it is pointed out that there are no Hoskins now connected with the business, which is practically a family concern, apparently prosperous. The only answer so far vouchsafed to the accusations is a letter from Mr. Chamberlain's secretary saying the Minister is not disposed to "notice the cowardly insinuations contained in an indirect charge.' Rumor assigns the War Minister to Mr. Chamberlain in the new Cabinet, the supposition being that the Marquis of Lansdowne will retire, and also that Mr. Chamberlain will then have Lord Roberts as commander-in-chief and Lord Kitchener as adjutant-general. Earl Halsbury, the Lord High Chancellor; Earl Cadogan, the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; Viscount Cross, the Lord Privy Seal; and Mr. William Court Gully, the Speaker of the House of Commons, are all said to be likely to retire.

The Retreat From Cape Nome.

"It is either a beach of gold two hundred miles long, the greatest placer gold field in the world, or the greatest disappointment of modern times." This was the statement of an officer of the Government who returned from Cape Nome about a year ago with tidings of what was then believed to be a discovery even more important than that of the finding of gold in California. That and other glowing reports, made too late in the year to enable gold-seekers to organize parties to prospect and work the fields, at once led to an abandonment of the Dawson mines, the employment of all land and sea conveyances that would carry adventurers toward Cape Nome, and an excitement on the Pacific Coast that was but an exaggeration of the interest manifested in the earlier discoveries on the Yukon.

The latest reports from Cape Nome are saddening. It had been expected that by crowding every vessel, steam or sail, going north from Pacific Coast ports, 25,000 persons could be landed on the golden shore in time to begin working out their fortunes right on the beach. The utter barrenness and unproductiveness of the country led many speculators to send forward vast quantities of provisions and clothing to be sold at enormous advances, and building material, general stocks in trade, and even some articles of luxury found their way to the Far North.

The disappointment has been profound. There was and is gold at Cape Nome, but the two hundred miles of golden beach was soon found to be a conjecture instead of a discovery greater than that of the California placer and quartz mines. The costly dredging machines that were taken to the cape to be used in taking out supposedly rich deposits to be found beyond the beach have not taken out an ounce of gold. The invested money may never earn enough to pay the bills for getting the dredges so far away from home, and it is not likely that it will pay to have them brought back. United States transports have brought away many penniless people. All told, something like 10,000 persons are estimated to have quit the diggings since Summer opened and 5,000 others are anxious to follow.

The "rush" to Nome has ceased. Now, when even bars cannot make money, when gambling does not flourish, when provisions have dropped in price to Seattle figures, when miners' outfits go a-begging, and only outgoing transportation remains high, pretty nearly the entire "busted" element has shifted to more inviting pastures, leaving many claimants and one or more lawsuits for each claimant. There remains a class still confident that Cape Nome will prove to be a great mining section, that it is better off for having had its "black eye" in the States, and that it will no more disappear than Dawson, which, with a similar experience, yet survives.

There are still some visionary men at Cape Nome. It is related by a correspondent that owners of small vessels have done some business in transporting those who are from time to time allured by reports of fabulous discoveries at more or less distant points, but the mind of the average Cape Nome adventurer is hardened against those reports, and there is no new rush. A harbor full of wrecks, caused by the lack of holding ground for anchors, perpetually reminds the philosophic adventurer of the danger of following a will o' the wisp. The lesson for these and observers is that learned by the thousands who have returned home as guests of the United States—that there is more wealth to be gained by downright every-day plugging at some matter-of-fact business that can be picked up on golden beaches.

AMERICA

Did Not Derive its Name From Amerig Vespucci.

That America derives its name from Amerigo Vespucci has long been regarded as a certainty. Now, however a historian comes forward and assures us that this is not the case. This historian is Ricardo Palma, Director of the National Library of Lima, Peru in a book which has just been published he insists that America was not named after Amerigo Vespucci, but that, on the contrary, Amerigo Vespucci was named after America.

Senor Palma, who has studied this subject for years, maintains that Vespucci's first name was Alberico. "The name 'America,'" he says, "is derived from a place in Nicaragua, being the name of a hill in the province of Chanvoles. Furthermore, the penultimate syllable 'ic' is very often found in the words used by the Indians of South America and by the natives of the Antilles. The syllable itself signifies something large and lofty, and is found in the names of non-volcanic mountains."

He further points out that Columbus did not use the word "America" in his letters when he referred to the events of his first voyage. "It is more than probable," he continues, "that he learned through one of his attendants of the discovery of gold by some natives in a place called America. In this way it is likely that the name gradually became known throughout Europe. At that time the only geographical account of the western hemisphere was the one by Alberico Vespucci, which was published in Latin in 1505, and in German in 1506. Geographers presumably came to the conclusion that Alberico had given the name America not merely to a single hill or mountain, but to the entire country.

"When the first map of the continent bearing the title 'Provinre of America,' was published in Barcelona, in 1522, Columbus and his companions were long dead, and there was no one to protest against the misuse of the name. Furthermore, there was no one in all Europe who bore the name Amerigo, and as Vespucci's name was Alberico, geographers and historians would surely have given the new continent this name if they had desired to honor him in this fashion.

"Newly discovered countries were only named after soverigns, as we see in the case of Georgia, Louisiana Maryland and the Philippines, and when explorers did give names to countries they selected those of their own families, as we see in the cast of Vancouver and Magellan. The origin of such places as Columbia, Columbus and Colon can also be clearly traced."

A Machine to Water the Desert.

Several machines have been invented for making the heat of the sun produce steam or electric power, but a Washington man is the first to turn such a device to practical use.

William Calver is now about to set up one of his sun-power machines in Arizona, near Phoenix, and dig wells in the desert. His plan is to make the intense heat of that hottest part of the United States develop the power to pump up water enough to irrigate all the barren land.

Everybody knows what a transformation a little water makes on a desert, producing an oasis of tropical verdure, while all beyond this watered space is desolation and death. It is usually so expensive to drill wells and pump the water on a desert that it does not pay to reclaim the waste land. But, if the overabundance of sunshine on the desert can be utilized the problem is solved.

Mr. Calver's machine consists of a set of big mirrors and lenses, by which he focuses the sun's rays as a boy does with a burning glass. The heat which can be generated by Mr. Calver's machine is said to be equal to a furnace for a 500 horse power boiler.

With such a power as this available wherever one sees fit to set up his plant, it is easy to see how well drilling and water pumping can be done on a large scale. Geologists have found in recent years that our southwestern deserts have almost numberless subterranean streams flowing at depth varying from 25 to 250 feet below the dry, parched surface of the earth. So there need be no lack of water if the borings are intelligently directed.

The amount of arid lands which lie in Arizona, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Texas and Colorado is estimated to be at least five hundred millions of acres. this is rendered useless by the need of water, and the reclamation of this land would add billions of dollars to the wealth of the country.

In many sections of Colorado and other States in which irrigation is used, the best farming lands in the country are those which were formally worthless and are now artificially watered, and the very finest crops in the land are grown there.

Liability for service in the New Zealand militia ranges, in the event of need, from 17 to 55 years.

A Berlin newspaper says that Prussian railway officials have 47,000 different tickets to deal with.

Root and Branch.

Sarah, Duchess of Marlborough, was accustomed to make an annual feast, to which she invited all her relations. At one of these family meetings she drank their health, adding, "What a glorious sight it is to see such a number of branches flourishing from one root!" But observing Jack Spencer laugh, she insisted on knowing what had occasioned his mirth, and promised to forgive him, be it what it would.

"Why, then, madam," said he, "I was thinking how much more the branches would flourish if the root were under ground."

Jiggers and the Soldiers.

One of the most annoying pests of the tropical countries, particularly of the West Indies, which we have taken into Uncle Sam's family, is the jigger. It was one of the afflictions of our army before Santiago, and nearly every soldier who returned from Cuba could tell fearsome tales of the ravages of the dear little thing. True to human nature, as the cynic would say, it is the female which makes trouble for man. She bores with her head into the human skin and stays there. The large quantity of eggs which she takes in with her swell her to the size of a pea, the color being white. This results in a small ulcer which inflames in the course of a few days. If the parasite isn't removed inflammation increases and in the course of it the jigger eliminates itself.

At the beginning the pain is so slight that usually it is not noticed. But the festering would, if not cleaned, as in the case of all neglected wounds, cause serious inflammation, gangrene, and even general blood poisoning. As the jigger lives in the ground, it usually seeks the feet of its victim, so that the mode of prevention and the treatment are easy. Thick boots or high boots are good protection. Peru balsam is rubbed into the socks. As soon as a jigger is noticed it should be removed with the greatest care. The wound should be cleaned out and if kept clean it usually heals quickly. If, in the removing of the jigger, the parasite is lacerated, blood poisoning and severe inflammation are sure to result. German soldiers in east Africa are afflicted with jiggers sometimes, through carelessness in not attending to the feet. This neglect is punished, because it prevents soldiers from marching, when care and attention would have kept their feet in good condition.

THEIR SILVER WEDDING.

Only Three Things Wrong About His Story.

They were celebrating their silver wedding and the friends were admiring them as people always do other people when they are getting a lot of presents. You have noticed, of course, how people always look at you when you show them something somebody has given you. They are surprised and they envy you. They always wonder, however, in themselves what on earth any one could see in you to give you anything so handsome. That is unless it is your husband. Then they smile and wonder what he has been doing that his conscience needs rest. But if you'll notice you'll find that persons who get many presents have many friends. You may have many friends but get precious few presents. Presents make friends; friends don't make presents. Married people increase the circle of their friends with every anniversary of their wedding, because the presents get handsomer and more expensive. You can work this paradox out for yourselves, I haven't time.

They were celebrating their silver wedding, and of course the couple were very happy and very affectionate.

"Yes," said the husband, "this is the only woman I ever loved. I shall never forget the first time I proposed to her"

"How did you do it?" burst out a young man who had been squeezing a pretty girl's hand in a corner. They all laughed and he blushed; but the girl carried it off bravely.

"Well, I remember as well as if it were yesterday. It was away back in Maine. We had been out to a picnic, and she and I got wandering alone together. Don't you remember, my dear?"

The wife nodded and smiled.

"We sat on the trunk of an old tree. You haven't forgotten have you love?"

The wife nodded and smiled again.

"She began writing in the dust with the point of her parasol. You recall it sweet, don't you?"

The same old smile and nod.

"She wrote her name 'Minnie,' and I said, 'let me put the other name to it.' And I took the parasol and wrote my name—Smith—after it."

"How lovely," broke out a little maid who was beaming in a suspicious way on a tall chap with a blonde mustache.

"And she took back the parasol and wrote below it, 'No I won't.' And we went home. You remember it darling, I see you do."

Then he kissed her and the company murmured, "How nice."

"Wasn't it nice, Minnie, to see all our friends around us and so happy."

"Yes it was. But John, that reminiscence."

"Ah, it seems as if it was only yesterday."

"Yes, dear; there are only three things you're wrong about in that story."

"Wrong? Oh, no!"

"John, I'm sorry you told that story, because I never went to a picnic with you before our marriage; I was never in Maine in my life and I never went through that parasol business with you."

"My darling, you are wrong."

"I'm not wrong. You know I have an excellent memory. We have been married twenty-five years but I never knew about that minx, Minnie. You never told me of her before."

I guess that she'll forgive, but it is doubtful if she forgets.

He Needed the Money.

Some time ago he had an allotment on the market and one day a foreign-looking individual walked into his office and said he wanted to inquire about the lots. He looked over the plat and finally picked out one that suited him.

"Vot's der price?" he asked when the location was decided upon.

"Eight hundred dollars."

"I give you six houndred cash."

"Very well," said the dealer, "you can have it."

Then the customer lowered his voice.

"I vant der price of dot lot seex houndred to me, but eight houndred to effrybody else. You understand?"

"Yes," said the dealer. "That will be all right."

"Vell, you see, it's like dees—I'm goin' to get married. I've got der girl picked out, and she has money. You see you vill sell der lot to her for $800. Den you vill motion to me, und ve vill go into der next room und you will pay me dot $200. See?"

"You want the $200 for a commission?" said the dealer. "That will be all right, too."

The customer looked relieved.

"It's chost this way," he said. "I must have dot two hundred or I can't get married."

"You shall have it," said the dealer.

A few days later the future bride, her mother and the coming bridegroom entered the office. The papers were quickly prepared and signed, and the mother from the intricacies of her skirts produced a wad of bills, which proved to be the necessary $800.

Then the bridegroom lingered behind as the bride and her mother passed into the hall. The dealer hastily counted off the $200 and thrust it into the bridegroom's hand.

"I have to have it," whispered the latter.

"All right," said the dealer.

"I couldn't get married without it."

"I understand," said the dealer.

"I have to have it," he hoarsely murmured, "it is for my first wife's funeral expenses!"

"Hunger is the Best Sauce."

Yet some people are never hungry. Whatever they eat has to be "forced down." There is, of course, something wrong with these people. By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla a short time they are given an appetite and then they enjoy eating and food nourishes them. If you find your appetite failing, just try a bottle of Hood's. It is a true stomach tonic and every dose does good.

The best family cathartic is Hood's Pills.

THE SECRET OF EXPRESSION

Various Things That Help to Make a Woman's Face Attractive.

Many of the most fascinating women of history have been without a single beauty of feature. Therefore their attraction must have depended on expression, either inborn or acquired. Its subtleties depend as much on temperament as on education. A perfectly irregular face is sometimes magnetic by reason of its animation and earnestness.

Irregularity of that kind is preferable to a beautiful and immobile countenance that smiles perpetually like an everlasting blue sky. There is only a hair line between repose and stagnation and one is as pleasing as the other is dull.

It is the quality, rather than the quantity of the mind that affects expression. Excessive brain work is detrimental—it strains and contorts the features, tightens the lips, wrinkles the forehead and dulls the eyes, but on the other hand where beauty is absent a certain amount of brain work will add it to the face for the eyes gain depth and earnestness, the nose becomes determined, and the shapeless lips and jaws grow powerful. Expression to be really beautiful must correspond with and enhance the individuality already expressed.

Violet temper renders the eyes dry and staring, making them devoid of that clear serenity which is so charming. Concentrated thought and pessimism, jealousy or discontent, deprive the mouth of its mobility and compress the lips to a thin line in time. Cynicism has a lasting effect on the corners of the mouth.

No matter how ugly a face is, it may come to possess rugged grandeur and homely sweetness, but neither of these is to be obtained by those who frivol, vacillate or have no appreciation for the higher things of life and the larger emotions. A pretty expression, a poor mind and a shallow heart cannot add to the expression of a face. —Chicago News.

A True American.

He was one of the most peculiar characters of the many who lived in the woods of the Northwest, was John Bordine, and most of all he was a squaw man. His wife was an old Pottawatomie squaw, and it was very hard to believe that a man like Bordine, with a college education and the refinement of a good family, could live with such a person, but he did live with her until he died, and they seemed to be much more contented than many apparently more congenial married couples. John Bordine was a foreigner, but he had adopted America first as his home and then as his own country.

There were plenty of persons who said that he laid claim to being an American because he believed that as an American he could sell more skins and could more easily collect bounties paid for wolves, etc.

It was in the spring of 1880 that sentiment against John Bordine, the squaw man, changed. There was away north of the Menominee reservation a soldier buried. Above this grave John Bordine planted an American flag, a very curious emblem, but it was the nearest approach to the Stars and Stripes that Bordine's limited wardrobe and that of his squaw wife could furnish. Bordine had taken a part of his squaw's old, faded blue gingham skirt. This he made into his flag, as the field of stars, and the stripes were alternate stripes of white linen and red flannel.

A hunter found the flag floating over the grave, and it was Bordine's squaw who told him how it was placed there and how Bordine had fired his gun three times over the grave, and then the hunter knew that the squaw man had remembered what he had forgotten, Memorial Day. Bordine refused to take any credit for his act of patriotism, and to the day he died longed for a chance to fight for his new country. He is dead now, and on a plain headstone is written, "Here lies John Bordine, a patriotic American."

Bees Leave Town by Train.

A great swarm of bees made their appearance one morning on Canal street and for a time practically took possession of the "starter's stand" at the corner of Bourbon and Canal streets. Starter Hodge is unable to say from what direction they came, but volunteers the statement that they made themselves perfectly at home while his guests. For a time he was apprehensive lest he might be compelled to "shut up shop," but it soon developed that the mission of the little insects, whatever else it might be, lay not in the direction of harm; so that Mr. Hodge's attention to business was uninterrupted, and the bees, while attracting a great deal of attention, were not molested. Indeed, they commanded the perfect respect of everyone.

Later the honey-gatherers boarded the West End train in a body and went to the lake, where they probably colonized. For a time their presence on the cars made the passengers somewhat nervous; but when it was explained by the conductor that the bees were harmless unless attacked, conditions improved and confidence was restored.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Wire Nails and Old Nails.

Careful experiments made at Cornell University are said to show that: "First, cut nails are superior to wire nails in all positions; second, the main advantage of the wire nail is due to its possessing a sharp point; third, if cut nails were pointed they would be thirty per cent. more efficient in direct tension; fourth, wire nails without points have but one-half their ordinary holding power; fifth, the surface of the nail should be slightly rough, but not barbed—barbing decreases the efficiency of cut nails about thirty-two per cent." The pointed end enables the nail to enter wood without breaking its fibre excessively, thus preserving its grip. A serious defect of wire nails is their readiness to rust. They are made generally of a sort of soft steel, and steel rusts more readily than some other forms of iron. In some parts of the country, it is said, shingles put on with wire nails drop off after six or eight years.—Baltimore Sun.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap. The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different; we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other

One Woman's Ruling Passion.

"There goes a woman,' said the girl, "who hasn't a thought on earth except dress. I know that superior man attributes this particular weakness to all women—but it's a canard, as of course, are nine out of ten of male estimates of women."

She conquered a refractory button on her glove before she continued: "But that woman who passed us is, without doubt, the most dress-crazy woman I have ever met. She knows no topic save dress—can speak of no other subject. She spends one-half of her time at her dressmaker's, and the other half is used in exploiting the handicraft of the modiste. Goodness only knows when she manages to get anything to eat. She's dead to every feeling, I believe, except that which has to do with dress. And what do you think she said Saturday? I met her as we were going out of a house of mourning. A young woman whom we both knew had died—and we had been at the funeral. Coming down the steps I noticed my friend, but the feeling of sorrow was too fresh upon me to permit anything more than a nod of recognition. For half a square we walked side by side. Then I said: 'Poor, dear Clara—alive and well one week ago, and now—now she's gone!'"

"'Yes,' answered my friend, blandly; 'but wasn't she dressed beautifully? Really, it was a treat to see her!'"

A Real Good Time.

First Matinee Girl—Did you enjoy the play this afternoon?

Second Matinee Girl—I never enjoyed anything half so much. Why, there wasn't a minute I wasn't crying my eyes out.

THE COLORADO COPPER MINING COMPANY

LOCATION OF OUR MINES

THE COLORADO COPPER MINING COMPANY is fortunate in being the possessor of five splendid showing properties in the great Salida copper belt, the principal ore producing region of this portion of the Rockies. All of our claims have been more or less developed and it is our purpose to put the same on a paying basis at once.

Our company owns, clear of incumbrances, the following claims: The Sedalia Extension; the Sedalia Extension No. 2, which practically adjoins the great Sedalia mine, which has been a big producer for upwards of seventeen years; the Copper King of Colorado, which immediately adjoins the above; the Copper Queen of Salida, a very promising property, only a few steps from the depot in Salida. This claim occupies an imposing position on a mountain just north of the city; and last, but by no means least, the Sunshine, located two miles east of Salida at Cleora Station, on the main trunk line of the great Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, also on the Arkansas river, which in length is one of America's greatest streams.

A SETTLED QUESTION.

A business man may be original in his methods, but in the matter of making his establishment known to the largest possible number of people he is bound to respect and adopt the opinion of successful men who have had the fullest experience in dealing with that problem. That these men regard newspaper advertising as the best of all methods of achieving publicity is proved by the "ad" columns of the Times.

Home Again.

China Hall is fully established once more at its old quarters, 360 George street, with a more complete and up to date stock than ever carried before. Seasonable goods—fruit jars, pickling and preserving jars, butter crocks, jelly cans, rubbers, jar rings, etc. A full assortment direct from the factories. Remember China Hall is, as of old, headquarters for all kinds of staple crockery, earthenware and glassware as well as fine goods. Wedding presents our specialty.

For County Teachers.

Dr. Spankie, public school inspector, has recently had printed for the guidance of county teachers, circulars setting forth the course of studies for the high school entrance, and junior and senior-leaving examinations for 1901. Amongst other things it states that the number of second class teachers is steadily increasing. The circular says that teachers whose certificates expire this year and who wish to teach next year will please look after their own interests, as there will absolutely be no extensions or permits issued in any other way than in accordance with Regulation 87.

Miss Chown's Lecture.

Miss A. A. Chown, Kingston, Field Secretary of the Canadian Household Economic Association, will address a public meeting in St. John's School House to-morrow evening at eight o'clock. Rev. H. Symonds will preside at the meeting and an opportunity will be given at the close of Miss Chown's address t cask any questions or make any remarks bearing on the subject under discussion.

The Clancy house, formerly the Bradburn hotel, is running in full swing.

Mrs. Minns, wife of D. Minns, mail carrier from Omemee to G. T. R. Station, met with a deplorable accident on Friday evening last. HANG ON.

Coffee Topers as Bad as Others.

"A friend of our family who lived with us a short time was a great coffee drinker and a continual sufferer with dyspepsia. He admitted that coffee disagreed with him, but you know, how the coffee drinker will hold onto his coffee, even if he knows it causes dyspepsia.

"One day he said to me that Postum Food Coffee had been recommended and suggested that he would like very much to try it. I secured a package and made it strictly according to directions. He was delighted with the new beverage, as was every one of our family. He became very fond of it and in a short time his dyspepsia disappeared. He continued using the Postum and in about three months gained twelve pounds.

"My husband is a practising physician and regards Postum as the healthiest of all beverages. He never drinks coffee, but is very fond of Posum. In fact, all of our family are, and we never think of drinking coffee any more." Mrs Mary E. Brown, Waterford, Va.

"Evil Dispositions Are Early Shown."

Just so evil in the blood comes out in shape of scrofula, pimples, etc., in children and young people. Taken in time it can be eradicated by using Hood's Sarsaparilla. In older people, the aftermath of irregular living shows itself in bilious conditions, a heavy head, a foul mouth, a general bad feeling.

It is the blood, the impure blood, friends, which is the real cause. Purify that with Hood's Sarsaparilla and happiness will reign in your family.

Blood Poison—"I lived in a bed of fire for years owing to blood poisoning that followed small pox. It broke out all over my body, itching intensely. Tried doctors and hospitals in vain. I tried Hood's Sarsaparilla. It helped. I kept at it and was entirely cured. I could go on the housetops and shout about it." MRS. J. T. WILLIAMS, Carbondale, Pa.

Scrofula Sores—"My baby at two months had scrofula sores on cheek and arm. Local applications and physicians' medicine did little or no good. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured him permanently. He is now four, with smooth fair skin." MRS. S. S. WROTEN, Farmington, Del.

That Border Row.

There is apparently urgent need for the presence of one of the Dominion government's alien labor inspectors in Sarnia. It appears that a couple of Canadians, working across the river in Port Huron, have been sent back to Canadian soil by U. S. Immigrant Inspector Petit at Port Huron, who expresses himself to the Port Huron Times on the matter as follows—

"Yes, sir, the contract labor law will be enforced in Port Huron. Merchants in this city are employing men from Sarnia while citizens of Port Huron are looking for work. There is nothing unfair in the proposition. A man should live and spend his money where he earns it. I haven't a thing against the laboring men of Sarnia, but I think more of the laboring men of this town. If merchants and others who employ help that lives in Sarnia do not see fit to make a change, a number of complaints will soon be made. If Canadians want to work in Port Huron let them move over here."

That is probably a fair enough view of the matter from one side, and, as it is a poor, rule that will not work both ways, it is satisfactory to note that Mayor Watson of Sarnia proposes to try it on the other fellows. The Sarnia Observer says—

"Mayor Watson has given orders to the police to secure the names of every Port Huron citizen who is employed in Sarnia, and at what place of business they are so employed. This course is taken on account of the action of the Port Huron customs authorities in interfering with the few Sarnians who find employment in that city. If Messrs. Avery and Petit persist in their petty meanness to the Sarnians who are employed in Port Huron, the business men of that city and any Port Huronites who find employment on this side of the river will find out that Sarnia citizens will not sit idly by and allow themselves to be overridden by over-zealous customs officials who seem to have an antipathy for everything Canadian. Our citizens desire to live in harmony and have nothing but good-will for our neighbors, but they must not for a moment expect that Sarnia will not retaliate if circumstances call for such action."

The same paper publishes an item which is a curious commentary on the unfriendly attitude of the Port Huron official, being nothing less than a resolution of thanks passed by the Port Huron city council to the Sarnia fire brigade, which recently crossed the river and assisted the Port Huron firemen in quenching a big fire. It is a characteristic incident. Canadians would like to treat their neighbors decently, but if they won't have it that way, why, Canadians can be nasty, too.

St. Clair Channel Blocked.

Port Huron, Mich., Sept. 22.—The barge Martin in tow of the steamer Maurice T. Grover, was sunk in the rapids at the entrance to the St. Clair River last night by the straight-back steamer Yuma and Captain James Lawless of Lorin, William Ross, mate, of Toledo, Mrs. Bacon, cook, of Toledo, and one sailor, name unknown, are missing. Navigation through the channel is completely blocked. Tugs are out in Lake Huron notifying down bound boats to anchor. The sunken wreck of the schooner Fontanel and the Martin lie quite close together and one or both will have to be blown up in order to clear the channel.

ANNOUNCEMENT

To the People of Peterborough and vicinity:

Saturday, September 15th, China Hall was re-opened with a stock which for quality, completeness and variety is unsurpassed in Canada.

During the last six months we have been collecting these goods from every quarter of the globe, and the result will make of China Hall a veritable art gallery.

Added to a full line of staple and domestic wares, we show direct importatians from Egypt, Japan, Austria, France, Germany, Spain, Bohemia, England, America, and last, but not least, from Canada.

This collection comprises the newest styles in Dinner and Tea, Toilet and Salad Sets, Lamps, Cutlery, Silverware, Flower Pots, Cut Glass and Bric-a-bac, including specimens of such reliable wares as Habiland, Doulton, Ridgeway, Wedgewood and Farnival, Royal Bonn, Carlsbad, Satsenna, Awata, Lenara, Yokohama, Terra Cotta, Hand-engraven Egyptian and Cloisonnee.

Several of these lines are now placed on sale for the first time in Peterborough, and a few of them for the first time in Canada. Amongst these unique pieces may be seen (with a printed guarantee enclosed) a facsimile of the celebrated Portland vase which made Josiah Wedgewood famous.

China Hall in its present form is a model of convenience and beauty, and it has now every facility for the carrying on of an up-to-date trade. A prompt and courteous service may be relied upon, while a cordial welcome is assured to all visitors whether purchasers or not.

For the convenience of customers a cosy waiting room is provided, which we trust may be appreciated to the extent of being used and of becoming a rendezvous for ladies who wish to meet down town.

The accomplishment of all this has been no small task, and it is hoped that the public will take pride in this new store which, without exception is the handsomest of its kind in Canada.

A few words as to our future policy. The business will be conducted upon a cash basis, with one price to all and positively no reduction from the marked figures, which will be as low as is compatible with the character of the goods, our aim being that customers should remember the quality after the price has been forgotten. No article will be represented as being better than it really is. Special attention given to matching and mending.

Thanking our numerous customers for their many expressions of goodwill, and for their adherence to us while in cramped quarters, we shall now take pleasure in welcoming them to our commodious and artistic premises at 360 George-st.

STRIKERS ARE NOW GAINING GROUND

Operators Still Determined to Concede Nothing to the Union.

ADVANCE IN THE PRICE OF COAL IS EXPECTED.

No Further Disorders Reported from the Strike District—Plenty of Troops Ready for Action in Case of Necessity.

(Special to The Times.)

Philadelphia, Sept. 24.—There are no startling developments in the anthracite coal strike. Reports received from various districts this morning seem to show a distinct net gain on the part of the strikers, who have induced a considerable number of workmen to join them, thus closing down collieries which during the week were in operation. An effort is being made to have both sides of the dispute submit their case to the arbitration of President McKinley and W. J. Bryan, but so far it is not known whether these two gentlemen will accept the task or whether the disputants will consent to submit the matter tot hem. The presence of the soldiers in the Shenandoah locality is not having any effect in encouraging striking miners to return to work, though it is having considerable effect so far as the maintenance of order.

PRICE GOES UP TO $6 A TON.

Toronto, Sept. 24.—The big strike in Pennsylvania is slowly but surely affecting local conditions in the coal trade. The price of anthracite coal coal is now fixed at $4 per ton, and the dealers are meditating another advance of fifty cents per ton, which will probably go into effect to-morrow. The orders placed by provident citizens who fear famine prices in coal are swamping the coal merchants of American cities. In Buffalo only half-ton orders will be delivered, and many dealers are unable to deliver any orders. In this city the largest firms are inundated with orders, and in some instances are two weeks behind.

STRIKERS SCORE A VICTORY.

Shamokin, Pa., Sept. 24.—Notwithstanding the efforts of the operators none of the colleries in this vicinity resumed work this morning. Attempts were also made to work collieries between here and Mount Carmel, but scarcely any miners reported.

The failure of the men to go to work averted trouble. All the colleries were heavily guarded by coal and iron police and special officers.

The strikers secured a victory by inducing ten per cent. of the men in the North Franklin colliery at Treverton to-day to stay at home. Leaders of the Union Mine Workers said that within a few days the colliery would be tied up. A carload of deputies went to the mine early to-day. It is operated by the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company, and employs about 500 men and boys. The company was hopeful up to this morning that all the men would remain at work during the strike.

THREE MINES LESS.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 24.—Reports received here by Gen. Supt. Henderson of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company to-day showed that sixteen of the 39 collieries owned by the company were working this morning. This was three mines less than on Saturday. The additional collieries tied up are in the Mahonoy region near Shenandoah and average 700 employees each.

BELLEVUE WASHERY IDLE.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 24.—The strike situation in the Lackawanna region was practically unchanged to-day, except that the Bellevue washery, which operated nearly all of last week, was idle.

MEETING OF OPERATORS.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 24.—An important conference of operators of the big companies was held in the offices of the Lehigh Valley Company here this morning. These superintendents were present—W. A. Lathrop, Hehigh Valley; W. J. Richards, Lehigh and Wilkesbarre; Morris Williams, Susquehanna Coal Company; E. E. Loomis, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western; Edward Rose, Delaware & Hudson; and D. H. Watkins, Temple Iron & Coal Company.

They were in council more than two hours, and discussed all the phases of the situation. They agreed that the conditions warranted no change in their arrangements for conducting the strike; that under the circumstances their position was satisfactory, and that they should not concede anything to the union, but remain firm in the decision to refuse recognition to the organization.

This was all that was given out, the operators stating that no other business of interest to the public was done.

STATEMENT OF OPERATORS.

At one or two places where it had been said work would be resumed strikers gathered this morning, but none of the employees apeared, and the crowd soon left. At strikers headquarters the men seemed more determined than ever.

The operators issued this statement—

"There is no change in the Wyoming and Eackawanna districts. The West End Coal Company's colliery at Mecanaqua is working this morning as last week with nearly a full force. All the Reading Company's mines in the Mahony region south of Broad Mountain are working; five out of twenty collieries north of Broad Mountain are in operation. All told 60 per cent. of the Reading collieries are in operation to-day. In the Shamokin region there is an improvement over last week and an increased output of coal is looked for."

The best miners continue to leave this section. A large crowd left at noon today for the soft coal fields at Virginia.

WYOMING VALLEY QUIET.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 24.—Everything was quiet in the Wyoming Valley this morning and the situation remained unchanged. No attempt was made to resume operations at any of the mines.

ENGLAND AND FRANCE.

Persistent Rumors That War Between Them is Inevitable

It is Said that France Must Either Face a Revolution or War With England

(Special to The Times.)

London, Sept. 25.—An American who is far from being mad makes this prediction—Before the end of the year the Nationalists of France will overturn the Government, or the Government, to save itself, will go to war with England.

This American alarmist has lived for years in France, has had positions in the diplomatic service and has an intimate acquaintance with some leaders of the new Nationalist party.

Last winter he made the prediction that after the Exposition there would be a revolution, that the army would take the Government, and that an Emperor would be chosen. He holds to the prophecy.

Only by going to war with a foreign Power, he believes, can the Government prevent a revolution.

Travelers in Paris have been surprised to see that troops have been withdrawn from the German frontier and distributed near the Channel coast. Whatever may be the intention of the French Government, it cannot be questioned that the republic is prepared to invade England.

England is spending millions on Chanel fortifications. The Admiralty work in progress at Dover is stupendous.

WEATHER NOTES,

Probabilties. To-day —Strong winds and agles, easterly to southerly; unsettled and showery.

Fine weather prevails from Ontario to the Maritime Provinces, whilst in Manitoba and the Territories it is rainy. The outlook for the lake regions stormy; the winds are likely to increase, to a gale from the east and south by Tuesday, attenended by rain.

POISONED CHILDREN.

Several Children eat Worm Candy and Nearly Die.

It appears that the town has recently been sampled with worm candy, packages of which were left at nearly every door.

A number of children have been very ill in consequence. Two were taken with convulsions on Saturday, after having partaken of the candy. Yesterday another case was reported, a child having been in convulsions for several hours.

There should be a stringent law against distributing dangerous samples in this way.

TO SHOOT EACH OTHER

AND THE GIRL IS NOW DEAD

At Her Lover's Hand, but he Had Not the Nerve to Take His Own Life.

(Special to The Times.)

Hamilton, Sept. 24.—George Arthur Pearson, 20 years of age, is confined in the police station, the self-confessed murderer of Miss Annie Griffin, aged 17, who was a domestic employed with Mrs. A. R. Niblett, 62 Caroline street south, and whose parents reside on the Hamilton road near Dundas.

Pearson became acquainted with the girl at Dundurn Park on May 24, and has since kept company with her. Yesterday he hired a rig and took the girl for a drive to Dundas, Freelton, and Carlisle. When driving home, about one mile this side of Waterdown, Pearson pulled from his pocket a revolver, and shot Miss Griffin twice through the head. She fell from the rig, and was carried by Pearson and Mr. Sheppard into the latter's house, directly in front of which the murder was committed.

Pearson at first said that two men driving past in a rig had done the deed, but, on being closely questioned by the police later on, he broke down and said he was guilty. He said—"I kissed her good-bye, than shot her dead, but the reason no one will ever know."

These were the words of the young murderer as he talked carelessly to Constable Bainbridge of Hamilton and Chief Constable Twiss of Dundas. He then took the officers to the scene of the murder and showed them where he had thrown the revolver, which they found just over the fence, near Mr. Sheppard's gate.

Young Pearson said that the girl and he had made up their minds to kill themselves, and he shot her and then tried to shoot himself. He showed a hole through his clothes, where he had tried to shoot himself, but his nerve failed him, and he called for help to Mr. Sheppard.

Pearson was generally employed around the butcher market, and his reputation was none of the best. He was last employed as driver for Butcher Lampman. The girl was of respectable parentage, and was given a good character where employed. Her father is an employee of the Cataract Power Co. Coroner McGregor of Waterdown has ordered an inquest.

A PACT TO DIE TOGETHER.

Hamilton, Sept. 24.—What at first looked like an inexplicable murder mystery has been cleared up by the confession of George A. Pearson, that he fired the fatal shots. His stories told to the police at various times are somewhat conflicting, but as he took them to the scene of the tragedy and found the revolver, where he had thrown it after the deed was performed, there is no reason to doubt that he is, as he admits, the guilty one.

One of his explanations is that he and the girl loved each other ver much, but had not money with which to get married, and decided that it was better to die together than to have to live apart. Their plan was for him to shoot and mortally wound Miss Griffin, and she before dying to shoot him. His first shot, however, rendered her unconscious and then he shot her a second time, but lacked the nerve to turn the revolver on himself, and threw it away.

The inquest was opened this morning at Waterdown. Young Pearson was arraigned in the Police Station here to-day and formally remanded.

RUSSIANS OCCUPY LU TAI

(Special to The Times.)

Vienna, Sept. 24.—The Admiralty has received the following despatch "Taku Sept. 24.—The Russian occupied the fortification at Lu Tai yesterday. Lu Tai is situated about forty north east of Tien Tsin and is about 20 miles due north of Taku.

London, Sept. 25.—The morning Post has the following from the Shanghai correspondent, dated yesterday. The Russians recently organized an expedition towards Mukden which has already reached Leaoyang about midway between Niuchwang and Mukden. It will probably encounter opposition. Prince Tuans ascendency creates a very grave danger. The only hope for foreigners is that the pro-foreign Viceroy of Nankin has not yet been removed. Tuans emissaries are working hard to get him out of the way by murder or suicide.

SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT.

The Public are Again Reminded of the Meeting

The Times is requested to again remind its readers of the public meeting in the Opera House to-morrow evening, at which Sir Richard Cartwright will be the principal speaker.

Addresses will also be delivered by Mr. J. H. McClellan, the Liberal candidate, and Hon. J. R. Stratton.

Chair to be taken at 8 o'clock by Mr. Peter Hamilton, President of the West Peterborough Reform Association. The gallery will be reserved for ladies.

MORE THAN FIFTY VESSELS MISSING!

(Special to The Times.)

St. John, Newfoundland, Sept. 24.—More than fifty French vessels from St. Pierre are still missing, as a result of the recent gale, and much alarm is felt for their safety. Many doubtless, are disabled, but it is almost certain that others have foundered. The French flag ship, Isly, has been ordered from the Treaty shore, it is reported here, to cruise over the grand banks with a view of learning the extent of the disaster, and of assisting any vessels requiring help.

EIGHT MEN KILLED BY A CYCLONE

(Special to The Times.)

Minneapolis, Minnesota, Sept, 24.—Sixteen persons reported killed in storm at Morristown Minnesota.

Faribault, Minnesota, Sept. 24.—Word has been received here to-night that a cyclone struck Morristown at six o'clock. Eight men were killed and a large number more are missing. The report is meagre. A large tree was carried over a house top and deposited on a brick building used as a saloon, which was completely wrecked, and from which the bodies of eight men were taken. The report does not say how much damage was done to the property.

BRITISH PATROLS REACH PORTUGAL

The Boers Continue to Cross Above and Below.

Those who lay Down Their Arms will not be Deported.

(Special to The Times.)

Lorenzo Marques, Sept. 24.—British patrols have reached the Portuguese frontier. Boers continue to cross above and below the portion held by the British. The riding horses of the Boers are in a horrible condition.

London, Sept. 24.—Lord Roberts reports from Pretoria under date of Sept. 24 that the guards under Pole-Carew occupied Komatipoort this morning. The bridge was round intact. Much rolling stock, locomotives and truck loads of "Long Tom" ammunition were captured. Only a few rifle shots were fired.

Lord Roberts adds—"Paget has captured Erasmus' Camp, 3,000 cattle, 5,000 sheep and 23 prisoners.

"Methuen has made another big haul of stock."

The British commander-in-chief in South Africa also reports that the few Boer troops remaining in the Eastern Transvaal are completely "out of hand," and says they are most burghers, the foreign mercenaries having gone to Lorenzo Marquez owing to the Portuguese Government promising to maintain them while there and give them passage to their respective countries.

ROBERTS' LAST PROCLAMATION.

Pretoria, Sept. 24.—A proclamation has been issued announcing that the burghers who voluntarily surrender will not be sent out of the country, but will be detained in camps at Bloemfontein or Pretoria. In cases of their having stock, selected representatives will be allowed to take charge of the cattle, the localities in which the herds will be kept will be designated by the commanding officers of the districts.

This proclamation gives great satisfaction to those who are anxious to see the war conclude, as it is believed that it will give the coup de grace to the Boer resistance. It has been repeatedly stated that many of the burghers would lay down their arms if they were assured that they would not be sent to St. Helena or Ceylon by the British.

News received here from the east is to the effect that the Boer forces int hat part of the country are in a complete state of disorganization. A few diminished and disunited commandos are returning to the westward with scanty supplies of ammunition. There is reason to believe that their heavy guns have either been destroyed or buried. Thirty Boers from Kekpoort, who surrendered 4 months ago, have arrived here.

Van der Merwes' commando tried to force a fight with a British force last week. They fired on the English, wounding two of them.

BRITISK AT KOMETIPOORT

London, Sept. 24.—Telegrams from Lorenzo Marques assert that 1,500 Boers, including Commandant Pienner and thirteen leading officers, surrendered with their arms and ammunition to the Portuguese to-day. All of them were placed in jail.

Another despatch from Lorenzo Marques states that the British have occupied Komatipoort. The bridge there, which was reported to have been destroyed, was found to be intact.

A special despatch from Lorenzo Marques says that Boers arriving there report that collisions are occurring on the frontier between Portuguese troops and burghers, whom the former wish to disarm on entering Portuguese territory. Several have been wounded, and further fighting is feared. The Portuguese are almost powerless unless reinforced.

TWENTY THOUSAND REFUGEES.

Cape Town, Sept. 22.—Colonel Girouard is expected to arrive here to-day to arrange railway transportation for the return of the refugees from the Orange Free State and the Transvaal to their homes. The first trains will carry 10,000 tons of foodstuffs. Then the commericial and mining stockkeepers will be sent through. Afterwards thee remaining refugees, to the number of about 20,000, will receive transportation. The latter will rpobably begin to return by the end of October.

MISSIONARIES ESCAPE VIA SIBERIA

Party of Americans Reach London With a Thrilling Story.

REPLY OF FRANCE TO GERMANY'S PROPOSAL.

She Is Willing to Negotiate with the Chinese Under Certain Conditions—Dr. Morrison Complains of an Act of Vandalism.

(Special to The Times.)

London, Sept. 24.—Considering the amount of American blood shed in China the answer of the United States Government to the straightforward German declaration looks more like the attempt of a trading nation to conciliate the Chinese with an eye to future advantages than the determined not of a power which knows the race with whom it ish dealing and which is determined to adopt a strong attitude. The United States does not consider it proper to demand the surrender of the anarchists who have carried sword and fire throughout China, but thinks that the Imperial Government should be allowed to punish them. In any event their punishment is to be provided for the final settlement should such Government fail in its duty. Meanwhile negotiations are to be resumed while Li Hung Chang and his confreres chuckle over their success in creating divisions in the camp of the allies, and the Dowager Empress becomes bolder than ever and more determined that the Boxer leaders shall not be punished. The diplomatists of the United States have evidently not grasped the cardinal point of Oriental policy; that a strong stand is the only one which will influence the Eastern mind and that the longer parleying lasts the more the Chinese become inspired with the idea that their opponents are afraid to use force. The Chinese have learned already that the great powear of the world aer not united and that by skilful manipulation their sting can be neutralized. It is upon this knowledge that Li Hung Chang is working so cleverly during the present crisis and by means of which he appears likely to wholy paralyse any attempt upon the Chinese Empire for the present.

ESCAPED VIA SIBERIA.

London, Sept. 24.— The American missionaries, J. H. Roberts, Mark Williams, William Sprague, Mrs. Sprague and Miss Virgina Murdock, who escaped from Kalgan, Province of Chi Li, China, in June, were chased across the Gobi Desert. Then they traveled by way of Siberia, and have just reached London in good health.

Mr Williams, who has worked in China for thirty-four years, gave a reporter of the Associated Press an interesting story of his experiences. It appears that the first assault on the Mission compound at Kalgan was made during the night of June 10 when a yelling mob attempted to batter down the gate with stones. Seeing the uselessness of remaining the missionaries in the course of the night evacuated the compound and proceeded to the Magistrate's Yamen. The following afternoon they were ordered to leave, the Magistrate declaring that he feared not only for the missioneries' safety but also for his own Yamen if he continued to protect them.

After allowing the Americans to draw their money from the Native Bank the magistrate furnished them with fifty soldiers as an escort through the great gate in the wall into Mongolia.

"We had no idea then of the terrible journey which awaited us," continued Mr. Williams. "We had no notion of havin gto escape across Siberia and only proposed to remain in some place of safety and return after the crisis. Wherever we attempted to stop, however, the officials ordered us to leave forthwith, declaring that the Boxers were on our heels. Finally reaching a Mongol encampment at Marausu we saw that flight across the great Gobi Desert was inevitable. Having secured a caravan we started June 23. Seven Swedish missionaries with ther families who had just escaped with their lives joined us. One lady had had horrible experiences. She had been clubbed almost to death. Some of the males were frightful spectacles and covered with blood.

"Our caravan consisted of twenty camels, nineteen horses and six camel carts for the ladies and children. For eight days we travled over nothing but sand. The air was like that of an oven and the suffering was intense. The animals had no grass and no water and marching in the day time was impossible."

At the few isolated wells Mongols were encampde in the vicinity, and they refused to allow us to draw water, fearing we would poison the wells.

"After thirty-eight days of terrible anxiety we reached Urga, on the other side of the desert. We presented a sorry spectacle. The Russian Consul General was most kind. He gave up to us fourteen rooms in the consulate. But to our dismay, the consul told us we must leave forthwith, as there were 2,000 Mongol soldiers in the neighborhood who might be hostile. He also warned us that tens of thousands of Mongols were gathering for a religious festival, and that if we valued our safety we had better clear out without delay.

"A fortnight later, Aug. 13 we reached Kiakhta, and remained there till Aug. 27. In the meantime Mr. Tower (Untied States ambassador to Russia) obtained permission from the authorities at St. Petersburg for our journey over the Siaberia Railway. Arrived at Irkutsk Sept. 2 we took a train and reached St. Petersburg Sept. 18.

"It is impossible to speak too highly of the great kindness of the Russian officials. Everything possible was done by them for us, even to offering us money. On the Trans-Siberian Railway, though it was choked with troops and closed to civilians, the authorities provided a reserved car fo us. We passed immense number of troops, apparently, conscripts hastily collected They were no uniforms, and some had no guns. All of them wore straw hats.

THE REPLY OF FRANCE.

Paris, Sept. 24.—France's reply to Germany's note making the possession of the instigators of the Chinese troubles a preliminary to peace negoiations is not entirely a nacceptance of the proposition. France argues that punishment is necessary, but would negotiate under certain conditoins without first punishing the guilty officals.

REPLY OF THE UNITED STATES

The reply to Russian's note is couched in the following language:

1. The Government of the United States has not any present intention to withdraw its Legation from Pekin.
2. The Government of the United States excepts the plenipotentiary authority of Earl Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching as prima faci sufficient for the perliminary negotiations looking toward the return of the Imperial Chinese Government, and to the resumption of its authority at Pekin, and toward the negotiations of a complete settlement of the powers and of China.
3. To these ends of the United States Minister in Pekin will be authorized to enter into relations with Earl Li and Prince Ching as the immediate representatives of the Chinese Emperor.

A memorandum similar to the second clause of the above was also handed to Chinese Minister Wu.

The Navy Department this afternoon issued the following statement. "In view of the possibility that later, when circumstances so warrant, the land force in China will be materially reduced, the naval force Asiatic waters will be from time to time increased with referance to American interests inw China, and also in the Philippines."

AN ACT OF VANDALISM

London, Sept. 24.—Morrison, the Pekin correspondent of The Times, wiring Sept. 19th, protests against what he calls "an unworhty act of vandalism" on the part of General Wilson's expediation, namely, the "attempt to destroy the superb white pegoda in the temple grounds at Pei Tai Chu." Fortunately, says the correspondent, the masonry was too solid. Dr Morrison adds.

"It is expected that, the orders sent to M. Pichon (the French Minister) to withdraw, will be countermanded.

"Communications are still deplorably bad. Many telegrams are never sent at all, some being destroyed after they have been acepted.

"General Yung Lu is returning here to assist in the peace negotiations, although the foreign Ministers have protested against his participation."

GREAT SLAUGHTER OF NATIVES.

New York, Sept. 24.—The French gun boat Avalanche found all quiet in the Sun Tai district, says a Herald despatch from Hong Kong. The disturbance arose through Chinese soldiers plundering a convert's medicine shop. The outbreak spread to every village, and a clean sweep was made of converts houses and missions. There was a great slaughter of natives, and a Catholic priest was wounded. The cause of the outbreak is attributed to the interference of the church in civil questions.

Bicycle Accident.

A lad on a bicycle collided with a young girl yesterday at the corner of George and Hunter streets, and knocked her down. She was taken into Macdonald's drug store, and subsequently sent home. The boy who rode the wheel never stopped to assist his victim.

A Lesson From Mexico.

In the anthracite coal regions of Pennsylvania over 100,000 miners are idle and they and their families are dependent upon union funds, public charity and private generosity for their daily bread. Many mines are idle and the operators find that the cold season is coming on with an inadequate supply of coal to meet it and little chance of an adequate supply being mined unless the demands of the men are granted. The immediate result will probably be an increase in the price of coal to make the lesser supply bring to the mine owners an equal revenue which will help them to prolong the fight and starve the miners into submission. The sufferers are to be the miners and their families and the coal using public.

In other words the coal mine owners of Pennsylvania will continue to dictate to the miners how much, or rather how little, they shall receive for making the owner's coal marketable, while the innocent public, who have taken and can take no possible part in the strike, must pay the coal owners the price they choose to demand. It's a lovely system.

In Mexico—benighted, backward, ignorant Mexico—they do things better. There the mines are not under the control of corporations, but of the government, which leases the mines to the operators with a proviso that the mines must be operated or the leases forfeited. No shutting down there to raise the price. If the lessees fail to work their mines from any insufficient reason they forfeit their leases and the mines revert to the government. How much better! Governments cannot in the nature of things oppress the workmen and rob the public, because the workmen and the public make and unmake the government. Evidently the people in some unenlightened countries like Mexico are not sitting in as dense darkness as is generally thought.

When Women Voted for President.

Women voted in New Jersey in the Presidential election of 1804, when Thomas Jefferson was re-elected for a second term. In 1892 the women of the new State of Wyoming participated in a Presidential election which resulted in the choice of Grover Cleveland, who was the first President since Jefferson to be elected by the aid of women's vote.—The Forum.

Lions Not "Domestic Animals."

Justices Cave and Wright, London, recently dismissed an appeal against the magisterial decision in the case of the Aquarian lions. The keeper of these lions was prosecuted for cruelly beating them, but the Westminster magistrate dismissed the case on the ground that the lions were not domestic animals. The court upheld this view and dismissed the appeal.

CANNIBALISM IN VOGUE

An American Indian in Jail for Eating a Woman.

An Indian cannibal has been sent to jail in Vancouver. His crime was part of an ancient rite. He was an initiate of the Ha-mattsa, an Indian secret fraternity which demands of its members that they acquire a taste for human flesh.

The Canadian government is greatly exercised over this outbreak of a barbaric custom that had been thought well nigh stamped out.

One of the prisoners was a well-known half-breed named George Hunt. He had charge of a band of Indians exhibited at the World's Fair, and he acted as interpreter for Dr. Franz Boas, of the Museum of Natural History, New York, when the latter was in Vancouver collecting data for his important work on Indian customs, now filed at the Smithsonian Institution.

There was insufficient evidence for the conviction of Hunt, and the same is true of all the defendants save one. He was convicted of having devoured a portion of the body of a squaw.

It is only among a few of the far northern and inland tribes, remote from civilization and stubborn in their resistance to missionary effort, that the horrible rites of the Ha-mattsa, or flesh-eaters, survive.

Every spring the Ha-mattsa holds its initiation ceremonies for new candidates, accompanied by feasting and dancing and other wild orgies. The chief purpose of the initiation is to create in the aspirant the taste for human flesh.

In the case in question the body of a young squaw who had mysteriously died but a few days before was removed from the burying ground and taken to the initiation room, where it was lashed naked to one of the posts. A band of the Ha-mattsas, marched round it, inflamed by wild music and frenzied yells of the old Ha-mattsas, and proceeded to bite off mouthfuls of flesh from the arms, sides and legs of the squaw's body.

The Northwest Mounted Police were informed of the hideous rite and succeeded in capturing the ringleader.

Many curious facts about the cannibal fraternity came to light during the trial. It was developed that for initiation into the Ha-mattsas the novice must go and live four or five weeks in the forest seeing no one and eating no food.

At the end of his banishment his "spirit" appears in the shape of some animal, which he at once kills and devours raw, whereby he is supposed to imbibe its courage and strength, which thereafter dwell in him. He returns from the forest adorned with a headdress of cedar bark, dyed red which is one of the emblems of the flesh-eating fraternity, and is worn by him during the progress of the initiation. He is met by a band of the secret brotherhood, who escort him to the village with much ceremony.

They are joined by an attendant bearing in his arms a dead body, which must be that of a young squaw. In ancient times she was sacrificed for the occasion.

Walking behind this body, the candidate is led into the dancing-house, which has been cleared for the ceremony.

There were witnesses at the trial who swore that Hunt, the half-breed had cut the body to pieces for distribution among the old members and the novice, and that all joined in devouring the flesh. Certain it is that the man from the woods, naked and half starved after his vigil, played his part in the rite, while his associates spurred him on with dance and song.

And if they did not actually join him in the gruesome feast, they stimulated his zeal by making concerted wolf-like rushes at the mangled body and pretending to fight over the flesh.

Nor did the candidate for Ha-mattsa honors escape with one night of horrors. Four times, as darkness fell, he was led into the dance-house and compelled to undergo the trial prescribed by Indian tradition. On the fourth night the corpse had been all devoured.

Then came another stage of the ceremony—the eating of living flesh. In this the uninitiated spectators were allowed to play a passive part. The Ha-mattsa ran hither and thither among them, biting with the ferocity of a wildcat and eating their flesh.

It was a point of pride with the victims to endure the onslaught with stoicism. Besides, the customs of the order prescribe gifts for those who allow themselves to be bitten. The first prize on this occasion was awarded to a boy who allowed a large mouthful to be detached from his forearm.

Having faithfully performed all that was required of him, the candidate was pronounced by the elders a full-fledged Ha-mattsa.

It then devolved upon his proud family to give a great feast in his honor. Human flesh was not included in the repast, but the new Ha-mattsa exhibited his zeal by occasionally taking a bite out of his nearest neighbor's arm or shoulder, and these attentions were submitted to with great good humor.

Most important of all was the distribution by the young Ha-mattsa of blankets and other gifts to all the persons whom he had honored by biting.

Lincoln's Youth.

Abraham Lincoln was the son of a poor farmer, and of his boyhood days little is known. He was born in a small cabin on the Big South Fork of Nolin Creek, in La Rue county, Kentucky, which is about three miles from Hodgensville. One of the few little stories of his youth that the writers of his life have been able to find shows that even at the early age of ten he was guided by the same noble and generous impulses that made everybody love him when he grew to be a man. One day, after fishing for hours, he was returning home, tired and hungry, with only one fish, when he met a soldier. His mother and father had always taught him to be good to soldiers, and so, thinking this one might be hungry, he unhesitatingly gave him the fish he had worked so hard to catch.

Weight of Peas.

S. M. Andree, a Swedish scientist, has collected a tabular information showing the average weight of peas in their pods. The lightest peas were always found near the end of the pod. The average weight of a pea was greater the larger the number of peas in the pod, so that the largest pods contained the heaviest peas. The weight of the peas next to the point of the pod increased with the increased number of peas in the pod. With the exception of the first and last peas, there was but a very small difference in the weight of the peas in the same pod.

is a very common consequence of indigestion and torpid liver. Sometimes there are spots before the eyes and hot flashes. At other times a sensation as of vertigo occurs, at once suffocating and blinding. It is a waste of time to attempt to cure this condition by ordinary means or medicines. The stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition must be restored to healthy activity, the blood must be purified, the liver cleansed and strengthened, before a cure can be hoped for. This is the work done by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a medicine specially beneficial in diseases of the stomach, blood and liver. It strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood, cleanses the clogged liver, and promotes the health of every organ of the body.

"My wife was greatly troubled with indigestion, torpid liver, dizziness, and also irregular periods," writes Mr. W. A. Preston, of Shuqualak, Noxubee Co., Miss. "We tried many different remedies, but none of them gave perfect relief until we were induced by a lady to try your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' 'Favorite Prescription,' and 'Pleasant Pellets.' These medicines did more good than anything we ever tried for those complaints. We have used four bottles of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' one of 'Favorite Prescription,' and two vials of your 'Pellets.' These medicines have done the work we desired, and I do heartily recommend them to all similar sufferers."

The Stay-Abed Club.

Of the many curious features in New Orleans life there is none other more interesting than the Stay-Abed Club, an organization composed of bedridden people. The qualifications for membership are confirmed invalidism and the ability to communicate with other members of the club by letter. The idea and plan of this singularly pathetic organization originated with a lady who for fifteen years has been a bedridden sufferer. She conceived the scheme of writing down each day her experiences, impressions and thoughts, and this essay or letter she exchanged with an invalid friend, receiving in return a similar epistle. Presently the circle of correspondents grew larger, and last winter there were fourteen invalids enjoying the curious benefits of the club. Each member writes his or her letter each day, and this communication is passed around in routine to the others, so each member has thirteen letters every day.

Lizzie Borden Snubbed.

Lizzie A. Borden, of Fall River, whose father and mother were murdered in 1892, is the subject of much comment. By the death of her parents she became heir to the Andrew J. Borden building at the corner of Anawan and South Main streets. One of the rooms in the building was occupied by the local branch of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of which Miss Borden was, before the tragedy, an active member. While Miss Borden was in Taunton jail the society joined with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in passing resolutions of sympathy. Since then her case has been rigidly excluded from society debate, and several of the members have snubbed her. She felt that she should not put up with insults from her tenants, and accordingly the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union has been compelled to seek quarters elsewhere.—Springfield Republican.

IT ISN'T THE THING YOU DO.

It isn't the thing you do, dear,
It's the thing you leave undone,
That gives you a bit of heartache
At the setting of the sun.
The tender word forgotten,
The letter you did not write,
The flower you did not send, dear,
Are your haunting ghosts at night.

The stone you might have lifted
Out of a brother's way;
The bit of heartsome counsel
You were hurried too much to say;
The loving touch of the hand, dear,
The gentle winning, tone,
Which you had no time nor thought for,
With troubles enough of your own.

For life is all too short, dear,
And sorrow is all too great,
To suffer our slow compassion,
That tarries until too late;
And it isn't the thing you do, dear;
It's the thing you leave undone,
Which gives you a bit of a heartache
At the setting of the sun.

—Margaret Elizabeth Sangster.

A LOCAL PARAGRAPH.

"The time has come for the American people to act. Shall fifty million patriots sit supinely by and let conscienceless rascals tear the stars of glory from the flag they love and trample its proud folds of crimson and white into the mire of national dishonor? Not while the deeds of '76 still shine through the mists of years in unexampled splendor. Not while the memories of '61 yet live in the hearts that thrilled with the stress of that heroic struggle. Not while"—Joel Snively, editor of the Meloogie Monitor, laid down his pen with a sigh.

Outside the dusty little window the green waters of the bay were sparkling in the sunshine. A keen north breeze was driving great huddling masses of white-shouldered clouds over a field of dazzling azure, and only a man who loved the sport with the whole-souled earnestness that filled his entire being could know how the fish must be biting on such a morning! Oh, to be out on that gleaming expanse armed with rod and line, with only the sun and clouds for company and a thousand pounds or so of gamy vertebrates playing about within reach of his cunning hook.

But also, it was Friday morning. On Saturday some two hundred impatient subscribers would expect the weekly dish of personal, political and intellectual pabulum which his facile pen had long served to them on that day, with more or less punctuality, according to the season. His duty clearly held him to his post at such a time, however, much his inclinations might have led him elsewhere.

So, with another lingering glance at the scene without, Mr. Snively took up his pen and resumed the stirring appeal which was to awaken fifty million patriots to action and incidentally convince the Republicans of Meloogie that it was their duty to vote for Joe Gridley for poundmaster.

So engrossed did the editor become in this pleasing task that he did not hear a step upon the creaking stair a little later. If he had he would have known at once that it was a woman and a lady who was approaching, for long and often painful experience had enabled Mr. Snively to determine with unerring accuracy what sort of person was climbing the somewhat perilous ascent to the editorial sanctum almost as soon as his foot touched the first step.

But for once the editor did not hear the soft footfall on the stair, so he was very much surprised and not a little disconcerted when a fresh, sweet voice, almost at his elbow, said "Good Morning, Mr. Snively," and looking up he beheld his neighbor, Mrs. Tracy, her plump figure buttoned into the trimmest of blue serge yachting suits, her smiling face shaded by a wide-brimmed hat and in her hand a fish pole, pointed, brass-tipped, elegant—the very perfection of dainty uselessness.

Without waiting for a response to her greeting she briefly made known her errand. She was anxious for a day's fishing and had been told of an Elysian spot, where the fish were so plentiful they were actually to be had for the asking. Unluckily, however, her own boat had not come, so she had ventured to ask if, in case he was not using it, Mr. Snively would be so kind as to lend her his yawl, it being impossible to hire one in the village.

Mr. Snively was delighted. Mrs. Tracy was a pretty widow of uncertain age but no uncertain charm, who had taken the cottage next to the editor's own some six months before. In the course of a rather desultory acquaintance the genial bachelor, whose ideas of the fair sex were those common to his kind, had discovered that his fair neighbor was a cheery little body of sound political views and excellent literary tastes (from the first she had been a prompt and paying subscriber to the Monitor), but beyond that his imagination had not soared. Now, however, behold the pretty widow invested with a wholly new interest. She was fond of fishing!

Eagerly Mr. Snively assured his visitor of his pleasure in putting his boat at her disposal and gave her exhaustive directions as to the means of obtaining it. A delightful half-hour of conversation followed. As though it were a magician's wand the dainty fish pole had placed the editor and his guest at once on terms of the most charming intimacy and the former didn't remember ever to have enjoyed a conversation so much in his life ... his talk was wholly of reel and rods and spoonhooks and other instruments of slaughter.

All things, however, are bound to come to an end, especially in an editorial office, so it wasn't long before Mrs. Tracy took her leave, escorted down the stairway by her delighted host.

At the door they were met by a spicy breeze straight from the pine woods across the bay. Mr. Snively sighed.

"Where is this wonderful place you are going to?" he asked.

"Ah, that's a secret," she replied gayly. "I promised I'd never, never tell."

"Oh, well, then I suppose it's a crime to even guess." And once more the editor sighed as he glanced out at the sparkling waters.

"But you've been so kind," exclaimed the widow, noting the sigh and immediately filled with compunction. "It seems ungracious of me to keep it from you who love so to fish." And then as she saw him give another wistful glance bayward she burst out impulsively: "Promise not to betray me and I'll tell you—it's Patchang Lake!"

"Patchang!" cried Mr. Snively in surprise. "Why, I never heard of a fish down there in my life."

"That's the charm of it," she rejoined gleefully, "and the man who told me about it (such a dear, dirty, old fisherman he was) was fearfully afraid some one else would find it out; so don't betray me." And she hurried away with a parting smile that made the dusty office seem duller than ever when he got back to it and reluctantly commenced setting up his editorials, for Mr. Snively constituted the whole working force of the Monitor.

And his task, too, seemed harder than ever, after the interruption. Thoughts of his pretty visitor kept intruding themselves into the midst of his most impassioned apeals to the voters of Meloogie.

How blue here eyes were and what bewitching little rings of hair the wind had blown up under the big hat.

And then the fishing.

The editor of the Monitor shook his head. Could it be possible any man living could have a soul so lost to honor as to play a joke on a woman who looked like that? It seemed impossible and yet Mr. Snively was as sure there wasn't a fish within a mile of Patchang as he was that there wasn't a free silver man in Meloogie.

Perhaps then Mrs. Tracy was sitting in that yawl vainly waiting for the bite he felt certain she wouldn't get if she sat there till the United States got an honest government. And he was actually staying at home and deliberately abandoning a friend to such a fate!

As this agonizing thought occurred to Mr. Snively he dropped his type and started for the door. But once there he paused and slowly returned to his form, only to find it more and more impossible to keep his mind on his work.

At last he gave up in despair.

Taking a hasty survey of what he'd already accomplished he found his columns tolerably full, with the exception of perhaps a single paragraph on the local page. By hard work the following morning he might hope to set up his pages and would trust to luck for the missing paragraph.

Like all fishermen, Mr. Snively was a firm believer in luck. He was also a man of action when he chose and within five minutes of this calculation he had locked up the editorial department and was on his way to Patchang Lake.

When he reached that shallow sheet of water a little lady in blue serge sat in a boat in the centre thereof, with an expression of virtuous indignation on her sunburnt features.

"What luck?" called the editor from the shore.

"Luck!" cried the fair sportswoman dolefully. "There's not enough water in this lake to catch cold in, much less a fish. All I've got for my trouble is a mighty poor opinion of fishermen in general and one dirty one in particular."

"Come over here," said Snively. "I know a pond not a thousand miles away where the fish bite like mosquitoes. If you'll try it I think I can raise your opinion of fishermen before I'm a day older."

One moment the man of letters hesitated on the bank and then, with an inward prayer that he might at least be spared to get out that week's paper, he waded boldly into the expanse of treacherous mud that rolled between him and beauty in distress.

The next morning the editor walked into the Monitor office clad in his Sunday clothes. With his accustomed methodical neatness he pulled off his coat, hung it behind the door, and carefully drew over his linen sleeves a pair of black alpaca ones. Then he lighted his pipe and took his place at the form.

There, just as he had left it, was the vacant space at the end of the local column still yawning for the missing paragraph.

Mr. Snively regarded it for a few minutes reflectively—then he took up his pen, as a smile gradually spread itself over his face until it reached his eyes. It still lingered there when a little later he finished and paused to glance over his work.

What he read was this:

"The editor of the Monitor, after many years of bachelorhood, has had the good fortune to incur the risk and responsibilities of matrimony. He was married this morning to Mrs. Gertrude Tracy of Elm cottage and asks the congratulations and good wishes of his subscribers in this the happiest hour of his life."—Edgar Temple Field in Chicago Times Herald.

A Record in Blood.

The record of Hood's Sarsaparilla is literally written in the blood of millions of people to whom it has given good health. It is all the time curing diseases of the stomach, nerves, kidneys and blood, and it is doing good every day to thousands who are taking it for poor appetite, tired feeling and general debility. It is the best medicine money can buy.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap. The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different; we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other lines.

Mr Sheehy Resigns

Contractor Sheehy, who was appointed inspector on the work of the Reid Street bridge, by the Council, has sent a letter to the Clerk resigning the position, giving a reason that the relations existing between Contractor Langford and himself last year in connection with the town paving, would not permit him to act. We think Mr. Sheehy did the proper thing, under the circumstances. The troubles in connection with the granolithic pavement last year were unfortunate not only to Mr. Sheehy, but also to the town.

A Rough Passage

Mr. R. C. McHarrie, Manager of the local branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, arrived home after a most delightful holiday spent in England, Ireland and Scotland. On his return trip, the ship in which he took passage, was caught in the tail end of the great tornado which devastated Texas. Mr. McHarrie has been across, back and forth, ten times, and he has never seen anything to compare with the storm. It was thought the vessel would founder in the awful sea that she encountered. Passengers were in despair, praying, crying, and in some cases acting as if demented. The vessel was eleven days in making the run.

Cowslip Farm

The Holyoke World, of Holyoke, Mass., under date of Friday, September 7th, has the following to say about the great pastoral comedy-drama, Cowslip Farm, which will be seen at the opera house, Tuesday, Sept. 25. Edward Warren and Marguerite Hammond made their initial bow to an Holyoke aufience at the opera house last evening, and both scored a decided success. Cowslip Farm is a remarkably interesting play, with a strong fund of dramatic and humourous situations. The comedy, which stands out very strong, predominates, and the parts of Aunt Melinda Jane Boggs and Trix are delightful and original creations. Mr. Warren in his make up as the New England spinster, and in his cake walk with Miss Hammond, was decidedly ludicrous, and his specialties are bright and novel. Miss Hammond is a clever soubrette, a good singer, and a vivacious actress. All her specialties were well received. The supporting company is far above the average. William H. Malone, Ethel Pulsifer, Lawrence Wakefield, and Roy Stanton deserve commendation. Miss Corinne Cushman and Miss Susane White are entitled to special mention for their clever work, and the magnificence of their costumes. The farm yard scene in act 3 made a beautiful setting, and the old kitchen in the last act was perfect. Cowslip Farm and company deserve success. Seats now on sale.

He was about 35 years of age and was married, his wife, mother and other relatives residing in Lindsay. The remains were taken to Lindsay yesterday, where interment will take place under the auspices of the Canadian Order of Foresters, of which the deceased was an esteemed member.

Daylight Robbery

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—I wish to say a few words through the medium of the Times, which people should ponder over. What I refer to is the daylight piracy to which those who have children attending the Public Schools and Collegiate Institutes are subjected in bringing home to the average wage-earning man the absolute rottenness of the whole system. It is a sort of legalized thimble-rigging game, for which pater familias is the victim every deal, and spoils are divided between the plunderers.

The average wage-earning man with a family of two or three children passing through school here has a more serious problem confronting him than the payment of his taxes. It costs $5 or $6 for school books for a boy or girl going from the Public School into the Collegiate, and about as much in proportion for others passing from form to form in the Public School. And these books are only good for a certain time, when the Education Department "changes" them in order that the publishers and writers of new books can rake in some more "change." It is a case of deliberate hold-up, and the parent has no remedy except to pay, pay, pay. No use trying to save the books now being used by Tommy or Mary in the higher forms of Collegiate for Johnny, who is coming along a form or two behind. By the time Johnny is ready for the higher forms the books will be "changed." Many households in Ontario contain costly monuments of this plunder in the shape of discarded books, but the wrong must be endured. The Education Department has been so long at this kind of work that it has become calloused, and works into th ehands of publishers and writers quite naturally.

The evil might be lessened, if not abolished, if Boards of Trustees would wake up and do their duty. Let these Boards protest against the outrage on behalf of the people whose interests they are supposed to be guarding, and the Education Department will be forced to do something in the way of reform.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I am, &c.,

A SUFFERER.

THE LIFT LOCK.

The Work on This Wonderful Structure Progressing Steadily.

The work on the lift lock is now assuming more definite shape. It is fast becoming the chief attraction for strangers in town as well as citizens, who visit it in large numbers, especially on Sunday. The main concrete wall is now well advanced, and the bridge, which will be entirely of concrete, over which the canal will pass, is assuming shape. The lock will be one of the engineering wonders of the continent. It will, we understand, be the only structure of the kind on the continent. A similar Lock is to be built on the upper end of the canal. The Ashburnham lock will not be completed until next fall.

DIED IN TORONTO.

Walter B Rubidge Passes Away in Toronto at a Ripe Old Age

The Toronto Globe yesterday contained the following account of the death of Mr. Walter B. Rubidge, barrister, brother of the late John D. P. Rubidge, of town.

The death occurred yesterday of Mr. Walter B. Rubidge, barrister, at his late residence, 685 Euclid Avenue. The deceased was in his 74th year, and had lived in Peterborough, Hamilton and Brantford before his removal to Toronto two years ago. He was the son of Capt. Charles Rubidge, R.N., and was born at the family residence, "Woodland," near Peterborough. He studied law with the late George B. Hall, M.P., of Peterborough, and Mr. (now Sir) George Burton, in Hamilton. Upon being admitted to the bar, he formed a partnership with the late John Cameron. In 1856 he returned to Peterborough, and there practiced his profession until the breaking out of the American rebellion, when he was appointed passport officer for the County of Peterborough. In 1863, through the influence of his brother-in-law, the late Chief Justice Wood of Manitoba, he was appointed Clerk of the County Court, Deputy Clerk of the Crown, and Surrogate Registrar for the County of Brant, which offices he held up to the time of his resignation, two years ago.

In 1852 Mr. Rubidge married Miss H. A. Marter, sister of Mr. G. F. Marter, M.P.P. She died six years ago. Four sons and four daughters survive them.

"It was a slick trick, and it worked," said a well-known conductor who runs in here, in telling of an incident of his last trip down to this place.

"Just before we left Dallas," said he, "I noticed a young lady and two young men get on the train and when I came through a little later to colect the tickets, found them sitting together in a double seat. When I stopped at their seat the man sitting next to the aisle handed me two tickets, one for a man and wife and a single ticket to Galveston. I took them, thinking nothing of it, but on passing back and forth through the car several times after that I noticed that the man and wife did not seem to be getting along very well together; in fact, their actions toward each other would lead one to believe they were perfect strangers, and during the day their actions became more and more noticeable until my suspicions began to be aroused, but I held my peace until almost here, when, finding the one who had handed me the tickets alone in the smoking compartment, I asked him if something was not wrong, whereupon he 'fessed up' and frankly told me the whole story.

"He said he and the young man sitting opposite to his when he handed me the tickets were from Kansas City, who having lost their positions in that city, had started to come south to see if they could find something to do down here in Texas, and that they had gotten as far as Dallas when their money gave out, and having been assured of getting positions in Galveston, wanted to come on here. One of them by getting in a day and a half's work, had made $3, but as that would not bring them here they were in as bad a plight as before. The next day however, they happened to drop into a ticket broker's office, but the only thing he had in the way of tickets to Galveston was one for a man and wife. After consulting with each other they hit upon a plan and decided to take the ticket, paying their $3 for it. They then went to the depot and hung around the ticket window until they saw a young woman buy a ticket for Galveston, and followed, boarded the train with and deliberately sat down beside her, so when I came through the man sitting beside her politely took the ticket from her hand and passed it over to me, thus giving the impression that she was his wife, and in this manner the two adventurers came here.—Galveston Daily News.

Yearly Cost of Soldiers.

The yearly cost to the state of the American soldier is about $1,875. This individual sum is largely in excess of the cost of European troops. Great Britain, which has the smallest army of all the great powers, expends, roughly, $465 on each of her soldiers; Austria, with a war footing of over a million men, expends $225 per man, and Germany and France, the two military powers of Europe with the biggest armies, are equal with an individual outlay of $215. Italy, with the second smallest army, spends $190 on every soldier, she maintains; and Russia's cost is estimated at $135. In 1886 each soldier cost the United States $1,300, so that the lapse of fourteen years exhibits no small difference in national cost per man.

—THE—
CANADA BUSINESS COLLEGE
Chatham, Ont.

Is doing more for its pupils than any other business school in Canada, or perhaps, than any other in the continent. How can we do this? First.

First: By giving them a practical, not a theoretical, preparation for business life.

Second: The business public has learned that there is that vast difference between the graduates of this school and those of other colleges, hence the strong demand for our graduates, which has enabled 220 to be placed in good positions between Sept., '99, and July, '00 a period of ten months.

The good work still goes on, and 72 have been placed between July 1st and Sept. 1st of this year.

ANNOUNCEMENT

To the People of Peterborough and vicinity:

Saturday, September 15th, China Hall was re-opened with a stock which for quality, completeness and variety is unsurpassed in Canada.

During the last six months we have been collecting these goods from every quarter of the globe, and the result will make of China Hall a veritable art gallery.

Added to a full line of staple and domestic wares, we show direct importatians from Egypt, Japan, Austria, France, Germany, Spain, Bohemia, England, America, and last, but not least, from Canada.

This collection comprises the newest styles in Dinner and Tea, Toilet and Salad Sets, Lamps, Cutlery, Silverware, Flower Pots, Cut Glass and Bric-a-bac, including specimens of such reliable wares as Habiland, Doulton, Ridgeway, Wedgewood and Farnival, Royal Bonn, Carlsbad, Satsenna, Awata, Lenara, Yokohama, Terra Cotta, Hand-engraven Egyptian and Cloisonnee.

Several of these lines are now placed on sale for the first time in Peterborough, and a few of them for the first time in Canada. Amongst these unique pieces may be seen (with a printed guarantee enclosed) a facsimile of the celebrated Portland vase which made Josiah Wedgewood famous.

China Hall in its present form is a model of convenience and beauty, and it has now every facility for the carrying on of an up-to-date trace. A prompt and courteous service may be relied upon, while a cordial welcome is assured to all visitors whether purchasers or not.

For the convenience of customers a cosy waiting room is provided, which we trust may be appreciated to the extent of being used and of becoming a rendezvous for ladies who wish to meet down town.

The accomplishment of all this has been no small task, and it is hoped that the public will take pride in this new store which, without exception is the handsomest of its kind in Canada.

A few words as to our future policy. The business will be conducted upon a cash basis, with one price to all and positively no reduction from the marked figures, which will be as low as is compatible with the character of the goods, our aim being that customers should remember the quality after the price has been forgotten. No article will be represented as being better than it really is. Special attention given to matching and mending.

Thanking our numerous customers for their many expressions of goodwill, and for their adherence to us while in cramped quarters, we shall now take pleasure in welcoming them to our commodious and artistic premises at 36 George-st.

STRIKERS STILL CONTINUE TO GAIN GROUND.

Philadelphia and Reading Co., Which Had Thirty-four Mines in Operation a Week Ago, Now Has Only 12 - Other Mines Stopped.

(Special to The Times.)

Philadelphia, Sept. 25.—At the beginning of the second week of the anthracite coal strike the collieries stand in a considerably stronger position as regards numbers than at the opening of the struggle. The most striking confirmation of this statement is to be found in the case of the Philadelphia & Reading Co. A week ago this concern had 34 collieries at work. To-day there are only 13 of its mines in operation, a decrease of three upon yesterday. In addition there are several instances where mines which were working yesterday to-day found it impossible to resume. There seems to be no prospect of an immediate truce. In fact, bitterness is increasing, as the operators are accused in some places of instigating their guards to violence, though with what foundation is not known. It is stated, however, that the operators are constantly tempted to cause riots which would result in the calling out of troops which are paid for by the State, whereas the deputies who are employed in peaceable districts must be paid by the operators themselves. This state of affairs may easily have given rise to the statement that the operators were inciting to violence. The strike officials claim that the Lattimer district, which has never been a union stronghold, has come to the fold, and that the owners cannot operate it.

MARCHING FROM MINE TO MINE.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 25.—There was more activity to-day in the coal miners' strike situation than for several days past. Men were marching from mine to mine in the Hazleton region inducing workers to quit and go home, and were careful to conduct themselves so as not to transgress the law.

Near Wilkesbarre several small washeries that had been idle were producing fuel to-day, and around Scranton the operators showed the mine operators no excuse for saying a mob was assembling.

The coming of bituminous coal to several Scranton factories heretofore using anthracite stirred up the miners, and the facts were telephoned to President Mitchell at Hazleton.

NO MINERS RESPONDED.

Shamokin, Pa., Sept. 25.—The officials of the Cameron colliery, one of the largest operations in this place, endeavored to start the works this morning, but no miners responded to the blowing of the whistles.

A fruitless attempt was made to resume work at several other collieries between here and Centralia. The men remained away.

The North Franklin and Locust Spring collieries at Treverton and Locust Gap are still working. Everything was quiet in this district this morning.

LARGE GAINS FOR STRIKERS.

Philadelphia, Sept. 25.—Where thirty-four of the thirty-nine collieries operated by the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company were in operation a week ago, thirteen were working to-day, three less than yesterday, according to reports received at the office of President Harris, of the Reading Company, to-day. West Shenandoah, which began operations yesterday morning after being shut down from Friday, was unable to resume to-day on account of being short-handed. President colliery, just outside of Shenandoah, where the militia is centered, also failed to start to-day. Wadesville colliery near Pottsville, one of the largest operated by the Reading Company did not start up because, according to the officials of the company, a shaft had broken.

GRANTED ALL DEMANDS.

Hazleton, Pa., Sept. 25.—A report was received from Jeddo that Clement Elliott, chairman of the Grievance Committee of the 1,900 Markle employes, had called the men together this morning and informed them that the company had granted all the demands presented ten days ago, with the exception of the one calling for a reduction of the price of powder, and that company agreed to arbitrate this grievance.

When John Marke, managing partner of G. B. Markle & Company, was told by a reporter for the Associated Press of the report, he refused either to confirm or deny it. Mr. Markle said he would deliver the answer to the Associated Press at 4 o'clock and that the mine workers would have it before that hour. He would not say whether they already knew the company's intention.

Shenandoah, Pa., Sept. 25.—Reports received here to-day from various points indicated that out of 55 collieries in Shamokin, Mahanoy City, Mount Carmel, and the local districts only five were in operation.

OPERATORS CLAIM A GAIN.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 25.—The coal operators of the Wyoming Valley claimed to have a shade the best of the union this morning. Several washeries that were idle yesterday resumed operations to-day. The big mines were all idle, with the exception of the colliery of the West End Company at Macanaqua. The West End official said they were in better shape this morning, than any day since the strike began, fully 80 per cent. of their men being at work.

At strike headquarters it was said the employes resuming work were mostly bosses, and older employes working on monthly salaries, and that none of the union men had gone back to work.

IN THE LACKAWANNE DISTRICT.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 26.—There was no apparent change to-day in the anthracite miners' strike in the Lackawanna region, but extra guards were placed about some of the breakers and the owners were enclosing their property with wire rope fences.

At several mines where attempts were made to get engineers and firemen to take up the work of laborers to-day the men refused, and were at once discharged.

Watchmen at the Bellevue colliery kept up firing at intervals during the night, but no crowds were attracted, as the strike leaders had warned the men to keep clear of any alarming indications and give a disposition in one way or another to move things.

In the neighborhood of Shenandoah, where the soldiers were located everything was quiet, though the Reading Company had three less mines at work to-day than yesterday. Taking the entire coal field as a whole it might be said that fewer men were at work to-day than at any time since the strike began, and consequently less coal was being produced.

From Hazleton comes the interesting report that Markle & Company had granted some of the demands made by their men ten days ago, leaving to arbitration, however, the main question of a reduction in the price charged to miners for powder.

AN ADVANCE TO $7.

Toronto, Sept. 25.—The coal situation today gives promise of an advance of price from $6 to $7 per ton. If this advice is decided upon it will simply be a measure of protection on the part of the coal dealers against the grasping monied people of the city. According to one of the most prominent coal dealers in the city, the rush of grabbers has been disgraceful. The rich and well-to-do citizens have flooded the dealers with orders and are showing the greatest anxiety to get their cellars filled before the price goes up. They have shown the utmost selfishness during the past week, and are careless of the needs of the poorer citizens. The only way to check these grabbers, says the dealer, will be to raise the price at least one dollar a ton. But he says the poorer citizens who have no money on hand to lay in stores of fuel at present need not feel alarmed. The price of coal will soon come down again, as it is not thought that the strike will last longer than a month. There is not the slightest cause for worry on the part of householders of moderate means who cannot buy coal this month.

It is now said that Mr. Goschen, First Lord of the Admiralty, who declines reelection to Parliament, will be made a peer and remain in the Cabinet if the Salisbury Government is returned.

TORIES TOO TANGLED.

Said to be in a Demoralized Condition Here.

KENDRY OR FOSTER, WHICH?

It is Reported That Hon. Geo. E. Foster is Looking to Peterborough.

And Would Accept Nomination if Tendered Him—Strange Apathy of the Local Conservative Leaders—Is There an African on the Fence?

There is considerable feeling amongst the rank and file of the local Conservatives over the apathy of the leaders in regard to the approaching elections. It is incomprehensible that no move has yet been made towards holding a convention to nominate a candidate. It is openly whispered that those Conservatives who voted for Mr. Stratton—commonly known as Stratton Conservatives—are not likely to return to the fold, and that Mr. Kendry should he again be the party candidate, will be "thrown." Many who claim to be honest Conservatives, pretend to feel sore over the way Mr. Garvin was treated at the last local elections by men who regard themselves as leaders of the Tory party, and who must have stampeded to the other side in order to give Mr. Stratton his majority of 1000. No one believes that it was the ordinary rank and file who so bolted, but rather the men who shouted loudest for Mr Garvin, while they marked their ballots against him. In view of this, it is not to be wondered at that the honest Conservatives are suspicious.

A Toronto Rumor

The Telegram, publishes the following from its Peterborough correspondent—A rumour that has gained considerable currency here, and up to the present has not been contradicted, states that Hon. George E. Foster is to be the Conservative candidate in West Peterborough, James Kendry, M. P., retiring. Mr. Foster visits the town at an early date and he will be offered the nomination, according to arrangement by the Tory leaders with the party here. Should Foster enter the field, the Grits will likely withdraw their candidate, J. H. McClellan, and place a stronger man against him.

Mr. James Stevenson, ex-M. P., was seen by the Times in regard to the above paragraph, and stated that there was not a word of truth in it. The fact that Mr. Foster is not likely to be accommodated with a constituency in Ottawa, and will have to look elsewere, however, lends some strength to the rumor. Mr. Foster would carry West Peterborough, without a doubt, and if the matter is arranged with Mr. Kendry, there may be a possibility of having for our representative in the next Parliament, one of the brightest statesmen in the country.

TO BUILD A GIANT LINER

NEW HAMBURG-AMERICAN SHIP WILL BE 750 FEET LONG.

She Will Carry 2,000 Passengers and a Vast Cargo—North German Lloyd Company's Plans.

New York, Sept. 25.—Again English and American shipowners may open their eyes with wonder, for news has come across the water that still another giant transatlantic liner is being built for one of the rival German steamship companies. The new vessel has been ordered from the Belfast yards of Harland & Wolff by the Hamburg-American Line.

Although the order for the liner was given several months ago, very little is known of the plans, except that the vessel is to be 750 feet long, with correspondingly startling measurements of beam, depth and capacity. She will not be a record breaker as to speed, but in every other particular, if the builders carry out their contract, she is to excel any vessel afloat.

Three years is the construction time limit, the plan being to launch the new boat during the latter part of 1903. From a reliable authority it was learned yesterday that the vessel's beam is to measure 76 feet, that she will carry something like 2,000 passengers, and that her hold will accommodate about 12,000 tons of cargo, dead weight. Her speed will not exceed eighteen knots and she will probably not attain even that, but every detail of her structure that conduces to her interior comfort and safety is to be of the most improved model.

The biggest ocean liner to-day is the Oceanic of the White Star Line, but she is only 704 feet long and has a beam of only 68 feet, 4 1-4 inches. Then the Oceanic accommodates but a few more than 1,700 passengers, nor is she designed for much of a freight carrier. Taking her altogether she is far behind the projected Hamburg-American monster.

And the Deutschland—the fast record smasher—must lose much of her claims to distinction in 1903, for then she will only be the third or fourth largest vessel in the world, despite her 684 feet and her long decks. But as she, too, belongs to the Hamburg-American people, her envy will not be overpowering.

Not long ago it was announced that the North German Lloyd Line was building a ship 752 feet long. Whether these are the exact dimensions or not is uncertain, but the line is undoubtedly having a very big boat put together at Stettin by the Vulcan Shipbuilding Company. This one, as well as the one at Belfast, is due for her trial trips in 1903, so seamen can look forward to some more rival performances, such as have been given recently by the Deutschland and the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse.

For the new North German Lloyd ship a speed of twenty-five knots per hour is proposed, but the Deutschland's owners think that vessel has reached the highest limit of practical ocean travelling, so in the building of the 750-footer they are not going to bother themselves with speed at all. The Deutschland, they say, will attend to the projected Stettin racer easily enough.

BOER GUNS FOUND AT HECTOR SPRUIT

Eight Miles of Rolling Stock has Been Captured.

SKIRMISH AT ELAND'S RIVER

Two Hundred Men in Garrison Defeat Five Hundred Boers.

(Special to The Times.)

Cape Town Sept. 25.

A large number of guns, mostly damaged have been found along the Crocodile river, especially near Hector Spruit. Practically the whole of the republican railway stock has been captured on the Selate line. There are eight miles of Vehicles the majority being in good condition.

London, Sept. 25.—The Guards Brigade, which has held the post of honor throughough the campaign, led the way into Komatipoort, the final objective point of Roberts' strategy. That brigade has marched in the course of the year from De Aar to Magersfontein under Lord Methuen and to Bloemfontein, Pretoria and the Portuguese frontier under Lord Roberts, and it now stands guard over the back door of the neutral base through which the Dutch received their arms and and supplies. The war has ended with the destruction of their guns and ammunition on the edge of the frontier and with the disarming of refuguees by the Portuguese officials.

Lord Roberts has finished his work, and can return to England after proclaiming a state of peace, in which belligerents will be liable to summary punishment as outlaws and murderers. The Delagoa Bay Railway, which has played an important part in the Boer plan of campaign, will now become an instrument of peace. It is nominally owned by the Holland company, but has virtually been the property of the Transvaal Government. The Holland directors, in order to prevent the confiscation of this railway by the British military authorities, will be anxious to clear the line and put it in working order to Pretoria for supplying the army of occupation and for the resumption of mining operations in the Rand.

The interests of the Portuguese traders are identical with those of the directors. The neutral base, without which the Boers could not have armed and kept up a year's campaign, is converted by the comptetition of Robert's campaign into a centre of commerce with the victorious army and the mining camps which are behind it. Boer refugees are disarmed and even imprisoned, and merchants at Delagoa Bay are setting down at once for a period of brisk trade with Pretoria and Johannesburg. The railway bridge at Komatipoort has been saved, probably through the good offices of the Portuguese, and raiders who interefre with the prompt resumption of business all along the line will have no friends at Delagoa Bay. The entire influence of the neutral base will now be thrown on the British side and against the prolongation of a hopeless struggle by train-wreckers and roving bands of guerillas.

BOER DEFEAT AT ELANDS'S RIVER

Pretoria, Sept. 25.— Gen. Erasmus' commando of five hundred men, which has been occupying Bothasberg, descended on Elands river station yesterday with two guns and a pompom. The garrison, which nnumbered less than two hundred, drove the Boers off with rifle fire. The Boer casualties are stated to have been eleven. Communication was interrupted for some hours, but has been restored.

PRINCE TUAN AT THE HEAD OF GOVERNMENT

The German Note Has Evidently Brought Back the Courage of the Chinese

RUSSIA AND JAPAN ACCEPT GERMAN PROPOSAL.

The Former "Assents in Principle" While the Latter "Emphatically Approves"—Eleven More Missionaries and 45,000 Catholic Converts Killed.

(Special to The Times.)

Berlin, Sept. 26.

The Cologne Gazette publishes a statement, evidently inspired, to the effect that with the exception of Great Britain, all the powers have replied to the German note, and that all with the exception of the United States agree with the German proposal in essential. The appointment of Prince Tuan as the head of the Chinese Government may be regarded, says the Cologne Gazette, as the first fruits of American policy. The German note has evidently revived the courage of the Chinese, and their cherished speculation regarding discord among the powers.

The act of the Empress in appointing Prince Tuan is a slap in the face for the whole world, but China will deceive herself in this matter, as she has done in others, even assuming that active work against China should be left along a part of the powers. That part will be strong enough to impose its will on China.

London, Sept. 25.—The powers still squabble over methods of procedure in China, while the Boxers of that country continue in their gentle habitude of slaying or torturing European missionaries and their converts. Distinguished authorities state that the powers are agreed that it is inadvisable to partition China or to absorb any more of her territory, but that reparation for past outrages, a guarantee against recurrence and the establishment of a central Government must be insisted upon. How these three objects are to be accomplished the diplomatists of Europe cannot find out. Hence the deadlock in China, which Li Hung Chang joyfully announces may not end for some time. The objection of the United States to take any step which might hurt the feelings of the poor and trustful Chinamen will be hailed with satisfaction by the Orientals, says the Ambassador at London, stating something which everybody knew as soon as the terms of the American note were published. Lastly comes the announcement that Russia and Japan are practically agreed upon the wisdom of the German note, which suggest a demand for the surrender of the murderers before negotiations are entiered into, but that Russia assents in so reserved a manner so to suggest her desire to be in a position to change her mind if necessary. Japan, however, is positive and determined, and if she and Germany are joined by Britain the impasse may be relieved and a demand formulated which will lead to something.

ANSWER TO THE GERMAN NOTE.

Berlin, Sept. 25.—The Foreign Office officials here inform the Associated Press that Russia and Japan have formally answered the German note, "particularly emphasizing their agreement to the proposition to have the Ministers designate the guilty." Great Britain has not yet formally answered. The correspondent of the Associated Press finds that political circles here are confident Great Britain will not adopt the United States position.

BLOODSHED CONTINUES

London, Sept. 25.—The China Inland Mission has received a cable message announcing the murder of eleven missionaries at Sih Cheo Taning Yah Yang, in the Province of Shan Si.

CONFIRMED IN LONDON.

London, Sept. 25.— According to a despatch received here from Berlin the Russian and Japanese replies to Germany's proposal, received yesterday, asserted that Russia "assents in principle," while Japan's answer is an "emphatic approval."

LI HUNG CHANG'S OPINION.

Tien Tsin, Sept. 22, via Taku, Sept. 24.—Li Hung Chang will proceed to Pekin in a few days. He remains under close Russian guard, and access to him in difficult. In the course of a conversation with a representative of the Associated Press Earl Li said he did not believe that an early settlement of the difficulty was probable, because of the number of nations to be treated with. He thought the attack upon the Pei Tang forts had got complicated the situation.

LU TAI OCCUPY

Taku, Sept. 24.—A Russian force of six companies of infantry and two squadrons of cavalry occupied the Lu Tai forts last night without suffering any casualties. The Chinese had previously fled.

The Russians are rebuilding the Tien Tsin railway station, and others, and others, and the prospect that the railway will be handed over to another power is remote. The Russian Minister M. De Giers, will remain at Pekin for the present.

An expedition will start from Taku for Pao Ting Fu on September 29.

BUTCHERED IN COLD BLOOD.

Hong Kong, Sept. 25.—Advices from Canton say that a boat load of native Christain women at Kum Chuk on West River, was fired upon and that the women were then taken ashore and butchered in cold blood.

Native Christians are flocking to Canton from the surrounding country. Canton itself is quiet. The native city is full of bad characters anxious to create trouble, but they lack leaders.

NATIVE CATHOLICS MASSACRED.

New York, Sept. 25.—Despatches received in this city announce that among the missionaries killed by Chinese in the massacre in the Yun Nun province were Bishop Fantosati and Father Quirine, of the Roman Catholic Church. It was said that the bishop died after the most awful torture. No direct word in the confirmation of this particular report has yet come to Catholic missionary authorities in this city.

A telegram from the Convent of the Holy Soul, in Shanghai, has been received, however, to the effect that 45,000 native Catholoics had been massacred in different parts of the Empire.

PRIVATE NEELD DEAD

SET BACK TO ERASMUS.

Pretoria, Sept. 24.—Gen. Erasums' commando of five hundred men, which has been occupying Bothasberg, descended to Elands river station yesterday with two guns and a pompom. The garrison, which numbered less than two hundred, drove the Boers off with rifle fire. The Beor casualties are stated to have been eleven. Communication was interrupted for some hours, but has since been restored.

"BULLER GETS PRISONERS.

London, Sept. 24.—A despatch from Lord Roberts, dated Pretoria, Sept. 22, says.—

"Buller reports that 58 burghers surrendered to him at Spitzkop, 20 at Devil's Knuckles, and several more at Lydenburg. Some of the Imperial Light Horse, while returning from French's expedition, aptured 20 prisoners and 200 rifles.

"Knox reports from Kroonstad that a detachment under Lieut. Best opened fire at midnight on some Boers who were crossing the line, and this morning found two abandoned waggons, one of which was full of dynamite. Dynamite had also been laid under the railway line in several places, but the any damage being done."

BURGHERS TO HARASS THE LINES.

Lorenzo Marquez, Sept. 24.—British patrols have reached the Portuguese frontier. Boers continue to cross above and below the portion held by the British. The riding horses of the Boers are in a terrible condition.

"Messrs, Steyn and Reitz," says a despatch to the Daily Mail from Lorenzo Marquez, "will remain with the fighting burghers, and it is estimated that a force of Boers aggregating from 7,000 to 21,000 is planning to harass the British lines of communication."

WEATHER NOTES.

Probs. Strong winds and gales, southeastly to south-westerly; warm with occasional showers or thunderstorms to-day. Strong winds and gales, westerly to northwesterly, occasional showers and turning colder.

The severe storm which was centred in Manitoba last night has now reached Lake Superior; it is less energetic this morning but it promises to cause a general gale over the lakes, the hardest blow to occur from the west and north-west on Wednesday. Winter prevails in the Northwest Territories; snow is falling generally and Edmonton records as much as 20 inches. Warnings have been hoisted on all lakes since Monday morning.

THE ORGAN AND THE NEWSPAPER.

The ridiculous lengths to which the politicians and their organs are going in the matter of election prophecies is aptly hit off by the Winnipeg Tribune in the following paragraph—

"From a perusal of the extreme Liberal press of Ontario it would seem certain that scarcely a single Conservative will be elected in that province. On the other hand there is but one conclusion to draw from the rabid Conservative press, and that is the dire prospect of not a half dozen Liberal members from our old sister to the east. The same applies to the whole Dominion. One side says it's solid for Laurier and the other declares saltpetre couldn't save a baker's dozen of Liberals. And the extreme partizan press goes on blindly in the belief that people take stock in such silly forecasts."

In Peterborough we have a peculiar condition of affairs. When elections come round the two party organs put their heads together for what there is in it and divide the spoils. This method of doing business is perhaps wise from a financial standpoint, but it naturally causes the electors to become somewhat restless. Politics are a queer game.

Shall We Be Indians?

It is perhaps presumptuous for ordinary mortals to dispute the expectation of a professor of anthropology in the University of Chicago, but when Dr. Frederick Starr, of that institution, launches the opinion that the physical environment of the North American continent will make us, our heirs and assigns, all red Indians after awhile, the hour for presumption has arrived. He has measured the cheek bones of 5,000 Pennsylvania Dutch children, and has found lengthening faces, heightening cheek bones and a general tendency towards the reproduction of aboriginal features. Moreover, he says the French of Paris distinguish Americans from Englishmen already by the resemblance of the former to Indians, with whom the French are, of course, intimately acquainted.

It has been supposed by the rest of us, who are unenlightened by the special brand of scientific environment taught in the University of Chicago, that artificial environment tended continually to overcome the impress of natural surroundings. The continual advance of all American people toward a higher civilization, with its accompanying power of developing rounded and normal character, and multiplying its opportunities through better wages for labor, better homes, better schools and better conditions of every kind, must necessarily bring about a profound modification of the aboriginal type. The great diversity of races and climates to be found in Canada and the United States makes any generalization from a single race

EDITORIAL NOTES.

As a matter of genuine public utility, would wireless telegraphy benefit the country more than wireless politics and legislation?

* * *

A war correspondent in South Africa reports that Oom Paul's hair has turned a snowy white. Considering the amount of bloodshed the old man is responsible for it would have been more appropriate had his whiskers turned red.

Contradictory as it may seem, the chief asset of the political writer on the party newspaper is his liability.

And now we are told China is to be dismembered. From present indications the operation will be more of a Jack the Ripper performance than a medical school demonstration.

As Mr. Smiff Sees us.

The Bobcaygeon Independent, in speaking of West Peterborough's politics, says—"Political circles are becoming stirred up. The Reform nominee, Mr. C. H. McClellan, is a likely man but will have a hard time to beat Kendry. There is however, a bit of a split in the Conservative ranks. It has arisen over the support of Hon. J. R. Stratton in the past by a large number of Conservatives who manage to keep in touch with all the good things going. It no doubt is to their material interests to do so but the trouble is that when the Dominion elections arrive the Stratton Conservatives go back like the spring of a lock to their old places in the Conservative ranks gushing and cooing as if they had always been faithful and displaying their usual keenness for the loaves and fishes. Naturally it has struck a good many that men who will give Mr. Stratton a vote will also give him information on the required tips as it were and it is this liklihood that has aroused a strong prejudice against the jumpers. What will become of it will be seen but many of the really faithful are beginning to feel that this kind of a game is played out at any rate at their expense."

BRITONS EYESIGHT

An Optician Says the Strong Sunlight Here Hurts the Eyes.

"There are more people with defective eyesight in the cities of this country than you will find in Great Britain or Ireland," said the naturalized New Yorker who served in the British army when he was a very young man and who is now an optician. "I do not judge by the number of people who wear glasses here, as in American cities glasses are worn if there is the slightest trace of nearsightedness, while few persons wear glasses for this cause in the old country unless they are so nearsighted that the wearing of glasses is a positive necessity. But, taking it on the whole, there are more people here whose eyesight begins to fail at a comparatively early age than in England, Ireland or Scotland, and fewer people who have exceptionally keen eyesight.

"In the British army you will find a dozen men with exceptionally good eyesight for one you will find in the American army, and I know a good many soldiers in this country. I once knew a private of the First Leicester regiment who has since been killed in the fighting near Ladysmith. This man had such keen sight that he could tell the time by a church clock at a distance of several miles, yet, strange to relate, he could not read very small print in a book. I also knew a man in one of the Lancer patrols who had wonderful eyesight. In the Transvaal long ago what appeared to his watchful chums one day as a mass of veldt heather, dim and blurred in the distance, was seen by him as an ambuscade cunningly concealed and bristling with Boer riflemen. His splendid sight on that occasion saved him and his comrades an unpleasant surprise.

"I have heard of American soldiers who are sharp sighted, but, as I said before, their number is much smaller in proportion than in the British army. One of these Americans is a man named Cullen, who can see objects clearly at a distance of twelve miles. During the Spanish-American war, Cullen, who is an artilleryman, aided his battery very materially in sighting the guns for long ranges and always by his unaided vision.

"I account for the standard of eyesight being better in the old country than here principally because of the gray skies there. There are so few sunny days in Great Britain and Ireland that the eyes are not subjected to the same strain as in this country where there is a far greater proportion of sunny days, and the sun's rays are more vertical than in more northerly countries. The glare has undoubtedly much to do with bringing about the decay of the eyesight at an early age. Another reason is the nervous temperament of Americans. The optic nerve is very delicate and responds quickly to any strain on the nervous system."—New York Sun.

The Country Editor.

The country editor of a quarter of a century ago, says Congressman Landis, was not a college-bred man, but he could "chop logic" with the best products of the universities, quote poetry aptly, and, at an hour's notice, deliver a political speech or address a Sunday school convention. From the standpoint of the useful citizen, he was an all-around finished product.

The country editor of to-day is a different person. He is a good business man. He can "set type," but is seldom found at the "case." He employs compositors, or has ornamented his office with a type-setting machine. The young woman you see bending over the ledger is also a stenographer and typewriter. The country editor now dictates his editorials and employs a bright young man to write local news. His newspaper is printed on an improved press, the power is furnished by a gas engine or electric motor, and the paper is folded by machinery. He owns his own home, keeps his own horse and carriage, and has credit at the bank. A pleasant trip of a month is likely to be offered at any time, and he takes it gladly: while the young woman who keeps the books and the bright young man who writes local news keep the paper in a straight line.—Success.

Going to bed to tumble and toss and dream; to pursue in vain the phantom sleep through long weary hours and rise to a new day unrested and unrefreshed. That is the way with many a woman, who is tormented by the aches and pains resulting from female weakness, and other diseases of the delicate organs of women. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was made to cure just such cases and it does what it was made for. It heals ulceration and inflammation, dries debilitating drains, cures female weakness, strengthens the body, soothes the nerves and enriches the blood. It gives lasting strength for the day and sound sleep for the night.

"For three years I suffered continually," writes Mrs. L. J. Dennis, of 318 East College St., Jacksonville, Ills. "I sought relief among the medical profession and found none, until induced to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. When I commenced taking this medicine I weighed ninety-five pounds. It built me up until now I weigh one hundred and fifty-six pounds—more than I ever weighed before. I was so bad I would lie from day to day and long for death to come and relieve my suffering. I had internal inflammation, a disagreeable drain, bearing down pains and such distress every month. But now I never have a pain—do all my own work and am a strong and healthy woman. Thanks to your medicine."

Advising the Bachelors.

"Why do you not tell the bachelors how to choose wives?" asked one of them, after reading the professor's advice to the girls on the question of choosing husbands. This query is easily answered. In the first place, to label the girls who would make the best wives would be to give away state secrets. One may laugh at the follies and foibles of the sex, when, by pointing out the same, good may be done; but it would be unpardonable to give the man inside information about the sisterhood of such a grave character as that requested. A man contemplating marriage should be able to settle the question for himself. One who cannot distinguish the difference between the false and the true should remain a bachelor. Boys should not marry.

Power of Krag-Jorgensen

County Clerv Morgan of Bedford county, Kentucky has the Krag-Jorgensen gun which his brother Harry brought from Porto Rico. The gun is guaranteed to the government to shoot accurately 1,800 yards, but it will shoot three or four miles. Mr. Morgan, with several others, tested the shooting qualities of this death-dealer the other day. They went down in a valley back of Bedford and fired at a black locust tree six feet in circumference, the ball going through, struck a rock on the side of the hill a glancing lick, and went two or three feet in the ground. It was also fired at a solid sycamore tree much larger than the locust, with the same result.

BRAVEST HEARTS.

"None but idiots and lovers delight in constant repetition of the same thing."
A tiny imp of curious mien,
Arrayed in crimson slashed with green
Came dancing o'er the hill at morn,
To where I wandered all forlorn.

And though I knew him—knew him well,
I laughed to hear each tiny bell
That tinkled on his tasseled cap,
And fondled him upon my lap.

Oh, folly wise! oh, folly sweet!
A thousand times to me repeat,
The message that she sends by you;
A thousand times it will be new.

MAN OF ACTION.

John Desmond awoke at 3 in the morning and tossed about in his bed. Within his a fierce struggle between the brain and the heart was in progress. He employed every scheme that he was aware of to court or compel sleep without success.

Suddenly the truth dawned upon him, like a flood of soft warm light. He was in love. The love of his life, compared with which all his past loves were mere idle fancies. The battle was over. John Desmond, thirty, lawyer, athlete, man of the world, was conquered.

Being a man of action, Desmond no sooner acknowledged to himself that he really was in love with Kate Evanston than he resolved to marry her at the earliest possible day.

Kate Evanston was seated at the piano in the drawing room of Mrs. Saulsbury's beautiful home, where she was employed as companion to the lady of the house. The rich light of a middle May evening pervaded the place.

Her fingers wer softly bringing back memories of "Erminie" and other Casino delights as her thoughts traveled back over the past.

After a time she arose from the piano and picking up a number of photographs of John Desmond's friends that lay upon the table, seated herself upon a sofa with her back to the door and proceeded to contemplate each of them.

Desmond returning home early that evening let himself into his aunt's house very quietly with his latchkey, hoping to catch Kate at the piano in the middle of one of the sweet airs he had grown of late to love.

He approached the great drawing room doors and took a peep through the crevice which separated them. In an instant his heart seemed to cease beating with almost electrical suddenness, for the sight which 's maddened brain encountered filled him with rage and jealousy.

With a heart of ice and lead he was about to turn to leave the house as noiselessly as he had entered when the sinking sun shot a ray of light through the room and revealed something which made the blood course faster through his body than it had ever coursed before. Then he turned away, and, closing the door very softly behind him, descended the front steps of the house and passed down the street.

Mrs. Salisbury and Miss Evanston were at their dessert that evening before John appeared. He had left word in the morning that he might be detained until a late hour, and so they had not waited dinner for him.

Mrs. Salisbury noticed that her nephew seemed to be laboring under considerable restraint and bluntly asked him the cause; but the good body's solicitude met only with evasion and she presently gave up all attempts to draw anything from him and retired early to her room, leaving John and Kate together.

No sooner had Mrs. Saulsbury quitted the dining room than Desmond turned to Kate and said:

"Miss Evanston, I'm going to ask you to do me a favor."

Kate looked at him inquisitively.

"I want you," he continued, "to accompany me on a bit of a shopping tour, I've got a peculiar mission to execute and I want your help. Will you do it?"

"To be sure. I shall be most happy, Mr. Desmond," Kate answered, "and if you'll excuse me I'll be prepared in a very few minutes."

The streets were dark by the time they left the house for the shopping quarter of the town, and Kate took Desmond's arm. They had walked for a few moments in silence when Desmond said:

"I want to explain this errand to you and no doubt you, too, will think it peculiar. As a matter of fact, I've been commissioned to arrange for the wedding of two very dear friends."

"Two couples," Kate asked,, quietly.

"And was she a very dear friend?" the girl on his arm asked.

"Yes; the dearest friend I ever had among women; in fact, the only woman I ever really cared for."

In a moment John was half sorry, half glad he had said this, for he felt the little hand of his companion withdraw until only the tips of the fingers rested upon his arm. "That's a good sign," he mused.

For a moment nothing was said; then Miss Evanston broke the silence.

"And didn't she care for you?" she asked.

"Yes," he replied. "She loved me and she still loves me."

Presently Kate's curiosity got the better of her judgment and she asked: "And the man—you say he's a dear friend, too?"

"Yes," replied Desmond, "the only one I ever trusted absolutely."

"And does he know that you love her and that she loves you?"

"He knows absolutely that I love her and he is mighty certain that she loves me."

Kate was now thoroughly mystified.

"And which of them asked you to arrange for the wedding?" she asked.

"He did," replied John curtly.

Kate could only say: "Well, this mission, as you term it, certainly is inexplicable."

"Oh, no, it isn't," said John. "It will all seem quite simple when the explanation comes, if any is needed. In fact, I think it will explain itself. Just you keep those eyes of your open and you'll see it all very shortly."

Presently John touched his companion slightly on the arm and drew her into the shop of the village jeweler.

"Now, I want you to pick out the kind of a wedding ring you think the bride should get," he said.

When he had paid and pocketed the plain gold band they resumed their walk down the village street and stopped at the local office of a great metropolitan daily and Desmond, leaving Kate at one side, went up to the desk and wrote out a brief notice and was about leaving with her when the advertising clerk called after him and said that he had not told him when he wished the notice inserted.

"Why, to-morrow, of course," Desmond replied.

"Now, then," said John, as they turned into a side street, "we'll go and make arrangements for the parson to tie the knot and then we will have finished our mission."

They turned into the gravel walk leading to the Rev. John Barclay's house and had just reached the vine-clad porch when Desmond stopped suddenly, as if he had but that moment thought of an important thing and, turning to Kate, who was standing close to him, almost whispered: "I want to ask another favor of you," bending his face close to hers. "I want you to let me kiss you before we go in there." And it was done in a moment.

Before Kate could recover from the perfect amazement into which John's action had thrown her he had dexterously drawn her arm through his and, leading her up the steps, had rung the door bell.

The Rev. Mr. Barclay answered the metallic summons in person and gave John a most cordial welcome, which surprised Kate, for she had supposed John an agnostic and didn't think that he numbered members of the clergy among his intimates.

"Mr. Barclay," began John, when they had entered the snug parlor, where the good gentleman's wife was seated doing some fancy work, "I've come over to-night to arrange for a wedding and I want you to perform the ceremony."

"When is it to come off?" asked the clergyman, consulting a small date book which he drew from his waistcoat pocket.

"Immediately," said John.

"And who are the parties to be married?" he asked.

Kate could not believe her ears. She stared at John in amazement. He hastened to reassure her.

"You're excited, my dear Kate. Calm yourself."

The whole truth had come to her. The explanation of the mysterious errand was solved. She looked into John's eyes and read love unspeakable and her own answered in kind. She went through the ceremony like one in a dream and feared it was a dream and hoped if it were she would never awaken.

The parson tied the knot and John slipped the ring which Kate had selected upon her finger and then the parson insisted upon his osculatory perquisite, and then they started for home, both supremely happy. All the way back Kate clung strongly to John's arm.

Before they had quitted the Barclay garden Kate said to Desmond: "Why did you want to kiss me before we went into the house?"

"I'll tell you," returned John, promptly. "You see, Barclay and I were classmates. I know his propensities, and I didn't want to suffer the reflection in after years that he had kissed my wife first."

When the happy couple reached their home Kate said:

"You are the most audacious man I ever met. You bought the ring and even inserted a notice of our marriage before you asked me to marry you. Tell me why you did not ask me first? How did you know I'd not refuse to marry you and make a scene in the minister's house?"

And Desmond answered: "When a man of action sees a girl kissing his picture he knows that the time for action, not words, has come, and he carries her off to the parson."

Stomach to Fit.

During Sherman's "March to the Sea" rations were often scarce. One day an officer found a soldier eating a persimmon, and said to him, "Don't eat that, it's not good for you." "I'm not eatin' it because it's good," he said, "I'm trying to pucker up my stomach so as to fit the rations uncle Billy Sherman's a-given us."

The Pug—"Say, but dat new feller don't do a thing but put 'em to sleep quick."

Delays Are Dangerous.

A small pimple on your face may seem of little consequence, but it shows your blood is impure, and impure blood is what causes most of the diseases from which people suffer. Better heed the warning given by the pimple and purify your blood at once by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine cures all diseases due to bad blood, including scrofula and salt rheum.

The non-irritating cathartic — Hood's Pills.

The Bottom.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap. The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different; we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other lines.

Bad Men up North

Bob. Independent. There was a most dastardly and cowardly affair in Harburn last week. A hay rake, and other machines were taken out of a resident's barn during the night, drawn some distance away from the house, and then fence rails were laid over the machines and the whole heap set on fire. They were all destroyed completely. It is understood that the Attorney-General will put a provincial detective on the case.

BUYERS EASILY REACHED

Business men who have done little advertising would be surprised if they could know how large a proportion of newspaper readers are really interested in "ads." People like to learn facts about almost any business, and do not have to be enticed into reading an advertisement that tells something. How to reach the buyers in a community is no problem to experienced advertisers; the reputable newspaper, with the largest circulation is their efficient medium. Everybody reads the Times.

Death of H. W. Watson

The many friends of Mr. H. W. Watson, the well known painter, will be shocked to hear of his death, which took place yesterday morning. Mr. Watson had not been feeling well for some time, but no one thought the end so near. He had a severe attack of his old complaint—heart trouble—on Saturday night, from which he never recovered. Deceased was an old and respected citizen. He was an enthusiastic member of the C.O.F., and was one of the charter members of Court Peterborough. He leaves a wife and eight grown children to mourn his demise. The funeral will take place from the family residence, Aylmer street, at nine o'clock to-morrow, and proceed to St. Peter's cathedral, thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

Canadian Order Chosen Friends

Mr. W. P. Bell, P.G.C., of the Canadian Order Chosen Friends, who is in town in the interest of Peterborough Council, No. 423, has been meeting with good success in his efforts to increase the membership of the local Council. At a meeting last evening eight candidates were admitted to membership, and a number are ready to be admitted at a meeting, to be held in the Orange hall, Simcoe street, on Friday evening next. Special reductions in the membership rates have been made by the council while Mr. Bell is here.

Preparations Fully Completed for the Great Meeting

Preparations for the great Liberal meeting to be held in the Opera House this evening, are now about completed. The hall has been tastefully decorated, and the list of invited guests for platform seats has been made out and invitations issued.

Sir Richard Cartwright, the speaker of the evening, will arrive at 4.40, and will be met at the station by Messrs. Richard Hall and Peter Hamilton, and driven to the Oriental Hotel.

The Chair will be taken at 8 o'clock by Mr. Hamilton, President of the West Peterborough Reform Association. Addresses will be delivered by the Liberal candidate, Mr. J. H. McClellan, Hon. J. R. Stratton, and, of course, Sir Richard Cartwright, who will deal with the great public questions of the day in his usual exhaustive manner.

The gallery will be reserved for ladies.

A WARNING TO BOYS.

Young Son of Mr Wesley Howden Injured Last Night

Yesterday evening about 6 o'clock, the 6 year old son of Mr. Westley Howden was seriously injured by being lassoed and pulled off a rig driving along Sherbrooke street.

There are a great number of boys who have lately been doing this kind of thing, but with less serious results, and this should serve as a warning to them.

What Big "ads." Prove.

Every large newspaper advertiser has begun in a small way, gradually increasing the amount of his space as he has seen the results. Therefore every large advertisement is a proof that the experienced business man has found the newspaper essential to his success. The head of a great establishment says that when the firm had learned how to produce results "all our profits went into more newspaper advertising, until we became well known to the public." He has never reduced his "ad" space. Everybody reads the Times.

Sir Richards Arrival

Sir Richard Cartwright, Minister of Trade and Commerce, who is to address the electors in the Opera House this evening, will arrive on the afternoon C.P.R. express from Ottawa. He will be met at the station by Messrs. Richard Hall and Peter Hamilton, Honorary President and President, respectively, of the West Peterborough Reform Association, who will escort him to the Oriental Hotel, where he will remain until the hour of the meeting. To-morrow he will be shewn the town, including the lift lock on the Canal.

A Girl Lassoed

A number of small boys who attended the Wild West show a few days ago have taken to practising with a lasso. It is a common sight to see boys going about the streets with a lariat in their hand, and dropping it over their unsuspecting companion. The other day a boy lassoed a girl on a bicycle. The girl came to the ground with a hard fall, but was not badly injured. The boys who yearn to follow Buffalo Bill should confine their practise to their boy acquaintances. It would be fair game if they could be induced to lasso some of the Tory politicians, who have wandered unnoticed in the Grit camp, where they may be induced to remain, unless dragged away by force.

NEW COMMUNITIES.

Prediction of Dr. Osborne

"There is no question in my mind but that whole communities who now suffer from the bad effects of coffee, would be revolutionized if they knew of the actual facts regarding the use of coffee and the help that could be obtained from the use of Postum Cereal Food Coffee. In my own case, coffee produced dizziness, heart palpitation, and sallowness of complexion. When I abandoned the ordinary coffee and took up Postum, the difficulties were removed." Rev. W. N. Hammonton, N. J.

Some people, when trying to break off the coffee habit, feel the lack of the stimulant so much that they mix half coffee and half Postum, then gradually reduce the amount of coffee until they drink Postum alone.

Most people can break off from coffee at once if they can have the Postum Food Coffee, for the taste of the two is so much alike, that many times the change is not noticed. The user invariably improves in health, and in a month's time, shows a marked change for the better.

GEMS.

The native music of aboriginal tribes is regarded as of great importance in anthropology, and the recent British expedition to the Torres straits and New Guinea have taken steps to preserve some of them. Some of the songs heard on Murray island are already obsolete, and will, it is believed, die out with the old men of the tribes. "In savage life," says one of the members of the expedition, "the songs of a tribe are its chief heritage."

Brimingham, England, is the only place in which manufacturing crowns is an industry that may be said to flourish. The trade is principally with Africa, where the numerous kings have come to regard a crown as a far more elegant emblem of royalty than the stovepipe hat which they formerly affected. A servicable crown, gaudily decorated with imitation precious stones, may be purchased for quite a small sum.

The Japanese apply one of their many pretty ways to the launching of ships. They use no wine but hang over the ship's prow a large pasteboard cage full of birds. The moment the ship is afloat a man pulls a string, when the cage opens, and the birds fly away, making the air alive with music and the whirr of wings. The idea is that the birds thus welcome the ship as she begins her career as a thing of life.

The monster telescope at the Paris Exposition which will, it is said, bring the moon within thirty-six miles, is three times the length of the largest of its predecessors, the Yerkes telescope at Chicago. It is 197 feet long, 5 feet in diameter and weighs twenty one tons. The lenses, the largest in existence, measure over 49 inches in diameter and weigh 1,220 pounds.

The English people think that the proposed new nine-penny coin will enable them to get the better of the French, who, it is assumed, will accept the coin as the equivalent of a franc. At present, when John Bull visits Paris, he frequently has to surrender a shilling in exchange for an article the value of which is a franc.

Lord Methuen, at his own expense, has erected a monument over the grave of Count de Villebois Mareuil, bearing the following inscription: "To the Memory of Count de Villebois Mareuil, Colonel of the Foreign Legation of France and General of the Transvaal, who died on the field of honor, near Boshof April. R. I. P."

It is calculated that 200,000 women are employed as dressmakers in Paris.

Cowslip Farm

"Cowslip Farm," a very interesting and bright comedy was presented at the Opera House last night. The press of Ottawa awarded much praise to this production and our citizens were not disappointed. Edward Warren is a true comedian; his "Aunt Melinda Jane Boggs" is a true type of the New England spinster, quaint, humorous, and intensely funny. Mr. Warren's makeup is perfect, and his singing specialties are decidedly catchy. A charming soubrette truly is Marguerite Hammond, natural, vivacious, sprightly, pretty in form and face; she became a favorite from the start. The supporting company is far above the average. Special mention should be made of three excellent character studies, William Malone as Deacon Potter; Laurence Wakefield as James Henry and Ethel Pulsifer as Sophia Boggs. The Messrs. du Bedat, Smith Marshall and Stanton did good work; the part of Ashley Burton standing out as well played and distinct. Miss Cushman was naturally emotional. Miss White bright and pleasing. Both ladies wore becoming costumes. The whole performance caught the house. Mr. Warren's and Miss Hammond's cake walk is funny, and both stars sing well and know how to get the best out of their work. We believe they will always find a welcome in Peterborough.

AN EMBARRASSING POSITION.

A Laughable Incident Which Occurred in a Stewart Street Family

There are two families who for a long time have been having all kinds of experiences, from the serious to the amusing, all on account of the similarity of names. In order not to disclose their identity, we will call one family William Murphy and the other family John Murphy. Both live on Stewart street. John lives out farthest up. The other morning a married couple called at William Murphy's house. They were met at the door by the good housewife, who was told that her spouse had invited them to call. The couple was invited in, and the lady, after a brief conversation, was invited to don a wrapper and make herself at home. Mr. Murphy did not come home to dinner on that day, so Mrs. Murphy and the two guests sat down together and enjoyed a toothsome repast, for Mrs. Murphy has an established reputation as a cook. About 2 p. m., the gentleman caller made some remark about being very fond of Mrs. Murphy's brother. Mrs. Murphy replied that she had none. Then an investigation was begun, and it was discovered that the couple intended to call upon John Murphy.

Recently a load of coal came to William Murphy's house. Mr. Murphy told the driver that none had been ordered. The driver insisted, and said that he would not haul it back, and so dumped it upon the sidewalk. The next day Mr. Murphy, who kept the coal, was presented with a bill, and found that the stuff was intended for John Murphy. The other day a kitchen safe was carted to the house, and the driver insisted on leaving it there, although he was told that it had not been ordered. Although it made him angry, he was forced to take it away. John Murphy also has similar troubles, and neighbors expect shortly to hear that the members of each family are going about shaking hands with themselves and thinking they are the other ones. Both families are laying up a stock of alibis to be used in case of necessity.

SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT'S SPEECH

First Gun of the Campaign Fired in the Opera House Last Night.

FOUR YEARS' ADMINISTRATION ABLY REVIEWED.

Hon. J. R. Stratton Supports the Visiting Knight with a Vigorous Address.

Mr. J. H. McClellan Delivers His First Political Speech of the Campaign.

Notwithstanding Sultry Weather the House is Crowded to the Doors.

The opening gun in the campaign to be fought in West Peterborough was fired here last night, when Sir Richard Cartwright addressed a crowded meeting in the Opera House. The spacious building was tastefully decorated with flags, mottoes and bunting, and every particle of space was filled. The chair was occupied by Mr. Peter Hamilton, who in a brief and appropriate address called the meeting to order, and introduced the various speakers.

On the Platform.

Amongst those invited to a seat on the platform were the following gentlemen—the clergymen of the town, Messrs. Robt. Innes, E. B. Stone, W. G. Ferguson, Geo. Edminson, D. W. Dumble, Geo. E. Elliott, T. M. Hunter, J. W. Bennett, D. O'Connell, N. Laplante, O. Laplante, Richard Hall, R. S. Davidson, John Green, Dr. Gray, R. F. McWilliams, R. E. Wood, A. J. Gough, John Lang, M.P., A. Gibson, Dr. Greer, R. J. Kidd, Dr. Fife Robert Walton, Robert Graham, M. Halpin, A. L. Dams, ex-Mayor Yelland, Dr. Moher, Dr. Halliday, and others.

The chairman, in opening the meeting, said that he was pleased to see so many present, as it augured well for the success of their candidate. He welcomed Sir Richard Cartwright, who for forty years had been in public life, and whose character was without stain. They also had with them their old and tried friend, Mr. Stratton, who would also speak, and whom they also liked to hear. He would call on him to speak first.

Hon. Mr. Stratton, on rising, was greeted with prolonged applause.

HON. J. R. STRATTON

was received with prolonged and enthusiastic cheering. It gave him genuine pleasure he said, to meet so large a gathering of electors again in Peterborough, and it must also be exceedingly gratifying to both Sir Richard Cartwright and the Liberal candidate, Mr. J. H. McClellan, to see before them so many ladies eager to hear expounded the reasons why the Reform party should be sustained in the coming Dominion elections. Sir Richard has been for many long years in prominence as a statesman of the highest order of merit; his name has been a household word for intellectual force and vigorous action in the best interests of this fair Canada of ours.

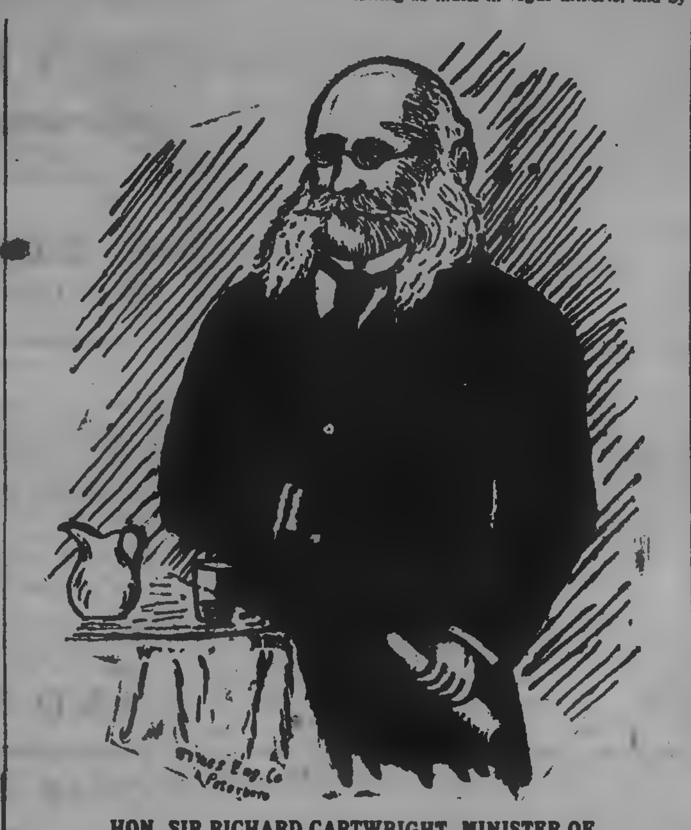
It is indeed an unalloyed pleasure for me this evening to champion so worthy a candidate as Mr. McClellan; it may be urged that he is not so widely known as the electorate would like, but I have no hesitancy in saying that in the next thirty days his popularity will be assured and after the election the Opposition will have to recognize in him West Peterborough's representative at Ottawa.

Continuing, he eulogized the candidate as a man thoroughly approachable and one capable of looking after the electorates interests at Ottawa, not only in Committee but on the floor of the House.

The honorable gentleman next scathingly criticised his evening contemporary, the Review, as equally unblushing in its misrepresentations of the Liberal course and the result of its administration as the Toronto Daily Mail. He then went on to enumerate the various directions in which the Reform Policy had been beneficially felt, and mentioned that in place of the "blue ruin," so loudly advertised by Tory organs, a huge wave of prosperity had swept over the whole Dominion. More new industries have been established in the last four years than during the whole eighteen years of Conservative administration (Cheers). We need not go outside our own town to see this; many new concerns have sprung into existence here, the capacity of which, (together with the older establishments, are now only limited by a scarity of labor (Prolonged cheers), all of which goes to show the "blue ruin" prophecy of the Tories to have been totally without cause, and the Reform Government's four years of office to have been exceptionally prosperous — there are no soup kitchens in Canada to-day (Prolonged cheering).

Touching lightly on the phenomenal increase of the lumbering industry, (and the fact that although Mr. Jas. Kendry had argued that should the Reform tariff be introduced it would mean a closing of the doors of all Canadian woolen mills, so fittingly answered by the Auburn Mills having worked night and day for three years under said tariff (Laughter). He turned his attention to a detailed review of the increase in trade and commerce felt in Peterborough, which favorable conditions are to be found in every town in Canada. The wages paid were higher and the number of men employed greater in 1899 than in 1896. We have, he continued, imported more goods into Peterborough, had more sales, and the very carters handled more stuff under Sir Wilfrid Laurier's administration than during the four years previous., $12,000,000 more of imports came into this country in 1899 than in 1896, while the increase in revenue from butter alone was $4,000,000. Then again, the quarantine regulations and embargo placed on the cattle trade by the Conservatives practically closed our doors in that direction; these drawbacks Sir Wilfrid has swept away to the country's benefit, thus securing an increase of $3,000,000 on cattle alone (Applause).

The honorable gentleman next took up the Government contract question, claiming that the system upon which contracts for public works are now awarded, does away with the nefarious practice of subletting so much in vogue hitherto, and by which working men were barefacedly robbed of their just dues. The present Government's policy is "Canada for Canadians" every time. A clause is now inserted in every contract, demanding that men must be paid the current rate of wages existing in the locality in which each work is under way. This abolution of subletting has also killed the terrible "sweating system" previously possible, and so apparent in the manufacture of military uniforms (Applause). In every contract now let for public works the Government also guaranteed the workingman his wages (Cheers).



HON. SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT, MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE.

Another fact, he continued, which tends to prove the country's present state of prosperity, is a marked decrease in the number of chattel mortgages issued; the amount of money raised in 1899 in this way was fifty per cent. less than in 1896, while in customs duties there was $49,500 more paid in 1899 than in 1896. In conclusion, the speaker raked up the Opposition's past policy in the matter of the Trent Valley Canal, which he claimed to have always been a political donkey-engine of theirs for amassing votes in its neighboring constituences (Laughter).

In 1878 Sir Charles Tupper came along with all kinds of promises; (he was going to hasten the completion of the Canal, and just to show how faithfully he kept his pledges in this matter I must inform you that during the last three years the Reform administration has spent $1,800,000 on this work, or eight times as much per year as expended by Sir Charles Tupper's party during their whole term of office (Laughter).

And now as a last word, I'll let you into a secret; when we went to Ottawa four years ago, we found that the plans for the last sections had not been even prepared, so eager were they to hurry along the Canal's completion (Laughter). Now, the Reform party has taken this matter in hand and is going through with it if you give them the opportunity, and I urge you to support Mr. J. H. McClellan, the candidate of that party which has so substantially assisted in making Canada if not a great nation, the greatest colony the world has ever seen. The honorable gentleman resumed his seat amid a perfect ovation.

MR. J. H. McCLELLAN.

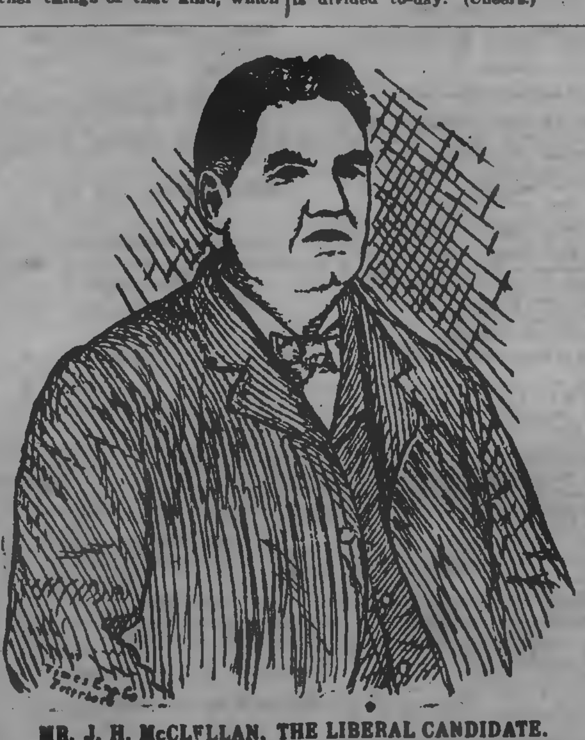
The Reform Party's candidate, although a new man in West Peterborough's political arena, was enthusiastically received. His position, he said, that of a comparative stranger to the vast audience before him, reminded him of the time when he first launched into politics. Twenty-six years ago, when he cast his first vote, which was on the Reform side, Sir Richard Cartwright, advised him, as a young man, to interest himself in his country's political affairs; this he did, working in the interest of the Liberal candidate, whose election was secured. He was glad that he took that advice, which had proved to be the stepping stone to his present proud position. He would urge every young man to follow his example, take the advice of Sir Richard Cartwright, and not only vote, but work, for their candidate (Hear, hear). Sir Richard, he continued, comes here to-night, glorying in the fact that he belongs to the great Reform party, whose policy is calculated to unite creeds and sects and which has brought peace and and prosperity to our land. He comes proud in the fact that every pledge given by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1896 has been carried out to the letter, and that the prediction that the dark clouds of adversity would soon give way to the brilliant sunshine of prosperity under the Reform administration has come to pass.

He, the speaker, was pleased to see so many ladies present, to-night as they were in 1896; they are able to judge whether the claim then made by Conservatives that, should they not be returned to power "blue ruin" would prevail, have come to pass or not. On the contrary they see before them Canada enjoying a phenomenal state of prosperity, and on this recommendation he would ask them to use their influence in his behalf with their husbands, their brothers and other girls' brothers (Laughter).

In conclusion, he would not detain his audience to-night with a lengthy speech; they would have, he hoped, many opportunities of hearing him during the campaign, when so brilliant an orator and so capable a statesman as Sir Richard Cartwright was not present. He would therefore give way to one more capable than himself of dealing with the questions at issue, and hoped that the returns at the election will show that West Peterborough has been redeemed in his election as a member under the Laurier administration (Cheers).

SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT.

Sir Richard Cartwright was received with great cheering. He said—Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen—A good many years have elapsed since I last had the pleasure of addressing an audience in the good town of Peterborough, and, as might be expected, in the interval a considerable number of changes have come over the political kaleidoscope. Nevertheless, I hope to be able before I sit down to show to you that despite the asperaions of their opponents, the Liberal party are, after all is said and done, where the Liberal party always were; that the Liberal party are prepared to redeem the pledges in power which they gave in Opposition; and that it simply requires a fair examination of the facts of the case, a fair understanding of the changes which have occurred in the position of Canada within the last few years, and notably within the last four years, in order to be able to prove to you, as I hope I shall succeed in proving to-night, that the Liberal party in power are prepared to the fullest extent to make good the statements and assurances which the Liberal party made to you when out of power. I propose to deal with the question of the expenditure and the financial position of Cannada. I propose to deal with the somewhat intricate and complicated subject of the preferential tariff in favor of Great Britain and its effects. And I propose, in the last tain charges of corruption, as to certain charges of corruption, as t ocertain charges of malfeasance, and as to improper dealings with ballots and other things of that kind, which have been pretty freely preferred against us by our Conservative opponents; and I may add a few words on the general policy, which, in my judgment, the Liberal party will do well to pursue in the future as well as in the past. Now, sir, I have noticed that it has been a very common trick of our opponents, and particularly a very comjointed sentences and certain doisjointed quotations from the speeches of jointed puotations from the speeches of various members of the Liberal party. They deal with these without the slightest reference to the context; without the smallest reference to the circumstances under which they were delivered; without the smallest reference to the changed position of the country, and indeed, to the changed position of other countries with which we have dealings, and on these they presume to have found various charges of inconsistency, various charges of breach of promise on our part, and as I need not say also to bring forward—without much proof, however—various charges of corruption and malfeasance on the part of the Government.



MR. J. H. McCLELLAN, THE LIBERAL CANDIDATE.

A Question of To-day

The question before the people of Canada, Mr. Chairman, in my judgment, is not what ought to have been done twenty-five, or twenty, or fifteen, or ten years ago; the question is what ought to be done to-day, and the grounds on which we ought to be tried the grounds on which we ought to be found guilty, or the grounds on which we have the right to demand your confidence, are, how we have administered the Government of Canada during the period tha tit has been under our control, since the year 1896 down to the present moment. (Cheers.) Now, sir, I shall not waste more words on these preliminaries, but I will proceed with certain statements made, notably by Sir Charles Tupper and Mr. Foster, who, as you know, is the chief financial exponent of the Opposition. I have observed with some regret that these gentlemen seem bent on maintaining their ancient reputation. It does not much surprise me to find that Sir Charles Tupper, as of old, has almost outstripped his own well-earned reputation as a wholesale manufacturer of fiction. (Laughter.) Nor am I altogether surprised either, to find that Mr. Foster runs him an exceedingly good second in the scarcely so respectable—but still, I suppose from a political point of view, useful—function of peddlar and retailer of half-truths. (Laughter.) Now, sir, in the case of Sir Charles Tupper, who, of course, is entitled to preferance as the leader of the Opposition, I observe that Sir Charles brings several charges or makes three severe assertions against us.

Sir Charles and the Contingent.

First of all, I note that Sir Charles declares on every occasion that it was he (Sir Charles Tupper) who, by his influence on public opinion, really sent the Canadian Contingent to South Africa. (Laughter.) Now, sir, I know Sir Charles' colossal self-conceit; and I am very well aware that Sir Charles is just the man to persuade himself that the conduct of the Government was influenced by the force of his phillippics, but I beg to inform Sir Charles Tupper, on this occasion, as I have informed him elsewhere, that perhaps he had as little influence on the deliberations of the Government, perhaps he had as little influence on the question whether or not we would send a contingent to South Africa, as he had in framing the policy of the British Government as to whether or not they would send a contingent to Pekin on a recent occasion.

One thing the Government did do. The Government did not allow themselves to be stampeded. The Government did not allow themselves to take a step of the greatest gravity without due deliberation and consideration—(here. here)—and so far from holding it a matter of censure on the part of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues that they thought gravely and long before they decided on a step which they knew would involve the expenditure of the people's money, and what in our idea was far more important, would put a hazard and risk the lives of thousands of our fellow-countrymen in the battlefield—I say that they would have been entirely false to their duty is they had taken a step of this importance and magnitude without fully weighing and considering and counting the cost. (Cheers.) And I can say to Sir Charles Tupper and his followers wherever they may be that the Government of Canada, acting in that fashion, deliberately and calmly showed a far greater sense of their responsibility and of the duty which they owed to the people than Sir Charles Tupper appeared to have felt when, without rhyme or reason, he took it upon himself, first of all, to denounce the Government from one end of the country to the other for their delay, as he alleged, in sending forward a contingent, and, in the next place, and far worse, to make use of that delay to attempt to stir up a racial war between the two great divisions into which Canada is divided to-day. (Cheers.)

Preferential Trade.

Then Sir Charles Tupper declares on every possible occasion that Sir Wilfrid Laurier threw away the offer of preferential trade, that Sir Wilfrid Laurier might, if he pleased, without the slightest difficulty, have obtained from the English Government any concession that he chose to ask, and that in place of that Sir Wilfrid Laurier deliberately slighted and scorned the offer which the English Government were willing to make to him. Sir, that is a figment invented out of Sir Charles Tupper's brain alone.

Another charge of Mr. Foster's that I desire to deal with is this, and he has put it on record in this motion I have on hand—Mr. Foster is appalled at the huge charge which we are making in this present moment for ordinary expenditure and for railway subsidies and for captial account. Now, I do not at all desire to deny that the estimates brought down are very considerable, but I call your attention to the fact that a very large proportion of these estimates are for works of public utility in the first place, and that for a very large amount of them you receive money which will fully recoup you for all your expenditure.

We have to look to the future. We have a great mass of indebtedness accumulated that falls due in the next few years. What are our chances for dealing with that? Well, gentlemen, I just call your attention to this simple fact: when we placed our last loan on the market, our 2 1-2 per cents and English 2 1-2 per cents stood at 104 1-2 to 105. Those English 2 1-2 per cents, are now 96 to 97 by the last mention I have seen on the subject in The Economist.

Great Growth in Trade.

Sir, within the last four years something like $140,000,000 a year has been added to the total volume of our trade and commerce (Cheers.) When we came in we found it a bare $230,000,000. To-day, I believe, the total volume will reach considerably over $320,000,000. (Cheers.)

The Preferential Tariff.

I desire to say a few words on a subject of great interest, and which I think is hardly perhaps sufficiently explained, or at least has somewhat been lost sight of. I presume to say a few words to you as to the effect of our preferential tariff. Gentlemen, in my jugment that is a much more far-reaching measure that either its friends or opponents assert. I think I shall be able to show that its effects on the Canadian consumer—who is the party that the Conservatives politicians seem disposed entirely to ignore—has been in the highest degree beneficial, and what is even perhaps of more importance, that the effect of our perferential tariff on the Canadian producer and on the Canadian manufacturer has been in the highest degree satisfactory.

Election Frauds.

I have observed that on all occasions where our Conservative friends have been guilty of any particular iniquities, the very first thing they do is to raise a hand and charge their political opponents with having been guilty of those identical things. In fact it has become so much their habit that whenever I hear a Conservative politician or journal cry "Stop, thief," I feel an inward desire to have the fellow seized and searched, and I am perfectly sure that in such cases you will find his pockets full of stolen goods. I notice that these friends are continually bringing charges against the Liberal party of the grossest corruptions and malfeasance in the conduct of their elections, and in particular have of late brought very serious allegations against the Liberal Government with respect to their conduct in the matter of two recent elections in West Huron and Brockville, alleging that they have been guilty of the most nefarious practice, that of ballot-stuffing and various other iniquities at the polls. Let me point out one thing to you. The Government at any rate, had little to gain or very little to loose so far as the elections in West Huron or Brockville were concerned, and it would not have appreciably affected their majority, which ran to something like fifty in the House, whether these seats were won or lost. There was, therefore, no temptation whatever to enter into any such felonious compact as our political opponents asserted for the purpose of securing these two elections. Now, I do not want you to suppose for one moment that either I or the Government of Canada in the slightest degree desire to minimize the gravity of the offence committed by any party who may be guilty of tampering with the ballot. I regard that as one of the highest crimes that can be committed by any man in a free country. I regard it as a double crime when committed by a Liberal, first, on account of the crime itself and, second, by reason for the extraordinary folly of such action, knowing as I would do that the Liberal party would rise as one man to denounce and punish any man or any Government who was guilty of such an act. Whenever I hear these charges made I find it expedient to look back a little on the record, and consider what they may have been about at the last election, in 1896.

The Liberal Party.

But it is not by what it has done during the last four years that the Liberal party will be judged in the future. If it is to maintain its proper position in the land, the Liberal party must be a progressive party, prepared with other measures and with fresh effort on their part to develop not merely the material but the social welfare of the people of Canada. We have not been forgetful of our duties in that respect. We are prepared to aid and assist all reasonable enterprises that present a fair prospect of fruitful return to the people of Canada. Owing to the fostering care of the Government we see at one end of Canada, in Nova Scotia, heretofore a comparatively unprogressive portion of our country, a huge iron industry, which will in all probability give employment soon to 20,000 families. At the other end, in our own Province, we see great enterprises in the neighborhood of Sault Ste. Marie, which will in all probability give employment to an equal number of families at this end of the Dominion. We see further, numerous and expansive industries from one end of Canada to the other, standing up and developing, not fostered by high tariff, but which are legitimate to the country. The Government are most desirous of promoting the sound relationship between the two great classes of employers and employed, and by their legislation have provided courts of conciliation, through the medium of which labor difficulties can be adjusted and expensive strikes avoided. (Cheers.)

Asks a Fair Investigation.

Gentlemen, so far as I know I have laid the facts before you plainly and simply. I have given you the authority on which I have made them. I repeat again all that the Government asks, all that the Government desires, is fair play and a fair hearing, and all that they especially request of their friends here and their friends in the rest of the country is that they shall investigate for themselves the truth of the statements which the members of the Government have made through my mouth and the mouths of others, and if they find, as I believe they will find, that every statement we have made is one that can be substantiated by the records, or one by which you can obtain reasonable proof by looking around you and seeing the condition of the country, then I think that we may fearlessly claim that on our part we have done our duty towards you, and that you will be doing your duty by renewing your lease of power to us. (Great cheers.)

The meeting closed with three cheers for the Queen, Sir Richard Cartwright and the candidate.

OPERATORS OFFER CONCESSIONS TO MINERS

But They Refuse to Recognize the Union and Insist That Work Be First Resumed.

FIRST BLOOD IS SHED IN A LABOR DISPUTE

Three Men Are Wounded and One of Them is Likely to Die—Bituminous Miners Offer to Divide Their Work with the Anthracite Men.

(Special to The Times.)

Philadelphia, Sept. 26.—The strike in the anthracite coal region has quickly reached the point which past experience shows to be critical. Some of the colliers have already reached the end of their meagre resources, and have applied for relief, and the distribution of supplies by the union is expected to begin in a few days. When starvation stares a body of strikers in the face is usually the time for interesting developments, and these are looked for by those conversant with the temper of the colliers. It is claimed on behalf of the latter that out of 142,000 miners in the white anthracite region only 12,000 are at work, and that still more men are likely to go out. A break on the part of the operators is prophesied in some quarters, though in others it is said that the mine owners have never been so determined not to yield an inch. The latter assert that a number of men who are now among the strikers would return to work did they not fear that the removal of the troops would expose them to the violence of foreign miners. It is also said that many English-speaking miners will not submit to the humiliation of going to work under military protection. It is nto likely that the offer of Archibshop Ryan to mediate will result in any tangible result.

The statement that some of the big companies in the Scranton district are prepared to make concessions provided the men first resume work, but without recognising the union, seems to confirm the theory that the operators are weakening. It is not likely, however, that the colliers will return to work on such terms as those offered, which would mean a victory for the owners over the union which is waging the present fight. At first sight the proposal looks like one intended to cause secession from the ranks of the strikers. The effect of it remains to be seen.

COMPANIES GRANT CONCESSIONS.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 26.—Information this morning in effect is that the big companies are prepared to-morrow to grant concessions provided that at the time the men are actually working in their employ.

But there is an understanding that, come what, may, the compromise must not be effected through the United Mine Workers.

While many miners are anxious to settle the strike and return t owork regardless of the means by which an amicable settlement is made, there is quite a strong sentiment to remain out until the union is recognized and until that organization is satisfied that work can be resumed advantageously to the union.

SOFT COAL MEN OFFER AID.

Altoona, Pa., Sept. 26.— Following their promise to prevent shipments of bituminous coal for anthracite markets the soft coal mines have issued an invitation to the anthracite miners to come to this field. They promise to divide work with them if there is not enough for all and pledge themselves that strict investigation shall be made of orders likely to be intended for the relief of the anthracite operators.

The invitation to the strikers is already being accepted. Anthracite men are dropping into the field by twos and threes, the great demand for labor serving to find them employment quickly at rates considerably above those prevailing in the district they abandoned. This immigration is not discouraged by the operators, as they see in it an opportunity to get skilled labor, which has been scarce in this field since the great rush began last April.

BLOODSHED AT SCRANTON.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 26.—The first bloodshed which may be laid to the strike of the miners in [illegible] region was reported this morning from Sibley, mining settlement at the foot of the mountains in the Old Forge Township, about six miles from Scranton. Three men were wounded in a row, in which about 30 revolvers shots were fired. The participants were all Italians, and were mostly men who had before the strike began been working as non-unionists, but who became members of the United Mine Workers two weeks ago. Last night the men got into a fight on the roadway near Barbertown. Revolvers were drawn by several and when the battle was over three men were down in the road, one so badly wounded that Dr. Timlin this morning had little hope for hies recovery. Several arrests were made.

THE GENERAL ELECTIONS.

Moderate estimates cut the Liberal majority in two, and even the most ardent Liberals admit that the majority will be diminished, but stout denial is made of any serious revulsion of feeling against the party. Truth to tell, the electorate as a whole is fatally apathetic. This it is which has made political corruption and cynicism possible. In the large centres one may notice a quickening interest as the election comes round, a quickening due to a contact through numbers impossible to the bulk of our population, which is scattered over vast spaces, and which cannot think in bulk. We need compactness, which is a long way off; we need the common school to give birth to a common sentiment; we need nobler ideals which will demand a purer and more righteous record from the parties who claim the suffrages of the people. Generally we only poll a fractional vote at the general election. There is a mass of indifferentism which neither party has touched, and which makes for national weakness. Both parties are putting forth every effort to disseminate the principals for which they stand. It will be curious to watch the effect of the gigantic preparations now being made to enlist the sympathies and the interest of the electorate. There is unquestionably a deep-seated resentment in the public mind that a government which promised a new era in the political life of Canada has been false to the principles which it professed; but this is no new experience for the country, and it remains to be seen whether this feeling will be crystallized in the emphatic condemnation of the ballot on voting day.

MUNICIPAL POLITICS.

The Times is anxious to see more interest taken in municipal affairs by the people. Our representatives at the Council Board ought to be in the highest sense men of honor, men who will not pull wires scheme for selfish ends, or allow their judgment to be warped by political bias. To the ordinary citizen it matters nothing whether the Council be reform or conservative; it matters everything whether it is composed of honest, able business men. But the difficulty is that such men do not care to go into the Council. They say they cannot afford to leave their business, or they give some other excuse. The real reason in most cases is that they cannot bear the wrangling of Council and committee meetings, the continual calls upon them to do this or that and help this scheme or that scheme and the constant censure, however faithful they may be, they are sure to receive. This is the real reason and until the whole tone of our people is improved, there is not much hope that the best men in a community will go into municipal life. Let but the citizens feel that the honest, faithful councillor is entitled to their sincere thanks for giving his time and energy to public affairs, that he should be credited with right motives until he is found in wrong-doing and let but our representative men of every class feel that it is an honor and a duty to serve their city and we shall have the state of affairs prevailing that so happily prevails in Britain to-day. But so long as municipal politics are regarded as a trade, a business; so long as certain men openly acknowledge that they go into civic life for "what they can get out of it," and so long as the public look upon their representatives as persons from whom they or their particular districts, are to get benefits; just so long will our municipal affairs remain in their present deplorable condition.

AN INGLORIOUS BATTLE.

Our Yankee neighbors are rather inclined to blow their own praises when opportunity offers.

It now appears that Lieutenant Hobson, who had been out of the public eye for a long time, emerges with a report that the Spaniards sank their own ships at Manila by pulling out the plugs and opening the valves. If he had told that story a year ago the country would have been ready to mob Hobson. It has recovered from our acute attack of Deweyitis since then, however, and are ready to look at the facts calmly and without prejudice. In such a light it is not easy to see that Hobson's account of the condition of the ships may be true without detracting from the credit of Admiral Dewey for winning the battle of Manilla. Lieutenant Hobson has been raising and repairing the Spanish ships sunk there and has returned to Vancouver. He says that he found the damage to the ships from Dewey's fire almost entirely above the water line and that the Spaniards pulled out the plugs and valves and sank their ships to avoid capture.

So it appears after all that the so-called "Battle of Manilla" was only a scuttling affair.

A SYSTEM IN BUSINESS

In the private office the head of the firm was closeted with the most important out-of-town customer, who had found that some matter of discounts or error in statement or correction of list price or some other picturesque detail of the higher finance made it imperative on him to visit the city even though it was the holiday season. That New York in holiday times is worth any man's seeing is wide of the question. It must have been business of the utmost importance, for even the confidential stenographer had been dismissed. Whatever it may have been, there was at least the evidence of cigars and hearty laughter to prove that it had been transacted to the satisfaction of both. After that had been setled the head of the firm broached the subject of entertainment. The customer was perfectly willing to take in a show that very evening and all the rest of the good things that might come his way, and it was the privilege of the resident business man to send out to reserve seats.

"I'll show you a wrinkle that may be new to you," he said with commercial pride. "You don't suppose that we pay box-office prices or speculators' premiums when it is possible to get just as good seats as there are in the house at fifty off. Just you wait while I telephone, and you'll see. I'll find the man in just a minute. That's the advantage of carrying system into everything you do. Just look at this arrangement. I guess it's got in it pretty nearly everything I want to know. Suppose I have an idea some day. Well, I jot down a memorandum on any piece of paper that comes handy and when I have leisure I file it away under its proper head in this system. Then when I want to use that idea all I have to do it to turn right to it here and find it at once along with everything else I know on the subject. Just you watch me. In this case the subject is theatre tickets, and where I can get them at a bargain. There's where the system of keeping track of things comes in. You observe I open the 'D' drawer and turn at once to the 'Dre's.' It's just like looking anything up in the encyclopedia. There, I've got just the man I want, telephone number and all, and I can promise you the tickets will be here as soon as we get back from lunch. That's where system comes in. You bet it's great."

"That's all very fine," replied the customer, "and I won't dispute the value of having a system. But I'll be hanged if I can understand why you turn up the 'Dre's' in order to find out where to scalp the theatres. Those letters are not the beginning of the man's name that you have just called and they do not spell anything that will make you think of the show. Why 'Dre'?"

"Why, man alive, that's just where the beauty and the simplicity of the scheme comes in. I want to get good seats at any theatre without paying too much for the tickets, so I look up the compartment 'Dressmaker' in this arrangement and find the information immediately."

"But why dressmaker? What has that to do with the subject?"

"See here, you're mighty particular seeing's it's my system and not yours but I don't mind showing you that the old man is right after all. The way I first got on to this threare scheme was this, my wife told me that her dressmaker told her that she knew a cigar dealer who always had good seats to dispose of for a reasonable discount. Got that straight and plain. Now, you don't suppose I'd put that under W just because my wife told me. A man's wife tells him so many things that if he was to start a system of this cold storage on them the W would be the whole thing and there wouldn't be any room for all the rest of the alphabet. So I skip the wife and nail the dressmaker as coming next. Then all I have to do when I want tickets is to think of my wife's dressmaker and there the whole story is told. But the more I use this system the more I wonder how we ever did business when a man had to remember things just any old way, indeed I do.

"A Bit Shaky."

A man looks at his trembling hands and says: "I feel a bit shaky this morning, and shall need a bracer." His real need is not nerve stimulant, but nerve strength. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery gives strength to the nervous system. It does not brace up, but builds up. It is entirely free from alcohol and from opium, cocaine, and other narcotics usually found in so-called nerve medicines.

David Duggins, Esq., of Jones, Ohio Co., Ky., writes: "When I began taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I think I had nervous or general debility of three years' duration. I took three bottles of the 'Discovery.' During the time I was taking it my sleep became more refreshing and I gained fifteen pounds weight, and also gained strength every day."

LIFE'S TRIAL.

Ever lurking, trying facing,
On my way;
Pleasant visions all erasing,
Joy disturbing, quiet chasing,
Fondest selfish schemes defacing
Day by day—

What's the use of trying, daring,
In this life?
Trials waylay, with spite unsparing
Baffling, slighting, paining, wearing,
Every peaceful thought ensnaring
Into strife.

Would I rest, then cares assailing
Banish peace;
Triumphing but leads to failing;
Sudden joy is turned to wailing;
Ease of mind begets but ailing;
Cares ne'er cease.

What's the end of all this toiling,
Troubles scene—
Where no sense is free from soiling,
Where belief but breeds embroiling,
Where no rest from planning, moiling
E'er is seen?

This I know, when trials defiant
Rise forlorn,
For the conflict, strong, reliant,
Wakes the soul, like sleeping giant,
To whose sinews, suple, pliant,
Strength is born.

This I know, that brave endeavor
Sinks in rust
If from trials we rest us ever;
Vain from courage trial to sever;
Toil and conflict draw us never Into lust.

Each endeavor, true and earnest,
Leads to strength;
If from hope thou never turnest,
If for higher deeds thou yearnest,
Peace and joy, tho' late, thou learnest
Come at length.

Welcome trials, hidden blessings,
Sent from God;
Wooing not with soft caressings,
Teaching not in doubtful guessings,
Curing all our weak, confessings
With thy rod.

A MYSTERY.

During my sojourn in Egypt," said Walton, removing his hookah from his burnt black beard, "I became interested in the horse; and desirous of possessing an Arabian of high quality, sought guidance of our local consul as to the best way of going about obtaining one. He gave me a letter to a certain camel and horse breeder of renown, located near Samana, Bedouin sheik, Hassam Moakbar by name. The sheik, he informed me, had reason to feel under obligations to him, which would insure me a pleasant reception. I took with me only a small escort—the consul's letter, in the Arabian tongue, being a sort of passport and affording me immunity from the toll gathering customary among the desert tribes. Arriving at the encampment at twilight, a scene of great beauty burst upon me. The stars were beginning to blaze forth with unusual size and brilliancy through the wonderful rare atmosphere. Threads of smoke rose perpendicularly from fires which sparkled among the long, low, wide tents, where preparations for the evening meal were going on.

"Negro slaves were roasting coffee, which gave forth a perfume only 'Araby the Blest' could yield. Round about parties of Arabs were exercising the horses—such creatures!—with manes flowing like the tresses of Princess Badroulbadour.

"Sheik Hassam, a man of noble appearance, met me, and after reading the letter, at once relaxed the stern dignity of his countenance, and the supper being now ready, bade me partake of the same tray with himself. The meal consisted of kid's flesh roasted delicately with certain condiments, of the nature of eau de cologne, and washed down with mare's milk. A noble cup of coffee, however atoned for the singularity of this repast, and lighting cheroots of a strong, sweet flavor, we strolled among the horses much of whose beauty and fine points were observable in the moonlight, for that luminary had now risen above the horizon. For reasons of his own, the sheik certainly did his best to get me what I wanted, and out of fifty, every one of which seemed to possess some different charm. I chose one, and regretted I had not chosen all the others. I was loath to leave so romantic a spot, and, though duty called, lingered some days, the guest of the sheik, who seemed equally unwilling to have me go, and plied me with rare tobacco and still rarer legends, dusky happenings of desert land, which had come within his ken, and revealed to few. I began to feel as if I had chewed the lotus buds, and did not care greatly whether I returned to my native land or not.

"One evening (that before the day set for my departure) while strolling and smoking, as usual, in the moonlight, at some distance from the encampment, our footsteps, whether by accident or the sheik's design, were directed toward a dark ridge of rocks which crested a great rise of sand on the horizon and shone jagged against the rising moon.

"'That forbbidding pile,' said Sheik Hassam, with a wave of his long arm, causing a metoric effect with the glowing end of his cheroot, 'formed once the centre of an oasis, discovered by myself and tribe while seeking an unfrequented portion of the desert for the purpose of establishing ourselves for the favorable pursuit of our business.

"'This oasis seemed the portal of paradise when, in the splendor of the noontide, we halted, after days of travel beneath a copper sky, before its waving palms and luxuriant shade, among which gurgled hidden springs of water, blessed water, and the songs of birds echoed among the foliage.

"'"Allah be praised! We shall prosper here!'" I cried aloud, and bade them set up the tents, which were not few and dig a cistern, which was filled from the springs amid the groves. The heat diminished not, but rather intensified from day to day, so that the outer springs became dry, and we had to force our way inward (for the oasis was wide and of densest growth) to obtain supplies of water.

"'Here and there we encountered beaten paths, which struck us as being rather singular, as we had seen no living thing save birds. Possibly, we argued, they were made by the jackals, which howled about in the day time and went there for water after dark although on one occasion I could have sworn that a vague imprint on the sandy pathway was that of a beast of prey.

"'I kept a sharp lookout and sentinels even on watch about the horses, camels and goats tethered a short distance from the camp beneath leafy sheds. Nothing of note transpired for several days, except slight additional proofs from time to time that some living creature inhabited the place. The heat seemed to increase daily, and the sky assumed that reddish tinge which bodes no good to the dweller of the desert. At rare intervals across the yellow hillocks would come pirouetting diabolical little spirals of sand moved by puffs of wind, like breaths from a furnace.

"'On the morning of the fifth day Hamed, my Circassian slave, a man of rare courage and singular personal beauty, disappeared into the depths of the oasis in quest of fresh water, that in the cistern being used for the beasts only, and, from the length of time elapsing, must have penetrated further than usual. Suddenly we perceived him at the edge of the jungle, wildly gesticulating. The Arabs' rifles were at their shoulders in an instant, but there was a mingled scream and roar, a flash of tawny finks, and Hamed, dragged down from behind, disappeared into the wood.

"'The riflemen who had been nearest to him fell upon their faces, paralysed with some awful fear, and could not be induced to stir. What they had seen I knew not. Drawing my simitar and grasping my pistol I bade a huge black, under threat of instant death, follow with a lance, and plunged into the tangled wood at the spot where Hamed had disappeared. White fragments of cloth upon the broken twigs, borne down by what must have been a creature of unusual size and ponderous strength, guided us onward. Panting with the heat, bruised with falling, and now feeling giddy with a strange odor which began to prevade the air, we proceeded with the utmost caution along a path grown steep and rocky.

"'The terrible order had grown almost stifling, and mingling with it came a low, whining purr, apparently at no great distance now.

"'Crouching behind a ragged mass of rock which seemed to have been split by the heat (the black calling incessantly upon Allah with chattering teeth) I peered through the crevice into the space beyond. Soul of Mohammed! What a sight met my gaze!

"'Sprawled upon its belly at the entrance to a cavern, the lithe tail beating the ground, was a creature, the sight of which caused my scimitar to fall from my nerveless grasp. Out of a tangled red mane, rose a white neck of columnar strength, surmounted by a countenance of awful beauty. Beneath netted eyebrows glowed eyes like burnished brass, human in all save the slit pupils. The lips were a venomous red arch, through which flashed long canine teeth.

"'Before her, slightly propped against a bowlder, lay Hamed, white and limp, but conscious and fascinated. Ever and anon the great furry paw was thrust forward caressingly (the claws sheathed), and the eyes of the dread creature became narrow and tender, and the purring sound was repeated.

"'Streaming with sweat, I had managed to level my pistol across a projection, when a shadow fell over us which deepened, and a murmur broke upon our ears, increasing to a roar. Springing to its feet, its eyes blazing greenly in the gathering gloom, the Thing seized the shoulder of Hamed's garments in its teeth, and with a horrid screaming snarl leaped past us, as the simoon in all its fury burst upon us.

"'The black had already clambered to the highest rock and lay clasping the base of a large palm, face down, enveloped in his burnous. I did likewise, and after a period of unconscious ness, awoke, and painfully drawing myself up to a sitting posture against what remained of the palm stree, gased about me. The black lay rigid at my side, stifled.

"'Around about among the rocks and trees and across the plain were great drifts and billows of sand, but of all my faithful people and valuable beasts there was no trace. A tent pole, with a fragment of canvas here and there, marked their graves.

"'I was rescued in a delirious condition by my partner, who came weekly to visit the encampment.

"'That I am stopping in this vicinity is owing to an irrestible fascination the spot has for me, and to its being in the direct road to the market town, whither I go at intervals to trade. The mystery that yonder sand heaps envelop will never be revealed until the desert and the sea give up their dead.'"

"How did you and George get along at the seashore?" asked her best friend. "Swimmingly," was the reply.

A MONOMANIACAL WITNESS

"That calls to mind a queer experience of my own," said a lawyer who had listened to the story. "Some years ago I defended a fellow for murder in a little Southern town, and the worst witness we had against us was an old German who was a stack builder by trade. A stack, by the way, is merely another name for a big chimney. The old fellow was perfectly honest and gave his story in such a clear, straightforward manner that I felt my client was doomed unless I could think of some way to break him down. While I was cudgeling my brains a friend whispered to me to ask him how high he could build a stack. 'What do you mean?' I asked, in surprise. 'Never mind,' said my friend. 'Just slip in that question and see.' So at the tail end of the cross examination I paused, as if struck by an afterthought, and said: 'You are a stack builder, I believe?' 'Yes, sir,' replied the witness. 'Well, sir,' I continued, 'about how high can you build—' I never got any further. A swift inscrutable change flashed over the German's face and he rose excitedly from his chair. 'As high as der sky!' he roared. 'So high dose angels come around it like birds!' In five seconds he was raving. You see, the man was a monomaniac— sane on every subject but one, and my friend happened to know his weak spot. It is hardly necessary to say that his evidence in regard to the homicide was promptly ruled out by the Judge, and as there was no other witness of importance my man was cleared. The rascal should have been hanged, and would have been but for the lucky reference to the stack."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Eating and Sleeping.

Food supplies the substance for repairing the wastes of the body, and gives strength. Sleep affords the opportunity for these repairs to be made. Both are necessary to health. If you can't eat and sleep, take Hood's Sarsaparilla. It creates a good appetite and tones the digestive organs, and it gives the sweet, restful sleep of childhood. Be sure to get Hood's.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap. The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different: we have a large printing and bookmanufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other lines.

Our assays have averaged from $5.00 to $800 in Gold, Copper and Silver, and the shipping facilities are the best. All of our claims have been more or less developed and it is our purpose to put the same on a paying basis at once.

Our company owns, clear of incumbrances, the following claims: The Sedalia Extension, the Sedalia Extension No. 2, which property adjoins the great Sedalia mine, which has been a big producer for upwards of seventeen years; the Copper King of Colorado, which immediately adjoins the above; the Copper Queen of Salida, a very promising property, only a few steps from the depot in Salida. This claim occupies an imposing position on a mountain just north of the city; and last, but by no means least, the Sunshine, located two miles east of Salida at Cleora Station, on the main trunk line of the great Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, also on the Arkansas river, which in length is one of America's greatest streams.

Rifle Association Matches

It has been decided to hold the Rifle Association matches on Thursday, October 11. These contests will be known by similar names to those of last year and be subject to the same rules. A charge will be made in the range, however, of one hundred yards, thus increasing them to 500 yards. Sundry officers and committees were appointed to bring the proposed matches to a successful issue.

Sunday School Information

The County Council of the Peterborough S. S. Association purpose holding a series of meetings in a short time, similar to those held in May and June last. Will every live Sunday school worker do their best to make the meeting in the township a success? Let every teacher and officer in the municipality be there, and as many of the members of the school as possible, especially the young men and young women. It is expected that the best practical talent of the county will be avilable.

MONEY TO BURN.

The Botch Work Which Characterizes Town Methods.

We publish a letter elsewhere in regard to the new corporation weigh scales, which speaks for itself. On Friday last there was trouble in weighing hay, as there is almost every day. We have no desire to find fault with the Town Engineering department, but we think the way the job has been done is not at all creditable to the authorities. Not only is it necessary to enlarge the covering over the scales, but the stock pens are a disgrace to the town. The cement floors were laid too low, and the result is that several inches of stagnant water has been allowed to remain in the pens off and on all summer. Had the commonest kind of horse sense been exercised in the construction of these floors, this would not have been possible. The Council evidently have money to burn.

IT WOKE THEM UP.

The Times Gave the Tories a Shaking up for Their Good.

The article in yesterday's Times dealing with West Peterborough politics, has evidently forced the Tory leaders to make a move. Invitations have been issued for a meeting to take place on Friday night, presumably to arrange for holding a convention or mass meeting of the party.

The Conservatives have been led to believe that they have a sure thing, and that their candidate is certain of being erected. They evidently forget that things have changed since the last election, and that now their's is the opposition candidate, while Mr. Quinn is the Government standard bearer.

MORE POOR WORK.

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—The new market scale is a disgrace to Peterborough. My son took in a load of hay a few days ago, and the frame that covers the scales was neither wide enough or high enough to let the load pass through. The result was that I was put to trouble and expense in reducing the size of my load.

Now, sir, I can tell your authorities that I am not the only one who has a similar complaint to offer. I know of several who feel so badly that they say they will never again take hay or anything else to Peterborough that they can dispose of elsewhere. Your Town Engineer must be a cornoracker to allow such a structure to be put up. He should go to school a while longer.

LORD ROBERTS TO CANADIANS

Officers Introduced to Lady Roberts.

BOER FORCES HAD BOLTED

When British Occupied Komatipoort —Fighting to Head off Steyn.

(Special to The Times.)

Pretoria, Sept. 26.

Field Marshal Lord Roberts in the presence of Lady Roberts and his daughters, reviewed the Canadians on the eve of their departure. It was a brilliant scene, the men who are in excellent health, making a splendid appearance. After the march past, Lord Roberts addressed them briefly. He said—"I cannot allow you to depart without expressing my thanks for and appreciation of your loyal services and excellent work, especially at Paardeberg on February 27. I am sure the people of Canada will be pleased to hear how gallantly and how splendidly you have all behaved in action. I deeply regret the losses you have suffered. I should have been happier if you had returned in your full strength, but no one could expect you to pass through so arduous a campaign without loss, I am sorry that some of you are obliged to return sooner than the rest of the regiment, but I recognise the urgency of private affairs. I am confident that the Queen and the British people will never forget your services. If it should ever be my good fortune to visit Canada, I hope to meet you all again."

After the troops had given cheers for the Queen and the Field Marshal, the latter shook hands with the Canadian officers and presented them one by one to Lady Roberts.

"Pole-Carew reports that he found at Komatipoort Long Tom, 96-pounder, and one Creusot, which had been destroyed; 200 rifles, 30 boxes of small arm ammunition, 40 Long Tom shells, etc.

"Barton has captured 720 trek oxen 250 cattle and 1,000 sheep.

WORTH CAPTURING.

Gen. Paget, by making a forced march of 36 miles east of Hamman's Kraal, captured the laager of Commandant Grobler, seizing 2,000 head of cattle and 5,000 sheep. Twenty men who had been left in charge of the laager were made prisoners. Commandant Grobler was absent with his troops at the time, he being engaged in making an attack on the railway. Col. Plumer made a flank march for the purpose of co-operating with Gen. Paget in the event of Commandant Grobler defending the laager.

Gen. Cooningham's brigade's consisting of the Argyle Highlanders, the Berkshire Regiment, and the Scottish Borderers, has returned here from the east. Since July 2, the brigade marched 700 miles.

BOERS BOLTED

When the British occupied Komatipoort the Boers, who had been occupying that place, bolted across the frontier into Portuguese territory. They blew up their guns and destroyed their arms before evacuating the town.

HEADING OFF STEYN.

Heavy firing is reported across the Sabir River. This means that the British are intercepting Steyn and Reitz, who, with their forces, are attempting to push northward and to effect a junction. A commando is said to be surrounded near Pietersburg.

"The war is completely ended," says the Lorenzo Marquez correspondent. "Many guns have been destroyed and hundreds of wagons and thousands of tons of stores of every description have been burned. Burning wreckage lies in every direction in the Hectorspruit district.

"Any good police force of 20,000 men can effect a complete pacification of the country. It will be impossible for the Boers in the future to mass a force exceeding 1,500. They are sick of the war, and the Irish-American and other mercenaries are clamorous for payment, and threatening Boer officials."

LIEUT. HARPER ON DUTY.

Lieut. F. Harper (N.W.M.P.) of the Strathcona Horse, who has been in hospital, has returned to duty.

THE SITUATION IN THE EAST

PIRACY AND BRIGANDAGE.

Active Measures Needed in West River—Germany May Declare War

PIRACY AND BRIGANDAGE.

Hong Kong, Sept. 25.—The German transport Gera and three German torpedo boats have arrived here.

Advices from the West River report piracy and brigandage are increasing, and it is considered probable that the river will relapse into old state of insecurity during the winter unless active measures be taken. Several minor piratical acts are reported, and it is also stated that villages near Kum Chuk have been burned by brigands.

DESECRATED A GRAVEYARD.

New York, Sept. 26.—A mob has destroyed the Catholic church at Tookaahang, a few miles from Canton, and desecrated the Amercian Baptist mission graveyard, The Herald's correspondent at Hong Kong cables. Rowdies have also destroyed the American Presbyterian church just outside Canton. Feeling at Fatshang is intensifying.

GERMANY MAY DECLARE WAR.

London, Wednesday, Sept. 26.—The Shanghai correspondent of the Morning Post, in a despatch dated 25th, says.—"Field Marshall Count Von Waldersee is expected to arrive at Taku to-day. It is understood that he will immediately present an ultimatium demanding the surrendre of five leaders of the antiforeign rising, a few hours' grace only being allowed. If compliance is not then signified, war will be declared.

"Germany, taking advantage to the fullest of her position as the only power warring with China, is expected to seize Wu-Sung and Kiangan arsenal so as to unable it to dominate Shanghai, and also to seize the Kian-Yin forts commanding the Yang-tse-Kiang. It will be quite possible for her with her force here, aided by the fleet, to effect this. It is also regarded as possible to seize the Chinese fleet, including the valuable new cruisers. Failing this, Germany will, at least, occupy all of the Siang-Su province north of the Yang-tse-Kiang thereby controlling the north bank of the river at its mouth and establishing a strong claim to the hinterland, including the northern half of the Yangtse-basin. France will support Germany. Such a policy will be a most serious menace to British interests, and prompt action is necessary to prevent the coup. There is a reason to believe that the ultimatum was prepared here."

WEATHER NOTES.

Probs. To-day. Quite cool.

The storm which was near Lake Superior yesterday has since continued to disperse, but the northwest cold wave has increased. Scattered showers and thunder storms occurred in Ontario and Quebec and more are indicated.

CANADA BUSINESS COLLEGE

Chatham, Ont.

Is doing more for its pupils than any other business school in Canada, or perhaps, than any other in the continent. How can we do this? First.

First: By giving them a practical, not a theoretical, preparation for business life.

Second: The business public has learned that there is this vast difference between the graduates of this school and those of other colleges, hence the strong demand for our graduates, which has enabled 220 to be placed in good positions between Sept., '99, and July, '00 a period of ten months.

The good work still goes on, and 72 have been placed between July 1st and Sept. 1st of this year.

THE EMPRESS DEFIES THE GREAT POWERS

She Appoints Boxer Chiefs to Her Grand Council Despite a Protest.

VON WALDERSEE SAYS SITUATION IS SERIOUS.

The Appointment of Prince Tuan Said by a German Official to Show How Far the Dowager Will Go in Defying the Allies.

(Special to The Times.)

Berlin, Sept. 27.

The German press and Foreign Office continues to deny that Great Britain has rejected Germany's proposal, and also continue to blame the United States for the recently renewed evidences that the Chinese intend to resume hostilities on a large plan. The Berlin Tageblatte alone advises Germany not to expect a favorable answer to her proposal from Lord Salisbury, as his wish to carefully nurse intimate relations with the United States forms the key note of his policy.

The Foreign Office told the correspondent of the Associated Press this afternoon, that Great Britain's answer had not yet arrived, but that as soon as it did, the Government would be glad to publish it, no matter what its character. Sir Frank Lascelles, the British Ambassador, who was interviewed regarding the matter, said—"Great Britain's delay in answering Germany's proposal is due to the fact, as I understand it, that Lord Salisbury has asked Sir Claude Macdonald to report upon the feasibilities of the German plan."

London, Sept. 27.—While the powers still lack cohesion the Chinese are taking advantage of the breathing space which is being allowed them, and are recovering that courage which the fall of Pekin may be assumed to have abated. With true Oriental cunning they have grasped the situation and are fully aware that their greatest weapon is the lack of definiteness in the aims of the powers. So bold has the Empress become that she has actually appointed to important positions in her council Prince Tuan and Prince Chwang, the chief leaders of the Boxer movement, and the very men whom it is the desire of the allies to punish. If this is not complete defiance it is difficult to find a more suitable name for it. Count Von Waldersee's alleged discovery that the state of China is more dangerous than supposed, has not yet been fully confirmed, though it is easy to find an explanation for any such stand in the desire of the German general to cut with the sword rather than attempt to untie the cordian knot which confronts him. One fact is apparent, if no other, and that is the energies of Germany to brush aside all diplomatic quibblings and appeal immediately to force. This is the true way to deal with Asiatics, and all European diplomatists know the fact full well, though secret reasons make them chary of acting upon it for the present. In any event matters are so shaping themselves that a second campaign against the Dowager may become necessary at no distant date. Lord Salisbury meanwhile preserves his attitude of impassibility while the Chinese question halts for lack of an agreement among the powers as to mere matters of detail.

MANY DENIALS IN EUROPE.

London, Sept. 27.—The statement that Lord Salisbury had verbally answered the German Ambassador Count Von Hatzfeldt-Wildenburg in the same terms as the United States Government used in replying to the German note has called forth many denials throughout Europe. In the first place, it may be reiterated that on Thursday last the British Premier told the German Ambassador here that Germany's idea of the surrender of the authors of the outrages as a precedent to peace negotiations was unfeasible, and in so doing Lord Salisbury employed terms similar to those used in the note from Washington. Though this was intended as a refusal of what is regarded in Downing street as the only really important feature of the German note it was not accepted as such by the German Ambassador on the ground that Lord Salisbury had not "formally" answered the note and had left the latter part of the German proposal—that the Ministers at Pekin should designate the offenders—unanswered pending an hourly expected message from Minister Claude MacDonald at Pekin. The British Foreign Office has issued what may be taken in England to be a denial of the statement made to the Associated Press saying that the British answer has "not yet been sent." This was expressly set forth in the despatch announcing Lord Salisbury's reply to the German Ambassador, and it was added that the answer might not be sent for several days.

It is quite possible that the awaited message from Pekin may have a bearing on Lord Salisbury's alleged determination to agree with the United States in refusing to consent tro the only proposition of any weight contained in the German note, though the formal pronouncement of such disagreement may be staved off at the last moment by Germany receding from the position she has taken up and submitting to a compromise. If such should be the case—and a high German official in London has already hinted to the Associated Press that it may occur—it would be only natural that Berlin and the other capitals in accord with Germany should use every effort to conceal the fact that Germany has been coerced into a compromise arrangement by the action of Great Britain and the United States.

Count Von Hatzfeldt-Wildenburg was not the only recipient of Lord Salisbury's views on Tuesday, for during the usual Foreign Office reception several foreign representatives sounded the Premier on Great Britain's attitude towards the German proposal and they were all satisfied Lord Salisbury's decision was against Germany.

SITUATION ALARMING.

Berlin, Sept. 27.—Alarming news from China has reached the German Government, but it will not be published now, as Germany intends to use it during the conferences in Pekin. Field Marshal Count Von Waldersee has cabled to Emperor William direct that he has found the general situation more dangerous than he had expected, as it has grown worse during the last fortnight, and the consuls in central and southern China are expecting a general uprising. Advices from Dr. Mumm Von Schartzstein, the German Minister in China, are of a similar tenor. Rear-Admiral Von Bendemann has repeadedly cabled that the situation along the Yangtse-kiang is very critical, and also expressing fears concerning the safety of Kiao-chou.

The German Foreign Office has received official information of the appointment of Prince Tuan as Grand Secretary. In reply to an inquiry as to whether this indicated a serious turn of affairs, a high official of the Foreign Office says "Undoubtedly it does, for those powers that want to begin peace negotiations. The appointment means that Tuan is now at the helm, and shows to what lengths the Chinese Government will go in defying the powers."

CHINA HALL'S PREMISES

DESCRIPTION OF THE ELEGANT RE-BUILT STORE.

The Macfarlane Wilson Company Once More Established in Their Old Premises—A Store That Peterborough is Proud of.

For nearly two weeks our citizens have been crowding China Hall, to see the novelties that are there displayed, and view what is now regarded as one of the most beautiful stores in Canada.

For the benefit of the thousands of readers of The Times, both in town and country, who have not yet visited this elegant store, we propose to give a brief description of it.

As our readers know, only a few months ago fire destroyed the premises of the Macfarlane-Wilson Company, but this calamity did not even for a day put this progressive firm out of business, for temporary premises were immediately secured, and the business went on as usual.

In the meantime plans were laid for erecting on the old stand, the present magnificent premises.

A walk through the palatial store reveals a wonderland of beautiful objects, in such variety and profusion that one is fairly lost in amazement and admiration. Here may be seen bric-a-brac from all parts of the world; here are gathered together the choicest selection of Japanese goods that probably has ever been seen in Canada, and in their store is to be found dishes fit to set before a king.

Entering from George street, one is struck by the grandeur of everything. The massive oak door, flanked on each side by heavy plate glass windows, gives the front entrance a handsome appearance. The spacious store 22X80 feet, is finished with metallic ceilings tinted a rich velvety green. The fittings are oiled oak, as is also the floor, and the goods are displayed on eighteen handsome oak tables, covered with pink-green broadcloth. Upon these rest eighteen smaller tables, which furnish suitable and imposing show room.

To the right of the entrance, a long cabinet of oak framework, set with plate glass, enclosing shelves resting on slender spindles, serves the purpose of a display case, and is splendidly filled with the finer pottery art goods, cut glass, silver, etc. etc. At the entrance rear of the shop to the left is a costly appointed ladies' waiting room, with easy chairs, Japanese rugs underfoot and windows curtained with Japanese shades, the rear wall a plate mirror that reflects a coup d'oeil of the whole shop and its glitter of varied wares. On the left of the entrance a range of shelving fills the space to the first side window and holds a display of delicately beautiful French china.

In the rear compartment is without doubt the finest display of Japanese pottery to be found in Canada. No idea can be given here of the loveliness of their goods. They must be seen to appreciated and understood. In fact no newspaper could give any proper conception of China Hall and its contents.

Mr. Wilson and his attentive assistants welcome all who come to see the store, whether they buy or not.

WEATHER NOTES.

Probs.—Moderate to fresh northwesterly to westerly winds, fine and cooler. To-day—Fine and cool.

Thunderstorms have been fairly general in the Ottawa Valley and the Province of Quebec and they have occurred very locally in the Lake Region. In the north-west the weather is improving, and a more seasonable temperature indicated. Cooler weather will prevail in Ontario and Quebec.

SHALL WE CLOSE CANADIAN SOO?

TRAFFIC ON THE CANAL.

A Detroit Marine Paper Discusses the Matter

And Speaks of the Failure of the Dominion Canal to Draw its Share of Traffic.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 27.—The Marine News says. A matter to which the attention of owners is being directed is the disposition of vessel masters trading to Lake Superior to pass up and down almost exclusively by way of the United States canal at the Sault. The Canadian Canal has heed such a small percentage of the business this year that there is some fear of the Dominion Government closing it to navigation. The expense of maintaining a force of men at the Canadian lock is, of course, an important item.

If the Dominion officials, knowing that only their own vessels, so few in number compared with the United States craft, could be easily taken care of in the American locks, should conclude to close their canal and thus save themselves this expense, the result might well be feared by our large shipping interests. In the event of accident on the American side a closed lock on the Canadian side would not be a happy thought to contemplate. Then, too, it is very unfortunate that more use is not made by American vessels of the magnificent canal and lock on the Canadian side of the river in view of the great expense undertaken by Canada in providing this waterway. It will certainly be badly needed before the contemplated enlargement of the old lock on the American side is a reality.

One reason why the vessel masters do not go by way of the Canadian canal is the fact that letters and telegrams are usually forwarded incare of the American canal office. This could be changed of course, as far as the correspondent of the ship with her owners is concerned, but it is claimed also that the upper approach to the Canadian canal is a narrow channall, and that there is not the certainty of deep water in it that there is in that part of the river leading to the upper ends of the American locks.

ATLIN'S BIG FIRE.

Captain Jack Martin, of Peterborough, Does Heroic Work.

From the Atlin Claim we gather particulars of the big fire that very nearly destroyed this mining town.

It appears that the fire broke out in the British American Company's warehouse, and rapidly spread to adjoining buildings. Had it not been for a heroic band of workers, headed by Captain Jack Martin, of Peterborough, the whole town would have been wiped out. As it was about $50,000 worth of property was destroyed. The "Claim," in speaking of Capt. Martin, says—"Capt. Martin was in the worst position, his hair and clothes were singed, and occasionally he would put an iron bucket over his head to momentarily ward off the agonizing heat, but he stayed by it, knowing that the fate of the town depended on them, and little by little, as the heat grew less intense, a heartfelt sigh went up from the working, perspiring crowd, and they realized that the battle had been fought and that fair Atlin was once more safe."

MADE EIGHT DOLLARS IN EIGHT MONTHS.

Mining for Gold in the Nome District is Not Very Profitable.

Cornwall, Sept. 27.—Mr. Z Roy, shoe merchant of this town, has received word from his son, who has returned to Vancouver, B.C., after an absence of about one year on the Nome district. In the letter Mr. Roy writes his father, he says—"We worked claims for eight months. there were three of us in the party, and when we came to wash up we had only eight dollars worth of gold to be divided among the three of us. We decided to get out of the country and return before our supplies ran out. The trip cost Mr. Roy and companions about eight hundred dollars besides the loss of time. Mr. Roy says the country is no good and there are thousands in the interior who would be glad to get out to civization if they had any means of doing so.

DAN SPENCE KILLED.

A SERGEANT OF THE 57TH DIED FOR HIS COUNTRY.

Particulars Not Yet at Hand—A General Feeling of Sorrow Pervades the Town—Flags at Half Mast.

A cablegram received by the Governor-General from Sir Alfred Milner indicating the probable death of D. M. Spence, of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, Peterborough, was supplemented by another cablegram later, which leaves no doubt as to the news. The second message came from the Adjutant-General of Lord Roberts' army, and was addressed to the commanding officer of the Queen's Own Dragoons at Peterborough. It read—"Pte. D. M. Spence, number on nominal roll, 32, 1st Battalion Canadian Mounted Rifles, killed." The message was immediately repeated to Controller Spence, of Toronto, who is a brother of the deceased, and who had been waiting all day for confirmation or denial of the report.

Private Spence was engaged with Mr. F. Mason, florist, in Peterborough when he joined the Canadian Mounted Rifles. He was a sergeant in the local regiment, and although only 24 years of age he was an exceedingly well-known figure in the George street Methodist church and also in the Y.M.C.A. work. When he left to join his regiment he was given an enthusiastic farewell by our citizens.

The flags of the town were at half mast yesterday, and a feeling of gloom pervades the whole town.

RUSSIA'S GRAB GAME.

Tien Tsin, Sept. 24.—Gen. Chaffee has arrived and conferred with the staff officers of different departments, with a view of establishing a winter base in the vicinity of Tien Tsin. The present plan is understood to be tentative and based on the possible retention of the existing force.

Gen. Chaffee paid a visit to Li Hung Chang and informally discussed the outlook for a settlement. It is understood he preferred an American officer to accompany the Viceroy to Pekin. No other power, except Russia, has yet officially recognized Li Hung Chang's presence.

Field Marshall Count von Waldersee, commander-in-chief of the international forces, arrives here to-morrow. He will be received by a review of the troops of all the allied nations.

It is reported that the Russians, after the capture of the Lu Tai forts, began rushing troops north along the railraod, for the purpose of occupying Shan Hai Kuan.

OCEAN STEAMER DAMAGED.

(Special to The Times.)

Glasgow, Sept. 27.

The Allan Line Royal Mail Steamship Pomeranian, in command of Captain Fairful, which arrived to day from Montreal, whence he sailed September 11th, was damaged by collision when coming up the Clyde, with a sunken steamer. The extent of the damage has not yet been ascertained.

THE CONSERVATIVES MOVE.

In Both East and West Ridings They Make a Start.

The Conservatives of East Peterborough have issued notices calling a mass meeting to be held in Norwood on Thursday next, October 4th., at two o'clock, to elect a condidate. A large number will doubtless attend from town.

In the West Riding a preliminary meeting is to take place to-night, when arrangements will be made to hold a mass meeting. The campaign is evidently on in earnest.

COSTLY CANADIAN BUILDING IN PARIS

Views of a Canadian on the Parii Exhibition.

Toronto, Sept. 27.

Mr. W. A. Sherwood returned yesterday after three months travelling in Europe and at the World's Exhibition at Paris.

"The first and lasting impression I experienced in connection with the Fair," he said this morning, "was that the whole object of it was to glorify France and belittle the other nations, and I must say the purpose has been accomplished wonderfully well. The space at the disposal of the Fair amounted to some 300 acres—only half the size of the Chicago grounds—and after France got through spreading her exhibits around there was little space left for the other fellows.

"For instance, in spite of the United States' generosity to France during the Columbian show the space allotted to the Americans at Paris is not any larger than that given to Madagascar. American and Canadien manufacturers are shoved off in an annex nine miles from the main exhibition."

GREAT ART EXHIBIT.

Regarding the art exhibit, Mr Sherwood says the display of French work is the greatest the world has ever seen. "And you know," he added, "the French masters have attained the highest state of perfection in their particular bent, which is the realistic. While at the Columbian Exhibition one-third of the French art space was taken up by impressionistic work, there are by actual count only three impressionistic paintings in the present exhibit. In the Dutch work the gloomy cloudy effects which were in vogue a few years ago are replaced by sunlight and clear blue sky everywhere. In landscape work the Englishman, Leader, and the American, Innis, are awarded even by the French first place. The exhibit of Canada art was creditable, many students now on the Continent contributing to it." Mr. Sherwood had a half dozen of his portraits on view.

STRATHCONA RESPONSIBLE.

Mr. Perrault, the Canadian commissioner in charge, told Mr. Sherwood that Lord Strathcona was entirely responsible for the expense of the Canadian building, as it was he who took charge of all arrangements, such as the architecture, supplying materials and so on.

"I confess," said Mr. Sherwood, "that I do not see why $200,000 should be spent on a building not as large as the music hall at the Toronto Fair.

"Living is extremely inexpensive in Paris at the present. It costs only 8 cents for admition to the grounds and that admits you to practically everything. The restaurants, which all Parisians patronize exclusively are as reasonable as are Toronto houses, and the same applies to lodging. You see the Fair has been a failure and prices are all being cut. The Frenchmen's antipathy to English is responsible for this."

Mr. Sherwood was very favorably impressed with the Germans and Russians he saw there.

ROBERTS IS NOT COMING HOME NOW

It Will Be After November Fifth When He Leaves South Africa.

SCENES OF HAVOC ON THE BOER LINE OF MARCH

Bennett Burleigh Tells a Graphic Story of the Property Destroyed and Left Burning in the Spruits to the West of Komatipoort.

(Special to The Times.)

Lorenzo Marquez, Sept. 27.

The Irish-American lately serving with the Boers have been removed from their barracks to the Portuguese transport Indiana, to prevent disturbance in the town.

London, Sept. 27.—Lord Roberts having stated definitely that his return from South Africa will be deferred considerably beyond the fifth of November, it appears that there is still considerable work for the British army in South Africa. The regular troops will, however, be sufficient to look after the remnants of the Boer commandos still in the field, including the famous General De Wet, who remains uncaught. It may be expected, therefore, that the volunteer contingents, with few exceptions, will soon be wending their way back to the various parts of Europe whence they came, and when they will confirm the lessons of imperialism which have been so greedily absorbed during the past year. The break up of the Boer armies has not yet had time to be communicated to the irregular bands roaming through the country to the southwest of Pretoria. As soon as this news reaches them, however, it may be taken for granted that they will not much longer keep the field. Britain has not profited much from the subjection of the Boers in the way of artillery, the enemy having carefully and scrupulously destroyed every gun in their possession and deposited the fragments in various spruits along the line of their final memorable march to Komatipoort.

BREAK-UP OF THE BOERS.

London, Sept. 27.—Bennett Burleigh, the correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, thus describes the final break up of the Boer army opposing Lord Roberts. He describes his journey with the advancing British to Komatipoort and says.

"The bridges has been dynamited, the stores, buildings, and homesteads looted and burned, as had been also the railway property all the chief stations being mere masse sof smoking ruins, among them Kaap Muiden, Hactor spruit, and Komatipoort. At the last place there is an enormous area over which the Boers have wrought, destruction.

"On my way from Barberton I saw at Hactor spruit the burst Boer guns and the destroyed stores. In the Crocodile river there were visible literally acres of damaged ammunition, wagons, limbers, dynamite detonators, and war stores of every sort and description.

"When I passed through Komatipoort I saw, besides the burning stores, hundreds of tons of ammunition—all kinds of caps, gunpowder and other explosives, and ready-fused shells for guns, from the pom-poms to the 6-inch, broken rifles and cannon.

"In the rocky bed of the tumbling, foaming river were yet more enormous quantities of stores, ammunition, rifles, cannon, and foodstuffs.

"If General Buller and the others move on to seize the passes neither Ben Viljoen, the new commandant-general, with Steyn and Schalkburger, nor Koetze, with the rest of the derelicts from Komatipoort, can escape through the mountains toward Lydenburg and Pietersburg. while to remain in the low veldt at this season of the year spells death for men and cattle.

"When the Boers, numbering two thousand, evacuated Komatipoort they took up position between the Lobombo range and the river.

"They had got positions, and could have made a capital stand, but owing to the desorganisation and lack of discipline that were prevalent they were only half-hearted.

"Wishing to avoid a conflict and unnecessary bloodshed, the British Consul-General consulted the Portuguese Governor-General, Senhor Machado, as to the best course to be pursued to attain this end.

"He asked that the emissaries should be sent up with an adress to the Boers pointing out the uselessness of continuing their resistance and the absolute needlessness of goin on further.

"Besides, if they continue to fight there was a fear of the natives rising.

"Owing to the fact that the Portuguese had been most kind to the Boers, and as they had guaranteed their maintenance and repatriation and promised to send them back to their country free of charge, the scheme succeeded beyond the widest hopes of it originator.

"Instead of dozens coming down to Lorenzo Marquez, twenty-five hundred arrived in this wise.

"Diplomacy therefore triumphed by bringing the war to a speedy and bloodless close.

ROBERTS CANNOT RETURN.

London, Sept. 27.—The Lord Mayor has received the following message from General Roberts. "The City of London Imperial Volunteers will reach London before Nov. 5. I fear I cannot return so soon.

FAREWELL TO CANADIANS.

Pretoria, Sept. 27.—Gen. Roberts, in the presence of Lady Roberts, and his daughters, inspected six companies of the Canadian regiment, who were about to take train for Cape Town on their way home after a year's service in South Africa.

Crowds were present, and the men, who are excellent health, making a splendid appearance, the scene was a brillant one.

After the march past, Gen. Roberts addressed the troops. He said.

"I cannot allow you to depart without expressnig my thanks for and appreciation of your loyal services and excellant work, especially at Paardeberg, on February 27. I am sure the people of Canada will be pleased to hear how gallantly and how splendidly you have behaved in action.

"Deeply I regret the losses you have suffered. I should have been happier if you had returned in your full health. The regiment has had 160 killed or wounded; but no one could expect you to pass through so arduous a campaign without losses.

"I am sorry that some of you are obliged to return sooner than the rest of the regiment, but I recognize the urgency of private affairs. I am confident that the Queen and British people will never forget your services. If it should ever be my good fortune to visit Canada, I hope to meet you all again."

After the troops had given cheers for the Queen and Field Marshall, the latter shook hands with the Canadian officers and presented them one by one to Lady Roberts.

OPERATORS OFFER 10 PER CENT RAISE

It is Believed They will Give the Miners the Desired Increase.

(Special to The Times.)

Hazelton, Pa., Sept. 27.

The Associated Press at 10 o'clock to-night secured from President Mitchell the admission that he believes that the mine operators have agreed to make the striking mine workers an offer of a ten per cent. increase in wages.

Philadelphia, Sept. 27.—The official daily report of the strike situation at the colliers operated by the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company, showed that thirteen colliers were working to-day. There is no change in the situation.

DRY WEATHER ENDED.

Shenandoah, Pa., Sept. 27.—The long period of dry weather was ended early to-day by a heavy rain which came as a great relief to everybody here, especially the soldiers, who have suffered from lack of water. The strike situation in the region between Mahanoy City and Wabland is unchanged. At the latter place the East and the Potts colliers are still in operation. This town is orderly and peaceful.

THE SIFTON MURDER.

Herbert, the Hired Man, Pleaded Guilty of Murder.

London, Ont., Sept. 27.—At the Assize Court here, in the Sifton murder case, Walter Herbert pleaded guilty to having murdered Joseph Sifton. The prisoner's pleading came as a great surprise to the court.

Gerald Sifton, who is charged with Herbert with having done the killing, had just stood up in the box and pleaded not guilty, and his trial had been traversed to the Spring Assizes. Herbert then gave his startling answer to the usual questions of the clerk. The question was repeated to him three times, and he gave the same answer to each in a low trembling voice. The prisoner was then remanded for sentence.

Herbert was Gerald Sifton's hired man and the crown alleges that Gerald secured the aid of Herbert to kill his father, Joseph Sifton, on the day the latter was to have been married to a young woman named Mary McFarlane. When Herbert was arrested he confessed to High Constable Macleod, implicating Gerald Sifton and saying he (Herbert) had first struck the old man with an axe, then his heart failed him, and Gerald finished the job. The defence claimed that the deceased accidently fell out of the barn.

Baking Powder Economy

The manufacturers of Royal Baking Powder have always declined to produce a cheap baking powder at the sacrifice of quality.

The Royal is made from the most highly refined and wholesome ingredients, and is the embodiment of all the excellence possible to be attained in the highest class baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price, and is cheaper at its price than any similar article.

Samples of mixtures made in imitation of baking powders, but containing alum, are frequently distributed from door to door, or given away in grocery stores. Such mixtures are dangerous to use in food, and in many cities their sale is prohibited by law. Alum is a corrosive poison, and all physicians condemn baking powders containing it.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT'S MEETING.

The Liberal mass meeting in the Opera House last night was a model in its way. The audience was intelligent, orderly and at times enthusiastic and the speeches of Sir Richard Cartwright and the other orators were able expositions of Liberal policy and commendably free from that element of personal abuse that adds unpleasant spice to the speeches of some politicians. In the present campaign the issues between the two parties are not perhaps as clearly defined as in former contests, and the fact that the House has not yet been dissolved makes the date of the general election as yet unknown. Once the writs are issued there will be more interest in a campaign which as yet lacks a certain amount of "definiteness."

FROM THE BEST THINKERS

Who am I; what is this me? A voice, a motion, an appearance; some embodied visualised idea in the Eternal Mind? "Cogito ergo sum." Alas! poor cogitator, this takes us but a little way. Sure enough, I am; and lately was not. But how? whence? whereto? The answer lies all around, written in all colors and motions, uttered in all tones of jubilee and wail, in thousand fingered, thousand voiced, harmonious nature; but where is the cunning eye and ear to whom that God-written apocalypse will yield articulate meaning We sit as in a boundless phantasmagoria and dream grotto; boundless, for the faintest star, the remotest century, lies not even nearer the verge thereof. Sounds and many visions flit round our sense; but Him, the Unslumbering, whose work both dream and dreamer are, we seek not; except in rare, half-waking moments, suspect not.—Thomas Carlyle.

A man may be as brilliant, as clever, as strong and as broad as you please and with all this, if he is not good, he may be a paltry fellow; even the sublime which he seems to reach, in his most splendid achievements, is only a brilliant sort of badness.—John Stuart Blackie.

I wish to suggest that a man may be very industrious, and yet not spend his time well. There is no more fatal blunderer than he who consumes the greater part of his life getting his living. All great enterprises are self-supporting.—Henry David Thoreau.

Man dwells apart, though not alone;
He walks among his peers unread;
The best of thoughts which he hath known,
For lack of listeners, are not said.
—Jean Ingelow.

A friend is worth all hazards we can run.

Poor is the friendless master of a world;

How we all still dislike to ourselves! The whole of life often seems one long drama in performance, in which onehalf of us is forever posing to the other half.—Mrs Humphrey Ward.

MOSEBY ESCAPED

George W. Fink Had the Famous Guerilla Under Arrest

The man who captured Colonel John Singleton Moseby, the most famous of the Confederate guerillas during the civil war, was George W. Fink. The fact that Moseby was a prisoner under Fink for only a short time, not more than half an hour, in fact, does not take away much from the glory of his achievement, as may be seen from the circumstances of the incident as related by Mr. Fink at the Union station in the special train in which the colonists lay over while arrangements for the transfer from the Pennsylvania to the Fort Wayne were being made.

At the outbreak of the war Fink enlisted in Troop A, of the First Pennsylvania Cavalry, and went with that command almost immediately to the region of the Shenandoah Valley, where their field of operations continued to be. In 1861 Fink was one day a member of a scouting party sent out to reconnoiter, and in that capacity traveled a considerable distance from the spot where the camp had been pitched. It was learned from some of the Union sympathizers in the region that a small party of Confederates were concealed in a house three or four miles away, and a detachment was sent after them.

Fink himself rode up to the door and demanded entrance, which was refused him by the woman who answered his knock at the door. She denied vigorously that any soldiers were within and loudly protested against the intrusion of the scouts.

In one of the upper chambers two officers, a lieutenant and a captain, were found lying under the bed, and were triumphantly dragged forth, covered with dust and lint from the floor In another room a third man, dressed in civilian's clothes, but very evidently connected with the army, was found and placed under arrest in company with the others. Their arms were taken from them, and under the guard of Fink and one companion their return to the camp was begun.

On the way a thick wood was passed through. The man in civilian's clothes was riding at the front of the little party. When the middle of the grove was reached he wheeled his horse plunged the rowels into its side and dashed off to the right. Fink promptly raised his carbine and fired at the rapidly retreating form. The horse fell dead, but the rider leaped free from the animal's body and ran like the traditional white head further into the woods. The cavalrymen could not leave the two prisoners who remained, and who were watching with breathless interest the flight of their comrade, so the journey to the camp was continued without chase having been made.

When headquarters were reached the two officers were turned over to the commander. On their way to the guard house they turned to Fink and one of them said:

"You may be interested in knowing that the man who got away was Colonel Moseby." Then he started on with his companion. Fink, in telling the incident said:

"I was feeling sore enough over the escape, as it was, but when I heard who my prisoner was, I felt like going to the guard house myself and serving the longest sentence I could persuade my superiors to give me."

It has never been positively established that the man who got away in the woods was really Moseby. The two officers averred that it was, and Fink's comrades believed them and always called him "the man who captured Moseby."

If it was Moseby it was the closest escape he ever had from becoming a prisoner of the Federal government, for there was no man probably in the whole rebel army who was more wanted than he was and against whom more determined efforts were directed. Arch H. Rowand, Jr., the well-known local attorney, who was during the war one of the most famous of Federal scouts, put in the best part of three years in trying to apprehend him. Mr. Rowand this morning said in connection with the Fink incident.

"If Fink really had him I never heard of it. I put in my spare time and a good deal more during 1862-3-4 in going after the doughty old fellow, and when we weren't after him he was after us. I was once chased by three of his men from Stickers Gap clear into Harper's Ferry. My own opinion is that the man who skipped out in the woods Fink speaks of was not the guerilla at all, but that the officers who didn't get a chance to clear out just said he was, to make their own captors feel sore at their loss. Of course you understand I don't know anything about the affair, and that this theory is one of my own construction."

Moseby is still alive and resides in California. He came into great prominence just after the close of the Civil war by becoming a Republican, or as the phrase went then, a "reconstructed rebel." He held office under President Grant and has always remained an administration man. During the Spanish war he came into public notice again by applying for a commission. He was told to get the recommendation of the Senators of his State, but hotly declined to seek any such backing, closing the letter in which he did so with the characteristic declaration that he was after an army job, not a political appointment.

"The use of visiting-cards dates back to quite an antiquity," explains Mrs. Van Koert Schuyler, in the Ladies' Home Journal. "Formerly the porter at the lodge or door of great houses kept a visitors' book, in which he scrawled his idea of the names of those who called upon the master and his family, and to whose inspection it was submitted from time to time. One fine gentleman, a scion of the nobility from the Fauborg St. Germain, was shocked to find that his porter kept so poor a register of the names of those who had called upon him. The names, badly written with spluttering pen and pale or muddy ink, suggested to him the idea of writing his own name upon slips of paper or bits of cardboard in advance of calling upon his neighbors lest his name should fare as badly at the hands of their porters. This custom soon became generally established."

Sunday School Information

The County Council of the Peterborough S. S. Association purpose holding a series of meetings in a short time, similar to those held in May and June last. Will every live Sunday school worker do their best to make the meeting in the township a success? Let every teacher and officer in the municipality be there, and as many of the members of the school as possible, especially the young men and young women. It is expected that the best practical talent of the county will be available.

Baby's Future.

The fond mother dreams great dreams of baby's future as she holds the sleeping little one in her arms. But the dreams will never come true unless she has given him a strong body and a healthy mind. Children die in hosts, or live to struggle through life feeble of body and dull of mind because the mother was unfit physically and mentally for motherhood. Women who use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription endow their children with strong bodies and bright minds. It is every mother's duty to give her child the advantages of a healthy body and mind. A weak or sickly woman cannot do this. "Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong and sick women well.

Mrs. Orrin Stiles, of Downing, Dunn Co., Wis., writes: "I have been intending to write to you ever since my baby was born in regard to what your 'Favorite Prescription' has done for me. I cannot praise it enough, for I have not been as well for five years as I now am. In July last I had a baby boy, weight 11 pounds, and I was only sick a short time, and since I got up have not had one sick day. I have not had any womb trouble since I got up. I was not only surprised myself but all of my friends here are surprised to see me so well."

"Caliber 54"—Story of a Little Hero

When General W. T. Sherman was alive, he was often greeted with the shout, "Caliber 54." Old soldiers would shout it sometimes without understanding its significance, says the Pittsburg News. Its origin is well deserving of a place in history, especially as it proves that even the little drummer boys who were in the field in the Civil war, like the late T. C. E. Ecclesine, often did as efficient service as the older boys.

"Caliber 54" had its origin at the battle of Shiloh. General Sherman was riding along over the field hurrying to get to his troops when he heard a delicate voice calling: "General Sherman! General Sherman!" The old war hero stopped, and the boy piped out:

"The —— Illinois regiment is over there on the hill holding the rebels back as much as they can and they're all out of ammunition and they want some." And then, with as much volume of voice as he could muster, he added. "Caliber 54." That was the most important part of the message, for the wagon trains might have gone with loads of ammunition and if it hadn't been caliber 54 it would not have been of the least use.

General Sherman got down from his horse to pat the urchin's head, and to call him a "noble little fellow," when he saw three or four tears on the boy's cheek and he said: "There, don't cry, my little fellow; get right along back, for we're going to whip them."

"I know that," said the boy, "but when I was coming here to give you the colonel's message, a rebel's bullet struck me here," pointing to the calf of his leg. "I was crawling along the ground the best I could, and I knew I could catch you."

Then the general assisted the lad to the hospital, and a few days later he went home to his mother in Vermont, But "Caliber 54" lives in history.

SHE NEVER WAS A BOY.

When I came home the other night
With an ugly looking eye
That I had got into a fight
Poor ma commenced to cry,
But when I told pa how it was
He clapped his hands for joy
And told ma I'd done bully, 'cause
Once he had been a boy.

"Boys will be boys," I heard him say;
"They won't be otherwise,
And the one that learns to fight his way
Is the one that wins the prize;
When I was his age fightin' was
My greatest earthly joy—'
But ma, she kept on cryin', cause
She never was a boy.

My golly, but I'd hate to be
A girl with fluffy hair,
And always prime as A. B. C.,
With clothes too clean to wear!
When ma was small I s'pose she was
Red checked and sweet and coy—
But, oh, the fun that missed her, 'cause
She never was a boy.

PAYING OFF.

I'll pay him off! I'll pay him off first chance I get, if 'tisn't till I'm old as Methuselum, now!"

Tony's two brown fists came together with a thump. His eyes flashed and his face was like a flame. Mamma looked up, surprised and grieved at the outburst, but she didn't say a word; she only waited for what would come next.

"I will!" cried Tony. "I'll have to, mamma! He's the worst boy that ever lived! He's—he's—I'd like to pound him all black and blue, so!"

Whack! came his fists together again, poor Tony; and the fire in his eyes was all at once put out by tears. Mamma spoke then.

"Tell mother all about it," said she.

And Tony sat down on a little cricket at mamma's feet, and laid his head against mamma's knee, and told; which was just what he wanted to do.

"He's kept plaguing me even since I began to go to school, mamma Johnny Spratt has and he's the biggest too. I wouldn't plague a boy littler than I was would you mamma?"

"No, dear; I don't think I would."

"But he does, and calls names, too," Tony went on, beginning to grow rosy again. He calls me 'Tony George' because I always lift my hat to old aunty Dinsmore—and that's right, isn't it, mamma?" as he thought he saw a little twinkle in mamma's eye.

"Quite right, Tony," she answered, quietly.

"'Cause it pleases her so much, you know. And sometimes I carry her basket for her a ways. And he makes fun. And this morning"—Tony's breath came fast and he doubled his fists—"this morning I was the least bit late to school, and when I went in they all commenced to laugh, easy, of course, so Mr. Blake wouldn't hear, and look at the blackboard. And I looked, too; and there was a picture of a boy lifting a hat bigger'n he was, and bowing real low—an awful-looking boy, mamma, and Tony George' was right under it. I knew who made it quick enough, and my face got hot as fire; and just then Mr. Blake saw it, too, and he said, 'John, rub that thing out!' cross as anything. He knew who made it, too, you see. Mamma, if I was big enough I'd—I'd thrash him all to pieces. I'd just like to pay him off so he'd stay paid one while Mamma!"

Mamma didn't even smile. She felt that this was a serious matter.

"I don't blame you a bit," she said soberly, "I think I would want to pay him off if I were you. I think, dear, I would kill him."

Tony jumped from his cricket, he was so astonished.

"Why, mamma Walters!" he cried "Why—mamma—Walters!"

Mamma smiled then—she couldn't help it. But she was quite in earnest

"It would be a great deal better than thrashing him all to pieces, Tony," she said; and Tony hung his head and blushed. "Suppose you try it."

"I don't know how," said Tony.

"I think you can guess, dear. And now we won't say another word about it for a week."

"I s'pose," said Tony, slowly, with his face puckered into a dozen wrinkles over this new idea. "I 'spose, mamma, you mean the way that old Quaker man did that grandpa used to tell about. But I can't be kind to Johnny Spratt, mamma—how can I after the way he's acted? 'Sides, I wouldn't have any chance."

"Make one," said mamma. "Now—no more for a week, my son, and then——"

Tony knew what that meant. It meant that at the end of the week he would be expected to tell mamma just how much he had done toward killing Johnny Spratt with kindness.

"I'm 'fraid it won't be much," he thought, with a little discontented pucker between his eyes. "It'll be pretty hard, I s'pose."

And so it was. Why, it did seem as if Johnny Spratt grew worse every day. Tony had to bite his tongue hard a good many times to keep from telling tales out of school about him. And as for being kind to him—that seemed quite out of the question, though Tony honestly did his best and didn't get angry more times than he could help.

At the end of the week his birthday was coming, and Washington's; and the night before, he rushed home from school all out of breath with his hurry and delight.

"O mamma!" he cried, eagerly. "We're going to have the best time, to-morrow! We're all—all of our class you know—going to put in twenty-five cents apiece and hire Mr. Baker's great big cutter, and Mr. Blake's going to take us to—to some kind of a lake that the last of it's 'guntic,' and his sister lives right close side of it, and we're going to skate, and fire at a mark, with just arrows, you know, mamma, and eat dinner at his sister's house. And we've got to meet at the schoolhouse real early, and—won't it be grand, mamma?"

Mamma smiled, and kissed both glowing cheeks; for though Tony was a good deal more than half past nine, as he would have told you, he hadn't grown away from his mother's kisses yet

"I hope you will have a very nice time," she said.

She said it again, next morning, when she had helped him into his ulster, and tied his muffler carefully, and settled his fur cap on his brown head.

"And now, Tony," she said, looking down into his clear, brown eyes, "I want you to remember whose birthday this is—and all about it, dear."

"Yes'm, I'll try," said Tony. And then he darted off to join the merry little crowd at the schoolhouse.

Johnny Spratt was there, too, but somehow he didn't look so merry as the rest. His eyes looked almost as though he had been crying.

But before Tony had time to wonder much about this, Mr. Baker's big, four-seated cutter was at the door, the bells jingling and the horses breathing out little puffs of steam on the clear, frosty air. Then what a scramble there was! It didn't seem longer than a minute before all of the laughing, merry company had piled in, and were tucking the robes around themselves.

Not quite all. There was one lonely little figure left on the platform.

"Come Johnny!" called Mr. Blake, kindly.

But Johnny Spratt shook his head and looked down at his feet. There were tears in his eyes, and he didn't want to cry before them all—a great big boy, almost eleven years old!

"I—I ain't going," he said. "I only came to see you off. I ain't got no—no twenty-five cents."

There was a stir in Tony Walters' heart just then, and he felt a funny little warm rush all over him. He thought of mamma—he remembered whose birthday it was. His cheeks grew cherry-red and his eyes grew misty. In a flash he was out of the cutter, pressing his silver quarter into Johnny Spratt's hand.

"Here, Johnny, take this," he cried. "You—you want to go more'n I do."

Poor Johnny Spratt! He looked at Tony and then at the sleigh-load of boys, and then at Tony again, and his face turned very red.

"I—I'd look pretty," he said, "a-taking your money after I've—— O Tony Walters! I won't!"

But the more he wouldn't, the more Tony insisted.

"Because it's my birthday as well as George Washington's, you know," he said, with a little laugh; "and I'd 'most as lieves stay to home with my mother. Come, Johnny!"

And then Mr. Blake, who understood all about it, said, "Come, Johnny, jump in," and Johnny obeyed, nearer to crying now than he had been before.

But all at once there came a voice from the driver's seat.

"Crowd in yourself, little chap," it said. "I don't believe you'll weigh half of twenty-five cents' worth. All aboard, now! Off we go-o!"

And off Tony went with the rest—if he hadn't I think I couldn't have told the story with half so good grace. And he never was so happy, and never had so good a time in all his life before as he had that day. It was a good time all around, and as for Johnny Spratt——

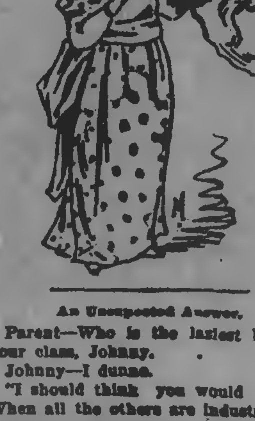
"Why, mamma," cried Tony, when he told his mother the story of the day's fun, "I b'lieve he's going to be one of the very best boys you ever saw—one of the very best ones!"

Bismark and the French.

Bismark had no great opinion of the French. He believed that they are too easily swayed by popular catchwords. "Talk to a Frenchman about liberty, equality and fraternity, tell him that his nation is the greatest in the world, and you can do anything with him. You can impress the French more than any other people if you tell them it is done in the name of freedom."

Asked his opinion in the case of a certain French spy, he said: "It's a sad case. You've got to hang him, but do it with the utmost politeness, so as not to hurt his feelings."

Ready for the Sun.



An Unexpected Answer.

Parent—Who is the laziest boy in your class, Johnny.

Johnny—I dunno.

"I should think you would know. When all the others are industriously writing or studying their lessons, who is he that sits in his seat and watches the rest, instead of working himself?"

"Why, the teacher."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Off the Track

This means disaster and death when applied to a fast express train. It is equally serious when it refers to people whose blood is disordered and who consequently have pimples and sores, bad stomachs, deranged kidneys, weak nerves and that tired feeling. Hood's Sarsaparilla puts the wheels back on the track by making pure, rich blood and curing these troubles.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different: we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other lines.

Death of Mrs. Whitfield

The death occurred yesterday morning of Mrs. John Whitfield, one of the oldest and most esteemed residents of North Monaghan. The deceased was born and lived all her days—79 years—in North Monaghan. She was a daughter of the late Thos. Wilson, who was one of the first settlers in Monaghan. The funeral takes place from the family residence, lot 8, con 9, North Monaghan, at 2.30 o'clock this afternoon.

A Cavan Wedding

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday evening, at the residence of Mr. [illegible], of Ida, Cavan township, when his daughter, Miss Mary Estella, and Mr. David Curtis, of the Ackerman Harrow Co., Peterborough, were made one, Rev. W. C. Allen, of Millbrook, officiating. The bride was supported by Miss Fean, of Garden Hill, while Mr. Edwin Curtis, brother of the groom, acted as groomsman. The Times joins in wishing the happy couple a long and happy life.

Safe in Atlin

Considerable anxiety has been felt by the many friends of Capt. Jack Martin, who was known to have left Atlin for Cape Nome, Alaska, last spring. The harrowing details of starvation and death that are constantly coming in from the Nome country, was not reassuring to those who had friends in these far off gold fields. The Times yesterday received word that Capt. Martin had returned to Atlin, and was operating his mines there. This will be good news to the captain's hosts of friends here.

REPORTERS' ROUNDS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by the Times.

—Doll's dressmakers. Apply G. C. B., P.O. Box 788.

—A move is being made to incorporate the village of Marmora.

—Mr. H. A. Wilson, of Hastings, has purchased Mr. H. Buck's "Lily" of Stony Lake.

—The village of Hastings will be lighted by twelve arclights, which will be supplied by Messrs. H. M. Fowlds & Co.

—Havelock citizens contributed $75.00 towards the improvement of the road from that village to the Belmont gold mine.

—If you wish to cure scrofula and salt rheum permanently, take Hood's Sarsaparilla. It expels all impurities from the blood.

—Lindsay is likely to have a fancy seed business established there at an early date, employing a large number of hands.

—The plans for the addition to the Asylum buildings in Cobourg have been received. The new building will be 40 by 100 feet, three stories high.

—Bellefontaine, an enterprising Ohio city, put down sidewalks of Portland cement ten years ago, and it is authoritatively stated that not a cent has been expended for repairs since, and the streets are in just as good condition every way to-day as when first constructed. This is an interesting piece of information for every town and should do much to popularize the cement walk movement.

—One of the most remarkable instances of foster-mother care may be seen at Mr. W. H. Penwarden's home a short distance northeast of Cobourg. A sitting hen was honored by having a baby kitten left in her nest. The eggs were removed and the hen adopted her young charge and now displays her maternal care by hovering and guarding the kitten and the adopted feline follows the hen whenever she leaves the nest.—Cobourg World.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

—Mrs. J. H. Brandon and daughter, who were visiting Mrs. W. H. Robertson, left for their home at Fenelon Falls yesterday.

—The Times was favored with a call yesterday from Mr. George B. Hilliard, of Lakefield, who was in town on business.

—Lindsay Post—Miss. R. Dissautel, of Peterborough, returned home yesterday, after spending a month's holidays in Lindsay, with Mr. and Mrs. Felix Landry, of the south ward.

THE LAKEFIELD FAIR.

The Exhibition Scores Another Decided Success There.

Glorious weather, a good show, and a record attendance, were the features of the Lakefield Annual Fair in 1900.

The show inside the building was extremely good—grain, fruit and vegetables in profusion, and of A1 quality, while the exhibit of stock was fully up to the average and perhaps a little above it. "This downs the Peterborough show," was not an uncommon remark, and whether it was true or not we will not attempt to decide. It suffices to say that officials, exhibitors and spectators were smiling and happy, and the crowd dispersed in the evening thoroughly pleased with the day.

The concert on Tuesday night, given by the Agricultural Society, was also a decided success. The programme was excellent, and was replete with good things from start to finish. The attendance was all that could be desired.

The Council Attend Church

The Council accepted an invitation to attend church last night in a body, the occasion being the Harvest Festival in St. Luke's church. If it were not that election day is three months ahead, some might be uncharitable enough to think that the Father's were "Tacking" in order to prepare for the storm which is sure to break over them when they face the electors next January. The Times, however, does not believe our city legislators had any ulterior object in view in accepting Rev. Mr. Symonds' invitation. We are sure we but express the hope that abounds throughout the town amongst the ratepayers that the Mayor and Council may have been induced to forsake their evil ways as a result of attending the meeting, and turn over a new leaf.

Sergt. Smith's Return

The 57th Regiment will assemble at the drill shed this evening at 7.30, and march to the depot to meet Sergt. Smith, who will arrive on the 8 o'clock train. The returned member of the Canadian contingent to South Africa will be escorted to the armories, where a formal welcome is to be tendered. It had been intended to hold a smoker this evening, but owing to the death of Sergt. Spence this has been abandoned. After the reception the prizes won at the recent rifle matches will be presented to the successful competitors.

A Coal Famine.

We are probably going to have a coal famine in Ontario as a result of the coal miners' strike. Already prices are gone up at Buffalo. At Toronto no large orders will be taken. The smaller towns which have no water connection with American ports and depend on getting their supply from the larger cities on the lakes are already short in their coal supply. In Peterborough one dealer at least quotes $8 per ton, and others are asking $7.

Harvest Home Festival

A Harvest Home Festival took place last night in St Luke's church, Ashburnham, and was largely attended. Several members of the Peterborough Town Council, who had accepted an invitation to attend in body, were present, and occupied special pews reserved for them. The church was tastefully decorated, and special music was supplied, while the services were exceedingly interesting and appropriate.

Buffalo Lake Game

Mr. Wm. Snowden received a box of wild geese and ducks, sent by Mr. Dickson Jewett and Ald. G. M. Roger, who are hunting at Buffalo Lake, N. W. T. The birds were sent without ice, and were a trifle strongly flavored when they reached their destination. Mr. Snowden has distributed them amongst the friends of the two sportsmen, and the recipients do not know whether to feel flattered or not.

THE REMEDY FAILED.

How a Helpful Wife Did Not Cure Her Husband of the Tobacco Habit.

"It will only be necessary for you to drop about half a teaspoonful of the mixture into this cup of coffee each morning," the circular said, "and the taste for tobacco will gradually depart from him. He may not cease the use of tobacco immediately, but within a week he will begin to abhor tobacco if the mixture is given to him faithfully every morning."

And so the young wife sent her little $2 on and got a flagon of the tobacco cure.

"Pretty bum coffee this morning," he remarked dryly the first time she dropped the half-teaspoonful of the mixture into the cup.

"It's the same as we've been using right along," she replied, craftily.

Now, lo and behold! he was a pretty smooth proposition himself, and he had, unbeknownst to her, seen the package holding the flagon of agin tobacco mixture when it was delivered.

So after dinner that evening he produced a large bulky package of fine-cut tobacco from his pocket and took therefrom a plenteous chew of tobacco. It was the first chew he had ever taken in her presence, and she marvelled thereat, but she determined to persist with the "treatment."

"Dead rank chickory again this morning, isn't it?" he inquired at breakfast the next morning.

"Im sure it tastes the same to me," she replied.

That evening after dinner he produced a short, black clay pipe and a package of a new kind of tobacco that was as black as the ground work of a Jolly Roger.

"Thought I'd bring this old dudeen up from the office," he explained cheerfully. "It's as sweet as a nut."

Whereupon he filled the house with the aroma of punk that was strong enough to break rock.

"This grocery person who gets all of my wages is certainly doing us on the coffee game," he remarked when he tasted his cup next morning.

"Really," she said, gazing innocently at the ten-cent bunch of asters in the middle of the table. "I can't detect any difference.'

"And yet there are low foreheads who don't believe that all women are actresses," said he to himself on the way to his office that morning.

That evening he brought home a box of auction stogies, and after he had smoked one of them after dinner all of the people in the neighboring flats stuffed cotton in the hall door keyholes and closed the hall transoms.

"I must persist though," thought his baffled little wife, gloomily.

"Coffee tastes like stewed gunnysack again this morning," he remarked at the next breakfast. She felt a bit sorry for him, but she was determined to use up that flagon of "agin-tobacco" if she had to chloroform him and pour it down his throat.

That evening, however, her resolution deserted her. After dinner, for the first time to her knowledge, he pulled out a package of cigarettes, lit one and began to smoke it.

She went upstairs, poured out the remaining portion of her $2 worth of agin-tobacco and carefully hid the bottle

"Coffee's all right this morning," said he at breakfast the next day.

"Yes?" she inquired, absently.

When he had finished his dinner that evening he lighted one of his usual brand of good cigars.

"Men are mysterious to me," she thought, regarding him out of the tail of her eye.

A Competent Witness.

United States District Judge Williams, now holding court in Topeka tells a funny story. Years ago he was a district judge in Arkansas. At a certain term of court a murder trial came before him, and the most important witness for the prosecution was a colored boy only ten years old The lawyers for the defence set out to show that the boy was too young to understand the nature of an oath, and therefore was not competent as a witness.

"Boy," said one of them severely "do you know what would happen if you swore to a lie?"

"Yes, sah. Mammy would lick me."

"Would anything else happen?"

"Deed dey would, case de devil would git me."

At this point Judge Williams leaned over his desk and said with pretended sternness: "Don't you know, boy that I would get you, too?"

"Yes, sah. Dat's what I jus' said."—Kansas City Journal.

Two Points of View.

A farmer drifted into a hardware store at Mulhall and was asked by the manager. "Don't you want to buy a bicycle to ride around your farm on? They're cheap now. Can give you one for $35."

"I'd sooner put $35 into a cow," said the farmer.

"But think," said the manager, "how foolish you would look riding around town on a cow."

"Oh, I don't know" said the farmer; "no more foolish, perhaps, than I would milking a bicycle."

Out of the Ordinary.

The two old friends, as has been narrated before met again, after years of separation.

"By the way, Gagster," said Throggins, "do you remember that snub nosed, cross-eyed little Tilbury girl, with a face on her that would ditch an express train? She used to live somewhere in your neighborhood, I think."

"Oh, yes, I remember her perfectly," replied Gagster.

"What ever became of her?"

"I am sorry to disappoint you, Throggins"—here is where the variation comes in—"but I have not the slightest idea. I didn't marry her."

Wonderfully Made.

Sister—When you called to see George was he wearing those slippers I made him for Christmas?

Brother—No. He was using one of them as a laundry bag.

ROBERTS APPOINTED COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF

Suggestion Made That Boers be Advised to Settle in South America

FINANCES OF SOUTH AFRICA IN GOOD CONDITION

London, Sept. 30. It is officially announced that Lord Roberts has been appointed Commander-in-chief of the British army.

Capt Town, Sept. 30.—The Canadian contingent under Col. Pelletier sailed to-day on board the transport Idaho. The people of Cape Town accorded them a special impromptu reception, the Mayor voicing the thanks of the city for their brilliant forces in the field.

London, Sept. 30.—To-day is Lord Roberts birth-day.

New York, Sept 29.—A Lima, Peru, cable to The Herald says.

The Peruvian Consul at Liverpool has suggested to the Government to invite the discontented Boers to immigrate into Peru, South America would grant to them lands in the interior and would offer other inducements.

SOUTH AFRICA FINANCE.

London, Sept, 29.—Mr. L. Michell, general manager of the Standard Bank of South Africa, has just arrived in London from the Cape.

From a financial point of view Mr. Michell brings the most important news which has reached this country since the beginning of the Boer war.

The financial position of Cape Colony and Natal, he said, is perfectly sound. Both colonies own their own railways and telegraphs, which form an asset fully equal to the colony's debts. The losses to ordinary business through the war have been fully compensated by the extra expenditure by the military. At the close of the war the situation in this respect may for a while change for the worse.

A small loan for Cape Colony may be desirable to recoup loyalists for their losses. It will also be necesary for both Cape Colony and the Orange River Colony to expend large sums in order to develop irrigation and the general water supply.

The projected railway from Bloemfontein to Kimberley Mr. Michell regards as an excellent suggestion. It would tap the grain district adjoining Basutoland. The line from Johannesburg to the Vaal River was also an excellent idea.

As the prospects for the mining industry in Johannesburg, the first obstacle to be removed was the difficulty of obtaining native labour. Stringent liquor laws, badly administered, had hitherto militated against this, but total prohibition was, he thought, a mistake, What was required was regulation rather than prohibition.

The Transvaal he regarded as the finest portionn of Africa as regards agriculture, mineral wealth and commerical prospects. The Imperial Government by assuming the liabilities of the Transvaal ex-Government, would be liable for £125,000 stock of the National Bank. This would not necessarily involve reconstruction of the bank, but it would be certainly demand the abrogation of several privileges the bank had hitherto enjoyed, notably that of issuing bank notes.

Another question which, in his opinion, should demand the immediate attention of the British Government was the withdrawal of the Transvual coinage. He would substitute a coinage for all South Africa, with a central mint in Pretoria.

KITCHENER GIVES EVIDENCE.

Johannesburg, Sept. 29.—The Hospitals Inquiry Commission has concluded its sittings here. The evidence in general testified that everything was done for the comfort of the patients, and to the good equipment of the hospitals, although at times there was an insufficiency of supplies owing to the difficulties of transport.

Lord Kitchener's evidence agreed with that of Lord Roberts. He said that the difficulties of transport were very great, and constituted a serious problem throughout. It had been largely necessary to subordinate every thing to the necessity of a rapid advance, The hospital appliances carried on Lord Roberts' advance amounted to 1,680 tons, and it was impossible to take more equipment or personnel. Lord Kitchener acknowledged that doubtless a good deal of suffering was undergone, but this was not due to neglect by the medical officers of to the equipment of the field hospitals. He said that Mr. Burdett-Coutts had never complained to him.

Surgeon-General Stevenson was in favor of the abolition of general hospitals for stationary hospitals.

Lord Roberts had been given carte blanche to expend what sums were required.

WHEN CANADIANS ARRIVE.

Ottawa, Sept. 29.—The following message from Lord Roberts, dated Sept. 28, was received at the Militia Department yesterday.

"1248—Idoko, with first portion of Canadian Regiment, should reach Halifax about Oct. 24.

(Signed)" "ROBERTS."

There is no steamer Idoko in the Royal navy list, or the registry of British merchant shipping. It is thought that the cables refers to the steamer Idaho, 4,100 tons, belonging to the Wilson line, of Hull. The inference from Lord Roberts' message is that the men who are returning will come direct to Halifax. Another cable message received at the Militia Department today announces that Lieut. S. P. Layborn, of the R. C. R. I., who hasbeen serving with the second battalion in South Africa, has been granted a commission in the 21st Lancers. Pte. R. H. Campbell, of the Second Battalion, who joined from Nelson, B. C., has received a lieutenancy in the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry.

BEAUTIFUL GIRL'S DEATH.

Killed by a man who was Driving With Her—Revolver Accidentally Discharged

Bellefonte, N.J., Sept. 30.—John Kreenan a woodman, to-day shot and killed Annie Hobbins, the pretty 15-year-old daughter of John Hobbins, of Gillington, this county.

The two, accompanied by the girl's baby sister, had gone to the woods, and a half hour later Kreenan carried the lifeless body of the girl back home.

There seems little doubt that the shooting was the result of an accident, criminal only because of its carelessness. From reliable sources it is learned that Kreenan. Annie and the latter's sister left the Hobbins home in a wagon to go for a load of wood. On the way Kreenan took out a revolver and the young woman tried to take it away from him. In the struggle which followed the weapon was discharged, the bulet entering the girl's body just above the heart. Kreenan was horror-struck, as the girl was his sweetheart, and clasping her in his arms he hurriedly turned about and drove home, but the girl died on the way and it was only a lifeless body which was returned to the agonized mother.

Kreenan is under arrest and the authorities will make an investigation of the case

Gold Lake Hunt Club

Mr. Wm. Snowden, the generalissimo of the Gold Lake Hunt Club, called at the Times office Saturday, and extended an invitation to the editor of this g.t.j. to join the party at Gold Lake this year. He said the members were all born hunters, and make a practice of leaving camp before daylight to take up their respective deer watches. Mr. Snowden does not approve of this, and believes that it is more conductive to health to stay in bed till the sun is up, at least. The result of this practice is that he is usually alone most of the time at camp. He confidentially told us that he was anxious to have some one added to the party who was too lazy to go out for the early hunt, and who would be company for him at camp. While we confess being exceedingly grateful for the opportunity to spend a season of unalloyed pleasure, which a sojourn at Gold Lake would afford, we are nevertheless forced to decline the invitation. It is not every day that one has the opportunity to revel for days in luxury, such as a close intimacy with the Club's buttermilk tank. The Club will hold its annual meeting at the Snowden House, when Mr. Snowden will submit his financial statement and deliver his budget speech.

COAL STRIKE IS STILL UNSETTLED

President Mitchell Says He Knows Nothing of any Concessions

FOREIGNERS COMPLAINING.

They Will be Compelled to Return to Work if Left Unaided.

Haselton, Pa., Sept. 29.—President Mitchell said this morning that he knows no more to-day about any concessions on the part of the operations of the mines than he did yesterday. He added that he had received no information to-day that a number of the foreigners on strike are complaining that they are becoming destitute, and that if the strike is not soon ended or they do not get help of some kind they will be forced to go back to work. President Mitchell's attention was called to the alleged destitution and asked if complaints had reached him. He said it was the first that he had heard of it. He preferred not to say anything when asked whether relief measures had yet been agreed upon to help the tide over the mine workers during the struggle.

All miners that operated yesterday and heretofore in the Lehigh Valley are working as usual to-day.

THIS COLLIERY STILL WORKING.

Ashland, Pa., Sept. 29.—The Potts colliery was still working to-day despite the strikers efforts to tie it up. Two hundreds and ten boats of coal were hoisted yesterday, producing 29 cars of coal. This was practically the extent of coal mining in the Mahanoy Valley betwen Mahonoy City and Shamokin yesterday.

MORE MEN RETURN TO WORK.

Shamokin, Pa., Sept. 29.—The operators in this vicinity were pleased this morning because a larger number of men than usual reported for work at Midvalley colliery, north of Mount Carmel. Since the strike was instituted the colliery has been operated with more or less success.

Fifty-one cars of coal were shipped from the North Franklin colliery, near Treventon, this morning as a result of yesterday's work, the greatest in the history of the colliery. Ninety per cent. of the men went to work this morning. Everything is quiet here.

THE PLAN OF THE OPERATORS.

New York, Sept. 29.—Anthracite coal was quoted $1 a ton cheaper to-day than it was two days ago. This was taken as an indication that the railroads and others with stocks of coal on hand regard an early settlement of the miners' strike as probable. It was learned that the operators have practically agreed not to entirely ignore the union in making a settlement. The present plan is believed to be to place the concessions before the men at the different collieries and ask them to return to work pending the settlement of remaining differences by arbitration.

SEQUEL TO THE WINE SUPPER

Best Dormer Sentenced to 23 Months in the Central Prison.

Lindsay Post—Messrs. R. Dormer, Albro Silver, Wm. O'Brien (Peterborough) and John Watson, tramp, who figured in the wine supper given at the home of the former last Sunday, were arraigned before Magistrate Steers this morning to answer to the charge of having stolen the "fizz" from the residence of Mr. R. Knowlson, while he and his family were at Sturgeon Point.

Dormer pleaded not guilty, but Mr. Knowlson testified that he had confessed to the theft Monday morning, when some of the wine was found in his possession. No evidence was advanced to inculpate the others in the theft — they drank the wine and asked for more when the pail was empty, but recked not where it came from. As Dormer would not admit that he had any accomplices he had to bear the entire brunt of the affair, and Magistrate Steers sentenced him to 23 months in the Central Prison. The others were discharged. On his way to the jail Dormer told Chief Nevison that "he had let the others down light," and that Silver had not suggested the theft or countenanced it in any way, but that the others had persuaded him to return for wine several times. He admitted making two trips, but the Chief is of opinion that he went four or five times, as wine dregs were found in a pail, a kettle and a crock.

O'Brien arrived in town Saturday evening to take part in the celebration and join his wife, who had been a guest at the Dormer house for some days.

LEAGUE TO AID THE BOERS.

A Meeting at Chicago to Form a National Organization

Grand Rapids, Mich, Oct. 1.—Sybrant Wesselius, as chairman of the committee on organization, to-day sent out a call for a meeting to be held in Chicago, at which the American Transvaal League is to be launched as a national organization. The objects as set forth are "to promote and secure peace for the South African republics; to spread information regarding the cause and create sentiment against the war; to raise funds for the cause; to procure a tender of kindly offices of the United States to end the war.

THREE WHITE MEN KEPT THE FLAG UP

Heroism in Connection With Siege of Kumassi.

London, Sept. 29.—A thrilling story from Kumasi has just come to hand from Captain F. E. Bishop of the Gold Coast Hausas, who held the fort from June 23, when Major Morris' force, with the Governor, cut its way out, until July 15, when Col. Willcocks effected the relief.

Three white men, Capt. Bishop, Lieut. Ralph of the Lagos Hausas, and Dr. Hay, and a garrison of 115 Hausas were left behind to keep the British flag aloft in the face of the rebel thousands. "At the start," says Captain Bishop, "only twenty-five men were really fit. The rest, while capable of manning a loophole, could not have walked five miles to save their lives."

With this little force the Englishmen held on, in spite of starvation and disease. A third of the garrison died of starvation and others from smallpox. One Hausa blew out his brains because death would not come quickly. The garrison had been told when the Governor left it that the relief force was sixteen miles off, and would be in in five days. But the five days passed and no relief force appeared. Major Morris had scarcely left when a band of Ashantis advanced from a stockade. Maxims drove them off.

Around the fort was a pestilential collection of thousands of huts, from which the stench was so great that windows in the fort had to be kept closed in spite of the heat. The doctor was down with fever, but Bishop, Ralph, and half a dozen men with handkerchiefs over their faces entered these huts to see if any sick had been left behind by the people who had gone with the Governor, and then destroyed them.

"Meantime," says the narrative which Captain Bishop has given to Reuter's, "starvation was doing its work in the fort . . . At last the rations consisted of a cup of linseed meal and a block of tinned meat about two inches square. Then smallpox broke out, and the fever-stricken doctor climbed daily over the wall to attend the sick. Hope had vanished.

Then came the relief. On July 14 the garrison believed they heard guns. Next afternoon terrific firing removed any doubt, and at six o'clock that Sunday evening the head of Col. Willcocks' advance guards emerged from the bush, with a fox-terrier trotting fatly in front.

NEWS FROM CHINA.

Tien Tsin, Sept. 27.—Count Von Waldersee and his staff arrived here at noon to-day. Guards of honor from all the allies received him at the railway station, which was decorated with the flags of Germany Russia and France. The flags of Great Britain and the other allies were conspicuous by their absence.

St. Petersburg, Sept 30. The following dispatch dated Pekin, Sept. 27. has been received from M. De-Giers, Russian Minister to China. In accordance with orders from the highest quarters. I am leaving for Tien Tsin with the whole legation.

Pekin, Sept. 25. via Taku, Sept. 28. via Shanghai Sept. 30. At the conference of Generals today the Russian commander, General Linvitch announced the immediate withdrawal from Pekin of the bulk of the Russian troops, and the legation. He leaves on Thursday Sept. 27, and the legation will follow on Saturday. There will remain a mixed force of about 2000 to represent Russia. General Linvitch asserted that the despatch from St. Petersburg transmitting the order to withdraw contained a statement that all the powers war eadopting the same policy. The other Generals replied that they had received no orders of that nature. Germany and Japan are operating to the southward near the Imperial Park.

London, Oct. 1.3.30 a.m. Beyond a sheaf of Imperial Edicts, which throw into still worse confusion the complicated Chinese situation, there is little in to-days news to arrest attention from Shanghai comes an unconfirmed report that the allies have seized Shanghai Kwang.

CASGRAIN FOUND DEAD.

Distinguished Canadian Found Dead in His Room in Chicago

Chicago, Sept. 29.—W. T. Casgrain, a civil and contracting engineer, a man of distinguished Canadian family, was found dead in his room yesterday. A gas jet was turned on and it is believed that death was wilfully sought.

He died in a hotel where he had registered under an assumed name. The whereabouts of his wife and family who lived here with him until a year ago are not known. In his office was found a diary containing notations of his expenditures. In his list of expenses the initials "F.V." appear nearly every day, one entry being "F.V., a trip to Chicago $40." From the nature of the entries the police believe that "F.V." is a woman. In the back of the book this address was found—"F. V., 13 Sixth street, Williamsport, Pa."

WILL NOT NEGOTIATE THROUGH PRINCE TUAN

If he is Retained Americans will Insist That Envoys be Given Power to Conclude Peace

SOUTHERN VICEROYS EXPECT WAR SHORTLY.

Li Hung Chang Promises if Hostilities Cease, the Chinese will Conduct Themselves Better in the Future.—Viceroys Impeach Prince Tuan.

London, Sept. 29.—The only important feature of the Chinese crisis this morning is the announcement of the intention of the United States to demand absolute power for the envoys—Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching —in case the removal of Prince Tuan from his high place in the councils of the European is not accomplished. This is a step which cannot but commend itself to everybody. For negotiations to be commenced and a treaty to be concluded which would have to pass through the hands of Tuan before reaching the Emperor for ratification would be merely a farce. Such negotiations could not for a moment result in the punishment of the Boxer chiefs, for Prince Tuan would be careful to advise his Imperial master against sanctioning a treaty which placed their heads in danger or militated against the success of the Boxer movement now almost assured. The situation offers increasing difficulties, and the true solution, as has been often said in these despatches, is undoubtedly the sword.

HOW THE POWERS STAND.

Washington, Sept 29.—The alignment of the powers on the German proposition to make the punishment for the Chinese leaders a condition precedent to negoiations may now be stated as follows.

Great Britain, Russia and France stand with the United States in regarding this proposition as inexpedient.

Japan occupies a middle attitude. She is willing to follow the German lead if all the other powers are agreeable. but only for the sake of preserving harmony among the powers and not from a belief in the wisdom of the German proposition.

Austria and Italy stand shoulder to shoulder with Germany, making the dreibund a solid front. The first named two powers do not attempt to argue the German proposition, and their answers make it apparent that they have accepted it without much consideration.

Nothing is known here officially of the alternative proposition which is reported to be preparing in Europe. It it contains the same feature as to prior punishment as the original proposition it is not likely to receive approval here.

Secretary Hay has been in the closest sympathetic touch with all that has been done respecting China during his absence, and the stories printed in Germany to the effect that he is comback to reverse those policies is pronounced at the State Department to be absurd. The officials are impressed, and have been from the beginning, with the conviction that any attempt made to punish Prince Tuan and others before negotiations are undertaken will absolutely defeat all efforts to obtain a peaceable and satisfactory settlement.

ALLEGED AMERICAN ULTIMATUM.

New York. Sept. 29.—If the protest regarding the appointment of Prince Tuan forwarded by Minister Wu Ting Fang remains without effect, and Tuan is kept in the Privy Council, the United States will refuse to negotiate with China unless assurances are given that the action of the viceroys shall not be subject to review by the Chinese Emperor, says a special to The Times from Washington.

This is an unusual step, but the circumstances of the case are held to make it necessary. If Tuan is kept in the Privy Council it is certain that the peace treaty would have to pass through his hands in order to get to the Emperor, and the prevent that the United States will insist the Emperor divest himself of all powers by making those of Prince Ching and Earl Li absolute.

PRINCE TUAN IMPEACHED.

New York, Sept. 29.—A despatch to The Herald from Shanghai says it is learned from reliable Chinese sources that the friendly southren Viceroys, Liu Kun Yi Chang Chi Tung, and Yuan Shih Kai, have impeached Prince Tuan, General Kuang Li and General Tung Fuh Siang in a memorial to the throne. Tung Fuh Siang is still in command of the Imperial troops.

LI HUNG CHANG'S PROMISE.

Tien Tsin, Sept. 25, via Taku, Sept 26, via Shanghai, Sept 29.—Li Hung Chang told Gen. Chaffee to-day that his chief desire was to effect a cessation of hostilities, and he promised that the Chinese would not again take the initiative in fighting. He expressed confidence in the fairness of the United States and said he hoped the American Government would act as a mediator, using its influence to hasten the assembling of the proper body to settle the whole question.

He is in constant cable communication with Wu Ting Fang, the Chinese Minister in Washington, and it is understood that he has received assurances that a majority of the powers will recognize his credentials. At the suggestion of Gen. Chaffee he is hastening his perparations to leave for Pekin.

A British cavalry reconnaissance forty miles to the southwest of Tien Tsin occupied several towns without opposition The region is reported peaceful.

A messenger who arrived here to-day brings news of a massacre of thirteen Swedish missionaries in the northern part of the province of Shan Si.

THEY EXPECT A WAR.

Shanghai, Sept, 28.—According to private advices received here from Nankin the Southern viceroys expect Great Britain and Germany to declare war on China, and there is no likelihood of China surrendering the authors of the antiforeign uprising for punishment.

Should such an attack be made, the Yang Tse viceroys must make a show against the country's enemies, though well aware that the situation is hopeless and anxious not to sacrifice life unnecessarily.

Meanwhile forces and provinces are being sent to Tai Yuan Fu, the capital of the Province of Shan Si. The position of the viceroys is grave.

Emperor Kwang Su has issued an edict thanking Emperor Nicholas for his decision to withdraw the Russian troops from Pekin, and also announcing his own willingness to preform a memorial ceremony over the grave of Baron Von Kettaler, the murdered German Minister to China.

It is announced from a Chinese official source that the Imperial court has ordered that the palace at Si Ngan Fu capitial of the Province of Shen Si, be immediately prepared for its reception.

SHANTUNG CLEARED.

London, Sept. 29.—The following despatch, dated Sept. 27, has been received from Shanghai—"It is reported that General Mei Kong Yai has expelled the Boxers from Shantung, and is now following them into the Province of Chi Li. Some excitement has been caused by a rumor that Chinese steamers flying the British flag are conveying munitions of war from the Shanghai arsenal northward. It is reported that Russia has offered to advance money to China to repay the British loan."

CAN'T BRIBE BRITAIN.

London, Sept. 29.—A despatch to the Standard to Tien Tsin, dated Sept. 24, says that a conference has been arranged between Field Marshal Count Waldersee, Admiral Seymour and Gen. Gaselee for Sept. 26. The correspondent ascribes to Li Hung Chang a statement regretting the difficulty he experiences in reconciling British and Russian interests, and says that his adherence to Russia is entirely owing to the failure of British support of him in the past, which, adds the correspondent, means that the British have been less ready to bribe him than the Russians. Li Hung Chang is represented as saying that Admiral Alexieff's motive in going to Port Arthur was to avoid meeting Von Waldersee.

TUAN'S FLEET DANGEROUS.

Moscow, Sept. 29.—Prince Tuan has ordered the Southern generals to proceed to North China in order to renew hostilities. The ports will soon be blockaded especially Canton and Hu Chow, and the threatening spirit of the rebel fleet is, according to the opinion here, very dangerous for the foreign commercial vessels.

General Alexajeff has been received by the Russian admiral at Taku, and after conferring with the admiral inspected the troops and the forts.

General Rennenkampf has successfully occupied the Bodone pass after the rebels had fled. General Orloff has also sent a garrison to the same place. General Fleischer's column is en route for Mukden.

News received here states that the pillaging and murdering in the Province of Kwangtung still continues. Upward of 20,000 native Christians are homeless and in the grip of famine. It is said, however, that most of the missionaries escaped to Canton.

SHOT FOUR BOXERS.

London, Sept. 29.—A despatch from Pekin. Sept. 22, reports that the British have shot four Boxers who were convicted of murdering twenty-one persons three weeks after the capture of Pekin.

REVENGE IN CHINA.

England and Germany are clamoring for vengeance on the Chinese who did not kill their ministers and citizens. The Chinese who did this thing are safely in the woods and will not come out to be decapitated. If they do return to the scene of their depredations it will be under those convenient changes of name and appearance that are so easy in the Yellow Empire, and their anonymity, if they prefer to go about in mufti, will be maintained by the help of all their friends and acquaintances. The Chinese are practically a unit against the foreigners. They desire most emphatically to be left alone. Yet, they do not all express their hostility by force, nor do they all approve of force in the expulsion of the troublers. Hence, it is the peaceful and the stay-at-homes who will suffer when the Western nations undertake the threatened revenge. Unless Prince Tuan and a few others of the leaders can be captured, the punishment by the allies will be of slight avail in changing the temper of the Chinese. They have reason to fear the people who have killed their wives, who have spitted their babes on bayonets, who have looted their shops and houses, who have outraged their daughters, who have impressed their sons into servitude and driven them along the road to Peking with lash and saber, in the name of the Christian religion and modern civilization, but they will go little to help the troops who have done these things to any further authority or power. With the entire population against them, it will, therefore, be almost impossible for Germany and England to execute any revenge that will be other than a resumption of the bridgeheads of the advance to Peking. Add to this hostility the shiftiness of the Chinese nature, the absolute inability of some of the people to tell the truth or understand the use of doing so, their stoicism, their willingness to accept the worst of fate if they believe that there is no escape, their habit of offering substitutes, even who will suffer in the place of wealthy, obvious that the proposition for revenge is impracticable. Still, as a preliminary to declaring that they will remain in the captured country and that later they will help themselves to large slices of it, this resolution serves as well as any.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Laurier is a bitter fighter, and the big contributors will wait a long while before they hear him say he's got enough.

• • • • •

Whether mud-fighting takes place or not, it would not be surprising if some of the campaign orators began throwing up coal shortly.

• • • • •

The engagement of vaudeville performers for the political campaign is not remarkable. Conventions and elections have long been a farce, particularly in Peterborough.

• • • • •

The Liberal newspapers are giving a daily organ recital these days. "Canada is well satisfied with Laurier" is the long and short of it.

• • • • •

The London Advertiser refers to Oom Paul as Sir Charles Tupper's double. There is no similarity. Sir Charles has not skipped out with the campaign funds.

FUN AND SENTIMENT.

"I don't think that Mr. Eatington ever declines an invitation to dinner." "Oh, no! He's a sort of social lion seeking what he may devour."—Puck.

"I see it is becoming the fad to have your wedding cinematographed." "But a feller doesn't have to have his courtship cinematographed, thank heaven!"

"Pa, what is a lineal descendant?" "A lineal descendant is a person who has to fall back on some praiseworthy ancestor for his own importance."—Detroit Free Press.

"As to the emperor," said the empress dowager, "the silly boy hardly knows whether he is dead or alive." "From which," remarked Li Hung Chang, "I infer that he reads the papers."—Puck.

Visitor—"What is the meaning of this large and enthusiastic demonstration? Is there a peace jubilee being held?" Boy—"Naw, sir. De local football club wiped de earth up wid der rivals."—Norristown Herald.

Book Canvasser—Pardon me, madame, but are you interested in the study of prehistoric man? Miss Antique—No indeed! It keeps me busy trying to get the man of to-day interested in me.—Chicago News.

"Young Populare is the most self-possessed man I ever saw. He never gets the least bit rattled under any circumstances." "Why, in what exigency did you ever see him tried, to have such confidence in him?" "I saw him exhibiting his first baby to half a dozen women at once, and answering every question rationally."

A Tart Old Lady.

Out in Indiana a good many years ago a certain old lady, summoned as a witness, came into court wearing a large poke bonnet, such as was then much affected by rural folks. Her answers to the questions put to her being rather indistinct, the court requested her to speak louder, though without much success.

"The court cannot hear a word you say, my good woman," said the judge. "Please to take off that huge bonnet of yours."

"Sir," she said composedly and distinctly enough this time, "the court has a perfect right to bid a gentleman take off his hat, but it has no right to make a woman remove her bonnet."

"Madam," replied the judge, "you seem so well acquainted with the law that I think you had better come up and take a seat with us on the bench."

"I thank your honor kindly," she responded, dropping a low courtesy to the court, "but there are old women enough there already."—Law Notes.

Mistakes in Telegraph Messages.

Two funny telegraph stories are printed by the Pittsburg Disptach on the authority of a former employe of the Western Union company.

He was receiving a dispatch from Albany, in which the sender was not overcareful in spacing his letters. Lawton took the address as follows:

"Dr. A. Wing, room car agent, Central depot, New York."

The dispatch came back with the marginal report that there was no such person at the address named. The operator at Albany was called up and explanations followed, in consequence of which the address was changed to "drawing room car agent, central depot."

A still more absurd mistake was once made in the same office when a telegram was received for "James W. Giles, pie clerk, Brooklyn nasty yard." This was afterward amended to read, "James W. Gillespie, clerk, Brooklyn navy yard."

A Correction.

An amusing double-barreled case of heterophemy occurred not long ago at a meeting of the licensing sessions in an English city. The chairman, discussing the law requiring the bona fide travelers to go a certain distance before being entitled to liquid refreshment, referred to it as being "three miles as the flow cries."

A superior person hastily rose to correct his worship, but could get no nearer than "Your worship means 'as the fly crows,' or rather," he added hastily, "'as the cry flows.'"

No one was rash enough to make a further attempt, and the magistrates went on in their efforts in behalf of sobriety.

Sweet Advice.

The Rev. Mr. Perkins being called upon sudenly to address a Sunday school, thought he would get a few original ideas from his young hearers. "Children," said he, "I want some of you to tell me what I shall talk to you about to-night. What shall I say?" At first there was no response. "That bright little fellow over there," said he pointing to a youngster on a back seat. "What shall I say to you to-night?" In a little, piping voice came the answer:—"Say amen and sit down."—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

A Resourceful Bride.

"Can we afford," he faltered, sadly, "to have a skeleton in our closet?"

As for the woman, she wept, for they were indeed wretchedly poor, but she was not, therefore, altogether unresourceful.

"We might keep it in the hall and use it for a hat rack!" exclaimed the bride, for her mind was giving way under the constant effort to practice economy.—Detroit Journal.

His Purpose.

"What are you assuming such a belligerent air for?" said the small potentate's adviser. "Don't you know that we don't want to fight?"

"Of course, I know it. And I realize that we've got to do something exceedingly plausible to keep the other people from finding it out."—Washington Star.

The Jolly Girl

Often changes to the jaded woman. "I can't see what's come over Mary; she used to be such a jolly girl," was the remark of a young woman visiting a married schoolmate. Marriage changes a woman. The drains and pains which are so often the sequence of marriage rob her of all vitality. Give her back her former strength and she'll be as "jolly" a wife as she was a maid. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription gives back the lost strength by re-establishing the health of the delicate womanly organs. It dries the drains and stops the pains. It cures ulceration, inflammation and female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"For two years I had been a sufferer from chronic diseases and female weakness," writes Mrs. Allen A. Bobson, of 1125 Rodman Street, Philadelphia, Pa. "I had two different doctors, and they gave me medicine which only relieved me for a time. My niece advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I concluded that to open a correspondence with you for your advice would be safest, so I did, and have been highly benefited. I find that after taking six bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and five of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and following your advice in regard to local treatment, I am now a strong woman. Accept my sincere thanks for the interest manifested in my case and the happy results obtained."

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. Correspondence private. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

BISMARCK COULD DRINK.

And Yet He Lived to a Ripe Old Age and Always Enjoyed His Pipe.

"Bismarck had two immense mugs of beer brought to us. He took one of them and shoved the other over to me. I remarked that I drank only water. He looked at me in silence, curiously and almost suspiciously for a minute and then proceeded with the subject under discussion. The more interested he became in our conversation the more frequently and copiously he drank. After finishing his own mug he appropriated mine without a word and put down its contents in three or four tremendous drafts. Then he had a servant fetch and fill two enormous pipes. When he offered me one of them, I explained that I never smoked. "'What!' he cried, 'neither drink nor smoke? What kind of a supernatural man are you anyway?'

"It was a mercy to both of us, however, that I did not accept the pipe, for Bismarck smoked so incessantly that within fifteen minutes the air in the room was dense. When I rose at the end of the evening from the table at which we were sitting, the smoke was so thick that I could hardly see the chancellor's face."

alone. In this belt about me you will find one hundred francs. Will you take them for her? Will you accept the trust?"

There was a strange gurgling in his throat, but the fleeting breath still clung to its mortal tenement.

Ulmont was bewildered. What should he say—what should he do?

"Promise me," wailed the old man sharply, in an agony of entreaty. "Another moment, and my life is spent. Promise you will protect my child come what may, and you will gain a dying man's eternal blessing. For the love of heaven, speak quickly!"

It was all so sudden Ulmont scarcely realized what he did.

How could he refuse so vital a request, with those entreating eyes burning into his very soul? He seemed as if in a strange dream.

"I promise," he answered, slowly.

"Swear it!" gasped the dying voice. "You will protect Izetta, come what may."

"I will protect Izetta, come what may," repeated Ulmont steadily. "As I deal by your child, so may Heaven deal with me!"

"God bless you! I shall hold the trust a sacred one,"' whispered the faint voice.

A smile of unutterable joy lit up his wrinkled face.

"Bless you!" he muttered; then he turned to the young girl clinging and sobbing her heart out on his breast.

"Izetta," he murmured, "Izetta—"

The steamer plowed heavily through the dark, seething waters. The pale moon looked pityingly down from the misty clouds upon the white, horrified face of Ulmont Ulvesford, and the fair, young girl, who uttered, in piercing cries:

"Grandfather! oh, my grandfather, speak to me; do not leave me all alone. See, my heart is breaking!"

The bitter cries died away over the dark, rippling water; the stiffening fingers and the cold lips gave back no answering caress, as was their wont. It was all over. The sands of the old man's life were run. He was dead. And the White Cresson bore steadily on her way.

CHAPTER II.

A Question of Honor.

All through the long night and the day that followed Ulmont pondered long and earnestly over the strange predicament in which he found himself suddenly placed; he felt annoyed and perplexed.

Two days ago he was as free and untrammeled as the wind that blew; now, the responsibility of this young girl's future was thrust suddenly upon him.

He paced the deck to and fro, asking himself over and over again what he should do with her.

At first, he had thought of taking Izetta directly home; then the stern haughty face of his lady- mother rose up before him in bitter censure, as her keen eyes fell searchingly, coldly on the timid, shrinking orphan who had been thrust so unceremoniously upon their care; then he wondered what Loraine, his promised bride would think of this affair.

That quite convinced him it would be the most imprudent course he could possibly pursue, taking Izetta home until he had prepared the way for her.

He was certainly vexed about the whole matter.

Since the death of her grandfather Izetta had turned to him instinctively for sympathy, a world of unutterable woe in the mute, dark eyes, raised to his face.

She was wholly adrift on the world —without rudder or compass.

By some strange, capricious impulse, when Izetta had timidly asked him his name, he had answered by giving her his middle name—Alderic Ross.

A flush mantled his clear brow as his lips framed the name; overindulgence through all his boyhood had given somewhat of a dash of recklessness to his nature, yet this was the first deception he had ever willfully lent himself to.

He quite regretted it the next moment after he had spoken.

He could hardly have told why he did it. Only heaven alone could have foretold the terrible consequences which were to accrue from that one heedless act of folly.

Ulmont thought it best to acquaint Izetta at once with the plans he had made in regard to her future.

He knew just where he should find her, sitting on a coil of rope in a remote quarter of the deck; her large eyes with a far away look in them, gazing out over the water, her hands clasped idly in her lap.

"Izetta," he said kindly, "I have concluded it will be best to leave you at the next port, which we shall reach in probably an hour or so, while I go on alone—"

He was amazed at the startled cry which she uttered as she turned to him ere he had finished his sentence.

"Oh, Mr. Ross," she cried, clinging tremblingly to his arm, "let me go with you; I will surely die if I am left all alone!"

The pleading expression on the beautiful young face, the quivering lips, and the tears lying on the dark eyelashes, touched him strangely.

"How could I lose sight, even for a day," she sobbed, "of the only kind face that has smiled upon me in the land of strangers to which we are going?"

Her great grief had so wrapped her in its mantle that she had not once thought of her future that spread out darkly before her.

She had not the remotest idea of the peculiar position into which fate had drifted her.

Youth is impulsive; there was no one to warn her how far she could trust the handsome young stranger who had become so unexpectedly part and parcel of her life.

To whom should she turn for comfort, sympathy and guidance, if not to Mr. Ross, as she called him?

Ulmont [illegible]

"It will be only for a day or so Izetta," he said, "before I can take you home."

"You wish to ask your mother if you may bring me home?" she asked.

"Yes," he replied, frankly; "I believe it to be my duty to consult her first in regard to the matter."

"What if she should refuse," she questioned in a low voice, "what would become of me— what should I do?"

"She will not refuse," he answered, "when I explain to her the vow which I have made to protect you and tell her your sorrowful history."

"Do you think your mother will learn to love me, Mr. Ross?"

The simple question startled him.

"I do not see how she can help loving you," he replied, gazing down into the girl's eloquent face, mentally thinking she little knew into what good hands her fate had drifted her. He released himself gently from her clinging hands.

"I had not thought you would be sorry to lose me for so short a time," he said, gently.

"You will not stay away long, Mr. Ross," she asked, in a low voice; "oh, Mr. Ross, what should I do without you, how should I bear my lonely life? I should die if you did not come back. I have not one friend on all the wide, wide earth but you— since—since—"

"You must not worry yourself with such thoughts Izetta, I have given my word; I will never break it. You must from this time forth look upon me as your best and truest friend— your brother!"

He was very enthusiastic at that moment; he quite meant what he said.

He had intended speaking of Loraine, yet he could not bring himself to mention her— his proud, peerless Loraine— to the timid young creature who, he was certain, would be in such awe of her.

After all, as he gazed at the beautiful, trusting, clinging little creature at his side, he could not feel so very sorry he had undertaken the responsibility of her future.

He was only anxious as to how his mother and Loraine would receive the strange intelligence.

Just as the sun was setting behind the western hills, flushing the sky a rosy red, Ulmont and Izetta were making their way up the straggling, moss- grown street to the heart of the little seaport town of Sussex, which was but little over a day's journey from his destination; yet Ulmont had never been in that locality before.

There was not a more picturesque spot to be found, with its quaint old square-towered churches, over which the ivy twined in long trailing sprays, and in which the twittering sparrows built their nests.

A little purling brook leaped from the green hills, that raised their towering heads in the distance, while beyond the white stretch of beach that led to the sea were the peaceful meadows filled with flowers, upon which the sun shone, with the blackbird and the robin swaying to and fro on the blossoming peach trees.

"Oh, Mr. Ross," cried the girl, a glad flush creeping into her face, "I never knew, I never dreamed America could be one half so fair as this!"

They passed up the moss-grown street, which led to the only tavern in the place. A long, low, old-fashioned structure, with a wide porch in front, shaded by stately elms.

Into a wide parlor, overlooking a thrifty garden, they were ushered.

The floor, dark and polished, was covered with bright- hued rugs, while the chintz- covered settees and low willow rockers, placed here and there, gave the room an exceedingly comfortable and homelike aspect.

Ulmont went in search of the landlord while Izetta sank into a seat, not observing the bustling little woman in the dark gingham gown and white frilled cap, whose sharp, twinkling gray eyes were regarding her steadfastly from across the room.

"She does not look like a married woman," mentally commented Mrs. Bruce. "I must know more of her before she finds shelter here. You and your husband have come quite a distance, I should judge," she said, aloud.

Izetta turned in surprise; she had imagined herself quite alone; she saw a woman's face turned kindly toward her.

Izetta longed to cross to where the speaker sat, fling herself on the low footstool beside her, and tell her of the great sorrow that had come upon her in the death of the only being to whom she was bound by a kindred tie in all the wide world.

How little the child knew of the pitiless, relentless world, or its intriguing people!

She had long hungered for a woman's gentle words and kindly sympathy; great tears rose in Izetta's eyes as she answered simply, yet with the candor of a child.

"Mr. Ross is not my husband, madam."

"Perhaps your brother, then?" queried Mrs. Bruce.

"I have a great sorrow, madam," said Izetta, mournfully, tears filling her large, dark eyes; "a sorrow so great I have wondered since that I had not died with the shock. I had neither father nor mother—I had no one to whom I could turn for sympathy. Mr. Ross was so kind to me —I do not know what would become of me if I were to lose Mr. Ross. I am quite alone now, only for him."

"Do you mean to say the young man who brought you here is quite a stranger to you?" she asked, sharply and interrogatively.

"Yes," answered Izetta, simply, "we came over from Italy on the steamer White Cresson."

She wondered why, in one short moment, the speaker's voice had grown so bitter and so hard.

Izetta's answer had quite convicted her in the eyes of the bustling housewife, whose face had grown white with rage.

From the open window where she sat she had heard Ulmont ask her husband if his companion might find shelter at the inn during his absence of a few days.

"Money was no object," he said, "if she were only comfortable."

Ulmont had pressed a purse so filled with gold into his hand he fairly took the landlord's breath away; and he had looked at the handsome, court-

The properties of this Company are situated directly west and 600 feet lower in elevation than the famous Le Roi, No. 1 and Le Roi No. 2, that are now shipping 10,000 tons a week. THE COLORADO COPPER MINING COMPANY is fortunate in being the possessor of five splendid showing properties in the great Salida copper belt, the principal copper producing region of this portion of the Rockies. All of our claims have been more or less developed and it is our purpose to put them on a paying basis at once.

Our company owns, clear of incumbrance, the following claims: The Sedalia Extension, the Sedalia Extension No. 2, which property adjoins the great Sedalia mine, which has been a big producer for upwards of seventeen years; the Copper King of Colorado, which runs adjoining the above; the Copper Queen of Salida, a very promising property, only a few steps from the depot in Salida. This claim occupies an imposing position on a mountain just north of the city; and last, but by no means least, the [illegible], located two miles east of Salida at Cleora station, on the main trunk line of the great Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, also on the Arkansas river, which in length is one of America's greatest streams.

BISMARCK COULD DRINK.

And Yet He Lived to a Ripe Old Age and Always Enjoyed His Pipe.

"Bismarck had two immense mugs of beer brought to us. He took one of them and shoved the other over to me. I remarked that I drank only water. He looked at me in silence, curiously and almost suspiciously for a minute and then proceeded with the subject under discussion. The more interested he became in our conversation the more frequently and copiously he drank. After finishing his own mug he appropriated mine without a word and put down its contents in three or four tremendous drafts. Then he had a servant fetch and fill two enormous pipes. When he offered me one of them, I explained that I never smoked. "'What!' he cried, 'neither drink nor smoke? What kind of a supernatural man are you anyway?'

"It was a mercy to both of us, however, that I did not accept the pipe, for Bismarck smoked so incessantly that within fifteen minutes the air in the room was dense. When I rose at the end of the evening from the table at which we were sitting, the smoke was so thick that I could hardly see the chancellor's face."

alone. In this belt about me you will find one hundred francs. Will you take them for her? Will you accept the trust?'

There was a strange gurgling in his throat, but the fleeting breath still clung to its mortal tenement.

Ulmont was bewildered. What should he say— what should he do?

"Promise me," wailed the old man sharply, in an agony of entreaty. "Another moment, and my life is spent. Promise you will protect my child come what may, and you will gain a dying man's eternal blessing. For the love of heaven, speak quickly!"

It was all so sudden Ulmont scarcely realized what he did.

How could he refuse to vital a request, with those entreating eyes burning into his very soul! He seemed as if in a strange dream.

"I promise," he answered, slowly.

"Swear it!" gasped the dying voice. "You will protect Isetta, come what may."

"I will protect Isetta, come what may," repeated Ulmont steadily. "As I deal by your child, so may Heaven deal with me!"

"God bless you! I shall hold the trust a sacred one,"' whispered the faint voice.

A smile of unutterable joy lit up his wrinkled face.

"Bless you!" he muttered; then he turned to the young girl clinging and sobbing her heart out on his breast.

"Isetta," he murmured, "Isetta—"

The steamer plowed heavily through the dark, seething waters. The pale moon looked pityingly down from the misty clouds upon the white, horrified face of Ulmont Ulvesford, and the fair, young girl, who uttered, in piercing cries:

"Grandfather! oh, my grandfather, speak to me; do not leave me all alone. See, my heart is breaking!"

The bitter cries died away over the dark, rippling water; the stiffening fingers and the cold lips gave back no answering caress, as was their wont. It was all over. The sands of the old man's life were run. He was dead. And the White Cresson bore steadily on her way.

CHAPTER II.

A Question of Honor.

All through the long night and the day that followed Ulmont pondered long and earnestly over the strange predicament in which he found himself suddenly placed; he felt annoyed and perplexed.

Two days ago he was as free and untrammeled as the wind that blew now, the responsibility of this young girl's future was thrust suddenly upon him.

He paced the deck to and fro, asking himself over and over again what he should do with her.

At first, he had thought of taking Isetta directly home; then the stern haughty face of his lady-mother rose up before him in bitter censure, as her keen eyes fell searchingly, coldly on the timid, shrinking orphan who had been thrust so unceremoniously upon their care; then he wondered what Loraine, his promised bride would think of this affair.

That quite convinced him it would be the most imprudent course he could possibly pursue, taking Isetta home until he had prepared the way for her.

He was certainly vexed about the whole matter.

Since the death of her grandfather Isetta had turned to him instinctively for sympathy, a world of unutterable woe in the mute, dark eyes, raised to his face.

She was wholly adrift on the world—without rudder or compass.

By some strange, capricious impulse, when Isetta had timidly asked him his name, he had answered by giving her his middle name—Alderic Ross.

A flush mantled his clear brow as his lips framed the name; overindulgence through all his boyhood had given somewhat of a dash of recklessness to his nature, yet this was the first deception he had ever willfully lent himself to.

He quite regretted it the next moment after he had spoken.

He could hardly have told why he did it. Only heaven alone could have foretold the terrible consequences which were to accrue from that one heedless act of folly.

Ulmont thought it best to acquaint Isetta at once with the plans he had made in regard to her future.

He knew just where he should find her, sitting on a coil of rope in a remote quarter of the deck; her large eyes with a far away look in them, gazing out over the water, her hands clasped idly in her lap.

"Isetta," he said kindly, "I have concluded it will be best to leave you at the next port, which we shall reach in probably an hour or so, while I go on alone—"

He was amazed at the startled cry which she uttered as she turned to him ere he had finished his sentence.

"Oh, Mr. Ross," she cried, clinging tremblingly to his arm, "let me go with you; I will surely die if I am left all alone!"

The pleading expression on the beautiful young face, the quivering lips, and the tears lying on the dark eyelashes, touched him strangely.

"How could I lose sight, even for a day," she sobbed, "of the only kind face that has smiled upon me in the land of strangers to which we are going?"

Her great grief had so wrapped her in its mantle that she had not once thought of her future that spread out darkly before her.

She had not the remotest idea of the peculiar position into which fate had drifted her.

Youth is impulsive; there was no one to warn her how far she could trust the handsome young stranger who had become so unexpectedly part and parcel of her life.

To whom should she turn for comfort, sympathy and guidance, if not to Mr. Ross, as she called [illegible]

Ulmont [illegible]

"It will be only for a day or so Isetta," he said, "before I can take you home."

"You wish to ask your mother if you may bring me home?" she asked.

"Yes," he replied, frankly; "I believe it to be my duty to consult her first in regard to the matter."

"What if she should refuse," she questioned in a low voice, "what would become of me— what should I do?"

"She will not refuse," he answered, "when I explain to her the vow which I have made to protect you and tell her your sorrowful history."

"Do you think your mother will learn to love me, Mr. Ross?"

The simple question startled him.

"I do not see how she can help loving you," he replied, gazing down into the girl's eloquent face, mentally thinking she little knew into what good hands her fate had drifted her. He released himself gently from her clinging hands.

"I had not thought you would be sorry to lose me for so short a time," he said, gently.

"You will not stay away long, Mr. Ross," she asked, in a low voice; "oh, Mr. Ross, what should I do without you, how should I bear my lonely life? I should die if you did not come back. I have not one friend on all the wide, wide earth but you— since—since—"

"You must not worry yourself with such thoughts Isetta, I have given my word; I will never break it. You must from this time forth look upon me as your best and truest friend—your brother!"

He was very enthusiastic at that moment; he quite meant what he said.

He had intended speaking of Loraine, yet he could not bring himself to mention her— his proud, peerless Loraine— to the timid young creature who, he was certain, would be in such awe of her.

After all, as he gazed at the beautiful, trusting, clinging little creature at his side, he could not feel so very sorry he had undertaken the responsibility of her future.

He was only anxious as to how his mother and Loraine would receive the strange intelligence.

Just as the sun was setting behind the western hills, flushing the sky a rosy red, Ulmont and Isetta were making their way up the straggling, moss-grown street to the heart of the little seaport town of Sussex, which was but little over a day's journey from his destination; yet Ulmont had never been in that locality before.

There was not a more picturesque spot to be found, with its quaint old square-towered churches, over which the ivy twined in long, trailing sprays, and in which the twittering sparrows built their nests.

A little purling brook leaped from the green hills, that raised their towering heads in the distance, while beyond the white stretch of beach that led to the sea were the peaceful meadows filled with flowers, upon which the sun shone, with the blackbird and the robin swaying to and fro on the blossoming peach trees.

"Oh, Mr. Ross," cried the girl, a glad flush creeping into her face, "I never knew, I never dreamed America could be one half so fair as this!"

They passed up the moss-grown street, which led to the only tavern in the place. A long, low, old-fashioned structure, with a wide porch in front, shaded by stately elms.

Into a wide parlor, overlooking a thirfty garden, they were ushered.

The floor, dark and polished, was covered with bright-hued rugs, while the chintz-covered settees and low willow rockers, placed here and there, gave the room an exceedingly comfortable and homelike aspect.

Ulmont when in search of the landlord while Isette sank into a seat, not observing the bustling little woman in the dark gingham gown and white frilled cap, whose sharp, twinkling gray eyes were regarding her steadfastly from across the room.

"She does not look like a married woman," mentally commented Mrs. Bruce. "I must know more of her before she finds shelter here. You and your husband have come quite a distance, I should judge," she said, aloud.

Isetta turned in surprise; she had imagined herself quite alone; she saw a woman's face turned kindly toward her.

Isetta longed to cross to where the speaker sat, fling herself on the low footstool beside her, and tell her of the great sorrow that had come upon her in the death of the only being to whom she was bound by a kindred tie in all the wide world.

How little the child knew of the pitiless, relentless world, or its intriguing people!

She had long hungered for a woman's gentle words and kindly sympathy; great tears rose in Isetta's eyes as she answered simply, yet with the candor of a child.

"Mr. Ross is not my husband, madam."

"Perhaps your brother, then?" queried Mrs. Bruce.

"I have a great sorrow, madam," said Isetta, mournfully, tears filling her large, dark eyes; "a sorrow so great I have wondered since that I had not died with the shock. I had neither father nor mother—I had no one to whom I could turn for sympathy. Mr. Ross was so kind to me—I do not know what would become of me if I were to lose Mr. Ross. I am quite alone now, only for him."

"Do you mean to say the young man who brought you here is quite a stranger to you?" she asked, sharply and interrogatively.

"Yes," answered Isetta, simple, "we came over from Italy on the steamer White Cresson."

She wondered why, in one short moment, the speaker's voice had grown so bitter and so hard.

Isetta's answer had quite convicted her in the eyes of the bustling housewife, whose face had grown white with rage.

From the open window where she sat she had heard Ulmont ask her husband if his companion might find shelter at the inn during his absence of a few days.

"Money was no object," he said, "if she were only comfortable."

Ulmont had pressed a purse so filled with gold into his hand he fairly took the landlord's breath away; and he had looked at the handsome, court-

Memorial Gift

The family of the late John Leahy, Douro, presented St. Joseph's Church, Douro, with two magnificent statues—one of the Virgin Mary, and the other of St. Joseph. These memorial offerings were subsequently blessed by Rev. W. J. Kielty, the parish priest, with appropriate ceremonies.

A Keene Wedding.

The wedding took place in Keene on Wednesday at the residence of the bride's father of Miss May Tucker and Mr. Archibald Davidson, jr. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Elmhirst. On returning from their honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Davidson will take up residence in Keene.

Liberal Meet To-Night

An organization meeting of Liberals will take place this evening in Stevenson's Hall, Water street, at 7.30 o'clock. The object of the meeting is to organize, and prepare for the campaign which is now practically on. Mr. McClellan, the candidate, will be present, and will address the meeting. It is quite evident, the way things are shaping, that a very lively campaign may be looked for.

Business Enterprise.

Enterprise is essential to success in any undertaking. The people recognize the fact that they will obtain the fullest satisfaction by dealing with the merchant, manufacturer, professional or other man who is known for the energy which he puts into his business. There is no other way by which evidence of enterprise can be given as well as by newspaper advertising. Everybody reads The Times.

Broke His Collar Bone

On Thursday morning, Mr. R. R. Jory, of Douro, met with a serious accident. He was engaged in drawing milk from his farm to the Pine Grove Cheese factory, when his horse shied at a block of wood and swung round quickly, throwing Mr. Jory out of the rig. He fell on his left shoulder and a can of milk spilt over him. Medical aid was summoned and it was found that his collar bone was fractured and he was badly bruised.

Not Up-to-Date

Some of our exchanges, including one of our little boiler plate contemporaries, have been printing as an item of news a paragraph which appeared in these columns several weeks ago, to the effect that Game Warden Smith, of Belleville, has been out to Apsley looking after pot hunters, where he fined a party of Americans, who had a cottage on Jack's Lake, $20 each. It always takes two or three weeks for our contemporaries to catch up to this great family journal.

Honorably Acquitted.

Mr. Wm. O'Brien, who was arrested when at work in the Wm. Hamilton Company's foundry on Thursday last, and taken to Lindsay, when he was charged with complicity in a robbery in that town, was honorably acquitted at his trial. Mr. O'Brien called at the Times office on Saturday, and said that he felt there should be some recourse for him in an action for damages, but under the circumstances, he feared there was not, as the law was all against the victim.

MORE BOXES OF GOLD.

And Many Greenbacks.

To secure additional information directly from the people, it is porposed to send little boxes of gold and greenbacks to persons who write the most interesting, detailed, and truthful descriptions of their experience on the following topics.

1. How have you been affected by coffee drinking and by changing from coffee to Postum?

2. Do you know any one who has been driven away from Postum because it came to the table weak and characterless at the first trial?

3. Did you set such a person right regarding the easy way to make Postum clear, black, and with a crisp, rich taste?

4. Have you ever found a better way to make it than to use four heaping teaspoonful to the pint of water, let stand on the stove until real boiling begins, then note the o'clock and allow it to continue easy boiling full 15 minutes from that time stirring down occasionally? (A piece of butter about the size of a navy bean, placed in the pot will prevent boiling over.

5. Give names and account of those you know to have been cured or helped in health by the dismissal of coffee and the daily use of Postum Food Coffee in its place?

6. Write names and addresses of 20 friends whom you believe would be benefited by leaving off coffee. (Your name will not be divulged to them.)

Address your letter to the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich. writing your own name and address clearly.

Decision must be made between Oct. 20th, and November 10th, 1900, by three judges, not members of the Postum Cereal Co., and a neat little box containing a $10 gold piece sent to each of the five best writers, a box containing a $5 gold piece to each of the 20 next best writers, a $2 greenback to each of the 100 next best, and a $1 greenback to each of the 200 next best writers, making cash prizes distributed to 325 persons.

Almost every one interested in pure food and drink is willing to have their name and letter appear in the papers, for such help as it may offer to the human race. However, a request to omit name will be respected.

Every friend of Postum is urged to write and each letter will be held in high esteem by the company, as an evidence of such friendship, while the little boxes of gold and envelopes of money will reach many modest writers whose plain and sensible letters contain the facts desired, although the sender may have but small faith in winning at the time of writing.

Talk this subject over with your friends and see how many among you can win prizes. It is a good, honest competition and in the best kind of a cause. Cut this statement out for it will not appear again.

WHAT WOMEN READ.

It is often said, and it is probably true, that women make or mar the success of writers of fiction. It is probable that for every man who reads a novel there are ten women readers for the same book. The extraordinary sales of some recent books may probably be traced to the influence and taste of women. They are quick to appreciate at its true value what is wholesome both in action and sentiment. The fact has not been lost on publishers. They have tried in many ways to find out how far women's influence contributes to the success of work of a more practical or useful nature. Many plans to this end have been tried. Books have been offered as premiums with magazines. They have been presented attractively in cheap series; and bound to please women's discriminating aesthetic sense, and if a judgment may be based upon the numerous schemes of this kind there can be little doubt that the success of other branches of literature than that of fiction depends largely on the widespread desire for useful knowledge with which the American woman has been imbued by the high average culture of our public schools. These comments have been called to mind by the recent publication by The Macmillan Company of a little set of four books, which make up "The Woman's Home Library of Useful Knowledge," and which in themselves form a complete guide to woman's work and opportunities. "How Women May Earn a Living" is the suggestive title of the first volume in the library. It is wreitten by Mrs. Helen C. Candee and is dedicated to "All those women who labor through necessity and not caprice." She divides her book into twenty-two chapters, each of which deals with an occupation at which a young woman may earn a living. The author herself has always been a working woman and writes with a knowledge and keen sympathy which add force to the many bits of advice she gives. Few women would find difficulty in deciding upon a career after reading such a book, it is full of sound wisdom and useful points.

From work to the home, and from the home to the family, are easy and natural steps, so the next book we take up is on The Care of the Child in Health, by Dr. Nathan Oppenheim, the well-known New York physician. In it he speaks of the earliest stages of the child's life and of the influence to be exerted upon its future by the pursuits and habits of its mother. The baby's outfit, nursery, feeding, bathing, sleep, exercise and clothing have each a chapter of sound sense devoted to them. The latter part of the book deals with the child's habits, the relation of parents to children, and education, and closes with some wise views as to the treatment of defective children and some of the common diseases. It is written in such a wholesome way that the youngest woman can read it without embarrassment, and indeed should by no means fail to read it if she has the opportunity. Another of the volumes in this library is on Home Nursing — Modern Scientific Methods for the Care of the Sick, by Eveleen Harrison, a trained nurse of some considerable standing in her profession. It gives simple rules and remedies for invalid cookery, specifying the various diseases in which they will be found most useful. It tells how to heat, ventilate and make attractive the sick room, how to prevent and care for coughs and colds. It describes the early symptoms of tonsilitis, gripe, bronchitis, plurisy and pneumonia, tells what to do in mild cases and when to send for a physician. It gives minute directions for different kinds of baths—cold, hot, footbaths, mustard baths sponge baths and salt baths, and under what conditions they will be beneficial. One chapter treats of poultices, plasters, cold and hot applications, sprays, douches and injections, while another tells what to do in case of accidents—burns, cuts, bruises, sprains, stings, foreign bodies in the throat or ear. All in all it is a book which will add to the comfort of the sick and lessen the anxiety of those who care for the sick.

There are many women in very moderate circumstances who put by enough money to pay the expenses of a European trip, and to such will appeal European Travel for Women, by Mary Cadwalader Jones, the last volume in the library. The title of the book itself is suggestive. It reminds us that whatever is true of the enslavement of women in the past, her emancipation is pretty complete so far as this hemisphere is concerned. It contains chapters on preparations for the journey, etiquette in foreign countries; and very useful intimate hints for travel on the European continent which no guide-book touches and on which so much personal comfort depends. The intending tourist will find her path considerably smooth by the information contained in this little book which can be slipped into a satchel without inconvenience.

So much for a detailed description of this useful little library. There is perhaps no country but our own in which such a set of books could be offered profitably to the average women a state of things which has been brought about by a farsighted patriotism which has made it possible for education to advance in equal strides with material prosperity.

"Every Path Hath a Puddle."

The puddle in the pathway of most lives is a defective circulation due to a blood supply that instead of growing clear and strong like a mountain brook, is stagnant and impure. Puddles may be purified, however, and and become limpid streams. That is what Hood's Sarsaparilla does with human blood.

It clarifies, purifies and strengthens the blood, and when this is accomplished, the vital organs, liver, lungs, kidneys, bowels, are all braced and invigorated. It never disappoints.

Dyspepsia—"My wife suffered from rheumatism, dyspepsia and pains in her stomach. She had medical attendance but did not get relief. She read about Hood's Sarsaparilla and tried it. Three bottles entirely cured her. She is now a well and hearty woman." T. W. COVERT, Cape Sable Island, N. S.

Sick Headache—"For a long time I was troubled with sick headaches. Different medicines failed to give me relief. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, my husband having been cured of salt rheum by it, and soon it made me feel like a new woman." MRS. ROBERT MCAFEE, Deerhurst, Ont.

No other business school in Canada, nor perhaps on the continent, is in a better position to do as much for its pupils as we are doing.

These successes are simply the RESULTS of the thorough course of training which this school has been giving its pupils during the past 24 years, and which has gained us the confidence of the business public and enables us to place many of our pupils with the best business houses. What we get we hold. What we have not got, we're after.

Rundle Recaptures a Lost Mountain Gun and 60,000 Rounds of Ammunition.

TWENTY HIGHLANDERS KILLED IN AN EXPLOSION

General Baden-Powell Will Command 12,000 Policemen Who Will Pacify the Conquered States—Canadians Have Left Cape Town.

Lorenzo Marquez, Oct. 1. The Austrian steamer Styria Loyd has sailed from here, having on board four hundred Transvaal refugees, part of them being Irish-Americans. All their expenses have been paid by the Transvaal Government. Each man received 30s "$7.50" and will be paid £8 10s "42.00" on landing at any part which may be selected by them.

A FATAL EXPOSION.

Lorenzo Marques, Oct. 1.—An explosion occurred at Komatipoort while the British were destroying the Boer ammunition, resulting in the death of two of the Gordon Highlanders and the wounding of 18.

KITCHENER TO ASSIST ROBERTS

London, Oct. 1.—The Times in an editorial reference this morning to the appointment of Lord Roberts as Commander-in-Chief, hints that Lord Kitchener will also come home to assist him at the new post.

TWELVE THOUSAND POLICEMEN

Pretoria, October 1.—Baden-Powell has arrived here to take command of the police in the Transvaal and Orange River Colony, where it is proposed to maintain a force of 12,000 men under Gen. Baden-Powell.

RUNDLE ANOTHER SUCCESS

London, Oct. 1.—A despatch from Lord Roberts, dated Sunday, September 30, says.—

"Rundle's troops in Bethlehem district have recaptured from the Boers a mountain battery gun lost at Nicholson's Nek and also 65,000 rounds of Martini-Henri ammunition."

WHEN PEACE WILL BE DECLARED.

London, Oct. 1.—A special despatch from Cape Town says that United States Council Stowe, who goes to the United States shortly on leave of absence, has expressed the opinion that peace will be proclaimed on October 11, the anniversary of the commencement of hostilities in South Africa.

BOERS KILLED BY A MINE.

London, Oct. 1.—Lord Roberts reports that the Boers suffered more severly in the action at Pienaar's River station than he had previously thought. He says:

"Believing that the post was weakly held, they advanced boldly to within 200 yards of our advanced trenches, when they came under the fire of two mountain guns. The explosion of a mine, of the existence of which they were ignorant, killed several.

"Pole-Carew reports that he paraded the troops at Komatipoort in honor of the King of Portugal's birthday. The men presented arms to the Portuguese flag."

ANOTHER BOER LEADER.

Pretoria, Oct. 1.—News has been received from the north to the effect that Barend Vorster, who was a member of the late Transvaal Volksraad, and who is at Zoutpansberg, has constituted himself chief of the Boer Government, and is directing plans for the continuance of the struggle. It is not thought that his opposition will be serious when the British atack his forces. His followers are not enthusiastic, and his supply of munitions of war is scanty. It is reported that General Botha, with 2,000 men is advancing by way of Leydsdorp to join Vorster at Pietersburg.

MINERS IGNORE OWNERS' OFFER.

Employees of the Philadelphia and Reading Still on Strike.

Philadelphia, Oct. 1.

The mine operators of the Wyoming Lackawanna and Lehigh regions to-day, at a meeting at Wilkesbarre followed yesterday's action of the Reading Company in offering an increase of 10 per cent. in wages to the mine workers. They furthermore decided to reduce the charge for powder from $.725 to $1.50 per keg. The action of the Wilkesbarre meeting means an increase of 10 per cent. to all mine workers, except miners, the latter will earn an increase of about 10 per cent. by reason of the reduced cost of powder. The meeting was attended by representatives of all the leading railroad companies which own mines in the regions named. Some of the independent operators opposed the proposed increase, unless the coal carrying companies reduce the tolls on their product to tide water. The strikers, however, show no indication of accepting the offer.

Shenandoah, Pa., Oct. 1.—The notice posted yesterday by the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company announcing an increase in wages of ten per cent. to all of its employes was ignored by the striking mine workers, and none of them went to the workings this morning.

ANOTHER MEETING GOING ON

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 1.—No attempt was made to-day to resume operations at any of the idle mines. The strikers were anxiously awaiting news from the national officers of the United Mine Workers.

A meeting of the general superintendents of the Lackawanna, the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre, the Delaware and Hudson, the Lehigh Valley, Coxe Bros & Company, and the individual operators will be held here this afternoon. It is thought a formal offer will then be made the miners working in this vicinity. The terms will probably be the same as those proposed by the Reading Company, a 10 per cent. increase in wages with a promise to arbitrate other grievances if the men return to work. There will be no formal recognition of the Miners Union. If the men attempt a 10 per cent. increase all well and good. If they don't the operators say the strike is destined to go on.

At strike headquarters it was given out that the men would take no action, no matter what offer the companies should make, until President Mitchell had been consulted. A great many of the strikers were willing to accept a 10 per cent. increase, but they say they would do nothing to antagonize the officers of the United Mine Workers. It was the judgment of those here in a position to know that a settlement of the strike depended upon President Mitchell waiving the right of the National Executive Board through him to dictate what terms should be accepted and allowing the local union to decide the matter.

NO CHANCE IN WYOMING.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 1.—The strike situation in the Wyoming Valley remains unchanged this morning. The colliery at Mocanaqua, employing 400 men is still working. It is apparent from the declarations of the strikers and their leaders that no action will be taken on the attempt of the mine owners to start their collieries by an offer of a ten per cent. increase in wages until word comes from President Mitchell.

SAME NUMBER AT WORK.

Hazleton, Pa., Oct. 1.—Reports from the various collieries throughout the Hazleton district to-day show that practically the same number of men are working as on Saturday, notwithstanding another march by the striking mine workers which took place early this morning.

HOG CHOLERA IN ESSEX

Serious Loss Threatened to Farmers—Many Hogs Slaughtered

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 1.—Hog cholera has broken out again in Malden Township, Essex County. The hogs had been allowed to run on a strip of land near the lake, and it is believed the disease was caused by their eating diseased meat thrown from passing boats. The disease is spreading and if not checked will mean serious loss, as hog-raising is one of the chief industries. Many hogs have been ordered to be slaughtered and others quarantined

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT AT STONY LAKE.

A Lad Killed by the Discharge of a Gun.

HIS PEOPLE LIVED IN TORONTO

He was Enjoying himself at a Picnic When the Accident Occurred—Death Was Instantaneous—Relatives in Toronto Notified.

A very sad accident occurred at Stony Lake yesterday, by which a young lad named Campbell, about 14 years of age, lost his life. It appears that the pupils of the private school conducted by Mr. Mackenzie, at Lakefield, known as "The Grove," were holding their annual picnic at Stony Lake. The pupils, who were as bright and joyous a lot of boys as ever got together, had spent the day very pleasantly at Stony Lake, and were in the act of boarding the Steamer Majestic, previous to returning, when by some means at present unknown, a gun in the hands of one of the boys was accidently discharged, and the full force of the charge entered the head of young Campbell, instantly killing him.

Tenderly the remains were placed on board, and the steamer headed for Lakefield, when the sad news was telegraphed to the unfortunate lad's parents in Toronto.

The deceased had been a pupil at the school for about two years, and was a general favorite. He was one of the brightest students at the school, and always well up at his work.

The tragedy has cast a gloom over the entire village.

TOWN COUNCIL IN SESSION

THE POULTRY ASSOCIATION ASK FOR A GRANT.

The Hamilton Bridge Co. Secure the Contract for Steel Superstructure of Reid-st Bridge—Mr. Sheehy Awarded Contract for Granolithic Walk—Reports and Miscellaneous Business

The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From E. B. Edwards, Town Solicitor, enclosing contracts executed by Wm. Langford for abutements and the decks of the Reid Street Bridge.—Received.

From J. E. A. Fitzgerald, stating that owing to the strike of the coal miners it is impossible at present to furnish either coal or prices of same for supply for civic buildings.—Received.

From Hon. Mrs. Hamilton, Auburn, asking for electric light in the vicinity of her residence.—Fire, Water and Light Committee.

From Alice McClennan, asking for remission of balance of her taxes.—Court of Revision.

From R. Sheehy, declining the appointment as Inspector of concrete for new bridge on Reid street on account of the relations between the contractor, Mr. Langford, and himself last year, in connection with granolithic pavements.—Received.

From Joint Secretaries of the Father O'Leary Testimonial Fund, transmitting a copy of the following resolution adopted by the citizens of Quebec at a public meeting, Sept. 19th—"Resolved—That the Mayor and Press of the different cities and towns in the Dominion of Canada be and are hereby respectfully invited to co-operate with the citizens of Quebec in the organization of a National Testimonial to Rev. Father O'Leary, as a public recognition by his fellow countrymen of their appreciation of his heroic services, admiration of the splendid example of Christian tolerance which he has given in his connection as a Roman Catholic chaplain with the Canadian contingent in South Africa, which Testimonial is intended to be presented to him on his return to Canada."

The idea is to raise a sufficient sum of money to purchase an annuity that will assure the rev. gentleman's declining years against want, and Council was asked to take immediate steps to open a subscription list for this purpose.—Finance Committee.

From Town Solicitor E. B. Edwards, re Peterborough vs. C.P.R., saying that by instructions of the Mayor he had given notice of appeal in this case with the object of keeping the matter alive till it could be dealt with by Council.

This communication refers to the C.P.R. Co's. siding running up to the Dickson Company's premises, which came recently before the Courts. The solicitor points out that while the island itself is of no value in its present condition, the Town should have right of way to the river beyond. This would be important, he claims, in the event of the opening of the Trent Valley Canal to navigation, and the position taken by the company is such to exclude the town from even the right of crossing their railway. The communication was received.

POULTRY SHOW.

Messrs. R. H. Leary and Wm. Collins addressed Council in behalf of the Peterborough Poultry and Pet Stock Association, asking for as liberal a grant as possible for the forthcoming show.

As the Association expect a free use of the market building for the occasion, besides a money grant, the matter was left in the hands of the Finance Committee, so that Market Clerk English can be consulted.

TO WRITE UP PETERBOROUGH.

Mr. A. E. G. Nye, representing Desbarats & Co., Engravers, Printers and Publishers, of Montreal, waited upon Council with a view to writing up and illustrating the town, the same to be published in handsome book form. BRITISH GUNBOAT TAKES CHINESE REBELS

They Are Flogged for Firing Upon a British Steamer.

RUSSIA DENIES THE CONQUEST OF MANCHURIA.

Hong Kong, Oct. 1.—The British gunboat Robin has shelled the village of Luk-Lau on the West River, in retaliation for the inhabitants firing on a British steamer. The ringleaders were afterwards captured and flogged.

CONQUEST OF MANCHURIA.

London, Oct. 1.—A despatch to The Times from St. Petersburg confirms the reports that the town of Kirin surrendered to the Russians without a shot on peremptory orders from Prince Ching. The despatch says that if similar orders shall be issued with regard to Mukden the Russian conquest of Manchuria will be completed. According to the same authority no further reinforcements will be required by the Russian commanders in the far East.

MANCHURIA NOT ANNEXED.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 1.—The official Messenger to-day declares the tenor of the Government's official communications in regard to Russian's tasks in the Far East clearly demonstrates that the reports of the annexation of Manchuria are devoid of all foundation.

LOOTED TONG SCHAN.

Tien Tsin, Sept, 28, via Shanghai. Sept 30.—The Chinese abandoned and looted Tong Schan (?) ostensibly because their wages were in arrears and they feared a Russian attack. General Sir Alfred Gaselee is going to Wei-Hai-Wei.

MISSION SAFE ON SEPT. 23.

Paris, Oct. 1.—The French Consul-General at Shanghai, under date of Saturday, September 29, telegraphs that he has been informed by the Governor of Sent Che Hi that through the intervention of Sheng the missionaries and engineers at Tsing Ting Fu were safe and sound September 23; that the military and civil authorities took precautions to protect all the missionaries, and that the Belgian mission at Ning Tian Lung was safe.

BOOTY PACKED AND LABELLED.

London, Oct. 1.—Dr. Morrison, wiring to the Times from Pekin on Sept. 24, says.

"At the same moment the Chinese offered to permit the British to occupy without opposition both Shan Hai Kwan and Tong Schan they also made overtures to the British to occupy Peitang. Although it was known that these overtures were supported by the British authorities in Pekin, they were discountenanced by Rear Admiral Bruce on the ground that they would disturb the concert of Admirals.

"Systematic Russian denudation of the summer palace has resulted in stripping it of every valuable article. The loot has been packed and labelled, and is now awaiting transportation to Russia.

"On the second attempt the white pagoda and two adjoining temples were razed to the ground."

VICEROYS PROMISE PEACE.

Pekin, Sept 25. via Taku, Sept. 28, and Shanghai, Sept. 30.—Prince Ching, the pro-foreign peace commissioner, transmitted to the Ministers of the various powers to-day a communication from the Governor of Shantung and the acting Viceroy of Chihli, asking the commanders of the foreign armies to defer the sending of expeditions to those sections. The acting Viceroy and the Governor of these provinces says they have received orders from the throne to destroy the Boxers, which they are doing industriously with Imperial troops. The Viceroy sends a lengthy report of what he has accomplished in this line in Chihli, and begs the foreign commanders not to send the proposed expedition to Pao-ting-fu. He says that if the allies carry out this intention, the foreign troops will probably come in collision with the Chinese Imperial soldiers, and there will be more trouble. He promises to maintain peace if the task of exterminating the Boxers is left to him. The letter from the Governor of Shantung is of the same tenor. Mr. Conger, the American Minister, places little faith in these guarantees. He says these officials made the same promises during the siege of Pekin.

APOLOGY TO KAISER.

Shanghai, Sept. 29, 8.10 p.m.—An Imperial letter to the German Emperor, which was sent to-night, says the Emperor of China sends greetings to the Kaiser. It goes on to say,

"This sudden uprising in China has resulted in the murder of your Minister. My subordinates have acted disgracefully and have broken our friendly relations, for which I am deeply sorrowful. I have to-day ordered Grand Councillor Kunkang to offer oblations before the Minister's coffin. I have also ordered Li Hung Chang and Liu Kun Yi to offer every facility for the return of the coffin to Germany. When it reaches that country I have ordered my Minister at Berlin to again make oblation, and thus show my profound regrets. Formerly our two countries wer epeaceful. I now appeal to you to regard our common interest and allow of early peace negotiations, so that perpetual peace may be secured. I make this special and earnest appeal."

The Emperor has also sent a letter to the Mikado of Japan, in which he expresses regret for the murder of the Japanese Secretary of the Legation at Pekin. In this letter he states that he has ordered funeral oblations at Pekin and by the Chinese Minister at Tokio. The Emperor also grants a funeral allowance of 5,000 taels.

RUSSIANS LEAVE PEKIN

St. Petersburg. Oct. 1.—The following despatch, dated Pekin, Sept, 27 has been received from M. de Giers, Russian Minister to China.

"In accordance with orders from the highest quarters, I am leaving for Tien Tsin with the whole Legation."

U. S. TROOPS TO LEAVE.

Tien Tsin, Oct. 1.—Orders from Washington directing the withdrawal of the bulk of the American troops were received this afternoon, and preparations to comply were begun immediately. Gen. Chaffee is here directing the movement, which will commence at the earliest possible moment.

WALDERSEE AT TIEN TSIN.

Tien Tsin, Oct. 1.—Count von Waldersee and his staff arrived here at noon to-day. Guards of honor from all the allies received him at the railway station, which was decorated with the flags of Germany, Russian, and France. The flags of Great Britain and the other allies were conspicuous by their absence.

CHECK FOR HALF A MILLION.

New York, Sept. 29.—William K. Vanderbilt has given his cheque for half a million dollars to his daughter, the Duchess of Marlborough, says a London despatch to the World. The gift is in the nature of a thank-offering for the Duke of Marlborough's safe return from the war in South Africa, after about seven months service.

The Duchess, accompanied by the Duke, is now in Paris investing the money in antique furniture, and decorative articles for the house now building for her in Mayfair, one of the most fashionable districts of London.

The money for the house—another half million dollars—was a Christmas gift to the Duchess from her father.

SEVERED HUMAN HEAD.

Gruesome Mystery Which is Agitating the People of Chicago

Chicago, Oct. 1.—A silver tooth plate in which two false incisors of the upper jaw were wired, is the only clew to the identity of a severed head that was found tied in a grain sack in Cedar Lake just across the Indiana State line. The head was packed in quicklime before being thrown into the lake, and the features were destroyed by the action of the chemical so that the only hope of getting a clew to the mystery is that the dentistry work may be recognized.

BOTH BURNED TO DEATH.

Children of Mrs. Morgan, of Fallowfield, Lose Their Lives.

Ottawa, Sept. 29.—A fire occurred at Fallowfield yesterday afternoon in which a boy of three and a girl of five, the family of Mrs. James Morgan, lost their lives. It is supposed that they got possession of matches. The mother was working in the potato patch out of sight of the house and only arrived in time to see the roof collapse. The story was brought to the city by a farmer this morning.

WEATHER NOTES.

Probs—Moderate to fresh easterly winds; fine; not much change in temperature. Showers in some localities this evening.

Fine weather prevails from Ontario to the Maritime Provinces, but in the Territories and Manitoba, it is becoming very bad again, and snow and rain, is setting in generally. A moderate easterly gale is indicated for Lake Superior.

October Canadian Magazine

Principal Grant, in his charming style, opens the October Canadian Magazine with an article on "The Jason of Algoma." This deals with the work which is being done by F. H. Clergue in building pulp mills, railroads, canals and other works in Northern Ontario, the estimated cost of which is over fifteen million dollars. There are two instalments of W. A. Fraser's new animal story, entitled "Mooswa," which is the Cree name for moose. This is a story for old and young, in which the leading Canadian animals talk in such a way as to reveal their habits and peculiarities. Agnes Deans Cameron, a British Columbia Teacher, tells some plain and wholesome truths in a brisk article, entitled "Parent and Teacher." C. W. Nash writes of wild geese and ducks, and Reginald Gourlay gives some information about shooting snipe. R. L. Richardson, M.P., continues his railway articles, and M. E. Nichols gives "A Forecast of the General Elections." There are the usual stories and departments, making up an excellent number.

PETERBOROUGH, OCTOBER 2 1900.

A SMALL WAR SPEC.

Another war cloud appears upon the horizon. This is a very little one, but it comes opportunely to keep our hand in just as we are withdrawing from China. It appears that a person named Azagui, who was murdered at Fez, was a naturalized citizen of the United States and our government has demanded $5,000 of the Sultan of Morocco as indemnity for his killing. Like other Eastern potentates, the Sultan is slow in paying and there is talk of sendiung a warship to enforce the claim.

Those who recall th erepeated effor's by the United States to collect a somewhat larger indemnity from the Sultan of Turkey will not be unduly alarmed at tghis prospect. Sultans are not accustomed to hurry, though they are ready in promises and it takes a long time to get to th epoint of sending a warship.

Some of these days we shall have a claim against China that will be worth talkin gabout and that will probably take a proportionately long time to collect.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Times has received an invitation to an "At Home," given by the Manitoba Free Press, the occasion being the formal opening of the new Press building.

The Tories ar etrying to bring the various sections of the party into line. Their appeal will doubtless have a ring of earnest ness about it entirely different from th eringe they are accustomed to when th selection to the Ontario House is on.

Politics may make strange bedfellows but nobody does so much lying in it as the campaihn liar.

At London Sir Richard Cartwright gloried in the fact that American manufacturers are paying Canadian import duties. So the producer does pay the duty sometimes, you see. Free trade axioms are not so popular with Liberals now as they once were.

Business Enterprise.

Enterprise is essential to success in any undertaking. The people recognize the fact that they will obtain the fullest satisfaction by dealing with the merchant, manufacturer, professional or other man who is known for the energy which he puts into his business. There is no other way by which evidence of enterprise can be given as well as by newspaper advertising. Everybody reads The Times.

—The great fair at Bobcaygeon took place on Saturday, and, notwithstanding the rain, there was a large attendance.

WHAT WOMEN READ.

It is often said, and it is probably true, that women make or mar the success of writers of fiction. It is probable that for every man who reads a novel there are ten women readers fo rthe same book. The extraordinary sales of some recent books may probably be traced to the influence and taste of women. They are quick to appreciate at its true value what is wholesome both in action and sentiment. The fact has not been lost on publishers. They have tried in many ways to find out how far women's influence contributes to the success of work of a more practical or useful nature. Many plans to this end have been tried. Books have been offered as premiums with magazines. They have been presented attractively in cheap series; and bound to please women's discriminating aesthetic sense, and if a judgment may be based upon the numerous schemes of this kind there can be little doubt that the success of other branches of literature than that of fiction depends largely on the widespread desire for useful knowledge with which the American woman has been imbued by the high average culture of our public schools. These comments have been called to mind by the recent publication by The Macmillan Company of a little set of four books, which make up "The Woman's Home Library of Useful Knowledge," and which in themselves form a complete guide to woman's work and opportunities. "How Women May Earn a Living" is the suggestive title of the first volume in the library. It is wreitten by Mrs. Helen C. Candee and is dedicated to "All those women who labor through necessity and no caprice." She divides her book into twenty-two chapters, each of which deals with an occupationn at which a young woman may earn a living. The author herself has always been a working woman and writes with a knowledge and keen sympathy which add force to the many bits of advice she gives. Few women would find difficulty in deciding upon a career after reading such a book, it is full of sound wisdom and useful points.

From work to the home, and from the home to the family, are easy and natural steps, so the next book we take up is on The Care of the Child in Health, by Dr. Nathan Oppenheim, the well-known New York physician. In it he speaks of the earliest stages of the child's life and of the influence to be exerted upon its future by the pursuits and habits of its mother. The baby's outfit, nursery, feeding, bathing, sleep, exercise and clothing have such a chapter of sound sense devoted to them. The latter part of the book deals with the child's habits, the relation of parents to children, and education, and closes with some wise views as to the treatment of defective children and some of the common diseases. It is written in such a wholesome way that the youngest woman can read it without embarrassment, and indeed should by no means fail to read it if she has the opportunity. Another of the volumes in this library is on Home Nursing — Modern Scientific Methods for the Care of the Sick, by Eveleen Harrison, a trained nurse of some considerable standing in her profession. It gives simple rules and remedies for invalid cookery, specifying the various diseases in which they will be found most useful. It tells how to heat, ventilate and make attractive the sick room, how to prevent and care for coughs and colds. It describes the early symptoms of tonsilitis, grippe, bronchitis, plurisy and pneumonia, tells what to do in mild cases and when to send for a physician. It gives minute directions for different kinds of baths—cold, hot, footbaths, mustard baths sponge baths and salt baths, and under what conditions they will be beneficial. One chapter treats of poultices, plasters, cold and hot applications, sprays, douches and injections, while another tells what to do in case of accidents—burns, cuts, bruises, sprains, stings, foreign bodies in the throat or ear. All in all it is a book which will add to the comfort of the sick and lessen the anxiety of those who care for the sick.

There are many women in very moderate circumstances who put by enough money to pay the expenses of a European trip, and to such will appeal European Travel for Women, by Mary Cadwalader Jones, the last volume in the library. The title of the book itself is suggestive. It remainds us that whatever is true of the enslavement of women in the past, her emancipation is pretty complete so far as this hemisphere is concerned. It contains chapters on preparations for the journey, etiquette in foreign countries; and very useful intimate hints for travel on the European continent which no guide-book touches and on which so much personal comfort depends. The intending tourist will find her path considerably smooth by the information contained in this little book which can be slipped into a satchel without inconvenience.

So much for a detailed description of this useful little library. There is perhaps no country but our own in which such a set of books could be offered profitably to the average women a state of things which has been brought about by a farsighted patriotism which has made it possible for education to advance in equal strides with material prosperity.

Not Up-to-Date

Some of our exchanges, including one of our little boiler plate contemporaries, have been printing as an item of news a paragraph which appeared in these columns several weeks ago, to the effect that Game Warden Smith, of Belleville, has been out to Apsley looking after pot hunters, where he fined a party of Americans, who had a cottage on Jack's Lake, $30 each. It always takes two or three weeks for our contemporaries to catch up to this great family journal.

What is it?

A man who has been running a race with steam and electricity for years, finds himself suddenly stopped. It seems as if a cold hand clutched his heart. His brain whirls; he can hardly see. "What is it?" he asks himself as the attack passes.

If his question meets a right answer, he'll be told that his seizure is a warning to pay more attention to his stomach, which is already deranged by irregular meals and rich foods.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. It eliminates from the blood disease breeding poisons. It makes the blood rich and pure, and furnishes a foundation for sound, physical health.

"About ten years ago I began to have trouble with my stomach," writes Mr. Wm. Connolly, of 535 Walnut Street, Lorain, Ohio. "It got so bad that I had to lay off quite often—two and three days in a week. I have been treated by the best doctors in this city, but got no help. Some said I had cancer of the stomach, others catarrh, others dyspepsia. Then I wrote to you for advice. You advised the use of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets.' These medicines I have taken as directed. I commenced to get better from the start, and have not lost a day this summer on account of my stomach. I feel tip-top, and better than I have for ten years."

Keep the bowels healthy by using Dr. Pierce's Pellets. They don't gripe.

A NOVEL.

cous, impatient stranger, wondering what it could all mean, while his wife, closely observing all from the window, mentally concluded all was not right with them; and she said to herself, if the handsome stranger left the young girl there she would doubtless never look upon his face again.

Mrs. Bruce had passed many a year at the inn, and had seen many pitiful scenes. She said to herself:

"He is tired of the girl, he wishes to abandon her, if she is not his wife."

Then she turned to Izetta, whose simple candor had confirmed her worst suspicions.

At that moment Ulmont entered the cool, shadowy parlor, bowing to the lady present, and holding out both hands to Izetta.

His quick perception told him there was something amiss between Izetta and the landlady, as such he judged her rightly to be.

Mrs. Bruce turned sharply toward him.

"You are a gentleman," she said, "bred and born. I know blue blood when I see it, and I say there is a mystery here between yourself and this young creature, scarcely more than a child, who confesses she is not your wife, yet you have crossed the seas together. We are poor people here, sir, but we are honest ones. I have daughters grown up of my own. We care not for your gold; the Sussex Inn shall never harbor even the shadow of wrong-doing while Esther Bruce lives. Food you may have in plenty, but not shelter. No, not for a single night!"

In vain Ulmont bent his haughty pride to explain the circumstances which surrounded this peculiar case—the inflexible woman was deaf to his words.

"I had no intention of stopping myself," he expostulated; "I take the boat lying down at the wharf which leaves in half an hour."

The landlady looked at him with gathering scorn in her eyes.

Ulmont Ulvesford staggered back as though a heavy blow had been suddenly dealt him.

Lurid flashes of light seemed gleaming before his eyes; the hissing voice falling sharply on his senses seemed to flaunt back the words:

"The boat has left!"

With trembling hands he hurriedly consulted his watch—it was indeed too true; he had loitered too long; the darkness of night was gathering sullenly around them, and Izetta was refused shelter at the inn because she was not his wife!

For himself he cared not; then and not until then did the full realization of his exact position strike him forcibly.

How was he to keep the terrible vow forced upon when failure beset him at the very outset?

How little they thought that one incident would reap such a harvest of woe.

Had Ulmont found shelter for the young orphan at the inn, the seeds of the bitterest of follies would never have been sown.

CHAPTER III.

At His Mercy.

An hour later two figures stood on the white pebbled beach watching intently the approaching steamer, whose headlights, each moment growing nearer, glowed like bright stars against the dark, overhanging background of clouds.

The moonbeams fell clear and bright upon them, casting weird, gigantic shadows on the white beach; the low winds moaned as they stirred the blossoming trees, and the waves dismally beat against the shore.

Ulmont Ulvesford was lost in a deep reverie, impatiently watching the incoming steamer, scarcely heeding the silent little figure watching every expression that crossed his face who stood by his side.

"But for this unfortunate affair, I should have been almost at Boston," he told himself.

The arrival of the steamer was so uncertain, they would not expect him until the following week.

He had intended surprising them by arriving a week sooner, but now the surprise would take quite another form.

How his friends would laugh at his sorry plight if they were to see him now—he, an Ulvesford, heir that very day to one of the richest estates in America, refused shelter for his young charge at a miserable little inn scarcely a day's ride from his own magnificent home; yet he had not dared to tell them he was an Ulvesford, heir to the Ulvesford mines.

He had asked no favor for himself; their refusal cost his haughty pride a severe blow.

Ulmont had made several attempts to find shelter for Izetta in Sussex, in every instance he had been asked the same question:

"Is the young lady your wife?"

"Wife!" he had said to himself bitterly; "the whole town must be mad! What would Loraine say when she heard of it?"

The situation was becoming desperate; he certainly saw no help for it.

"He must take her home," he told himself, ruefully.

At that moment the steamer glided into port, another moment and they were on board, making their way through the throngs that promenaded the decks toward the cabin.

Ulmont found a desirable seat for Izetta, placing himself beside her; his brain was in a whirl, he wanted time to think.

Izetta clung to his hand like a terrified child; the strange, conflicting scenes through which she had just passed had quite unnerved her. She was sobbing pitifully now. Ulmont was quite at a loss how to comfort her.

As he bent slightly forward, the light from the hanging chandelier fell upon his handsome face, whose profile, hitherto, had been turned toward a heavy-set elderly gentleman, who sat at a little distance, regarding him intently, a mingled expression of amazement and determination on his face.

"I am sure I cannot be mistaken," he muttered; "and yet——"

As he spoke he rose slowly and crossed the cabin to where Ulmont sat, his head bent upon his hand, evidently in deep thought, and tapped him gently but firmly upon the shoulder.

The effect was electrical.

Ulmont started to his feet; before him stood the one person in all the world, save his mother and golden-haired Loraine Lorrimer, who had the slightest influence with the wayward young heir.

Ulmont's embarrassment was but momentary, however; he reached out his hand in pleased surprise.

What explanation could he offer?

"My dear rector," he began, "this young lady is my—charge," he had intended to say, when just then it occurred to him how preposterous the idea would sound, and the words died away on his lips.

"Your wife?" asked the rector, in growing wonder, interrogatively.

"His wife," there it was again! Why should the whole world persist in such a preposterous illusion?

The flush receded from his face.

"No, not my wife," he answered, calmly; "Miss Rienzi is my charge."

"I—I do not understand," said the rector, in utter bewilderment; he was quite sure he had not heard aright. "Did you say this young lady, whom I observe to be a foreigner, is your charge?"

A grave, stern look crept about the pastor's gentle mouth as he gazed steadily into the unflinching eyes of the younger man.

"Has this young girl no companion with her except yourself?" he asked.

"None," replied Ulmont; "to the best of my knowledge she is alone in the world."

"No," he responded, haughtily, "we crossed in the same steamer from Italy."

"Is it, alas, so bad as that?" cried the Rev. Paul Illingsworth, with a deep groan. "My boy," he said, huskily, "you will yet learn a terrible lesson from your rashness; you have yet to experience that the vices of our youth make lashes which scourge us in our old age. You are the last of as noble a race as ever lived. I had hoped so much of you!"

The haughty blood of the Ulvesfords was up.

"What had he done," he asked himself, "that the world should judge him so hardly? Had he been a criminal fleeing from justice he could not have been more scathingly censured. He, the handsome, debonair young heir, who had never known a wish unfulfilled, never known a care until this beautiful young orphan was thrust upon him!

His pride had been wounded severely by the suspicions of the good people of Sussex, but that the venerable rector, who had known him from boyhood up, should harbor a suspicion in his breast against his honor was more than he could bear.

Ulmont determined to lay the case in all its bearings before the rector; surely, he of all people could advise him what course to pursue.

He was sorely perplexed; he quite shrank from the thought of taking Izetta to his haughty mother; the conviction was growing stronger upon him each moment that he dared not until he had first consulted her.

"I trust you will not wrong me in your thoughts, my dear Mr. Illingsworth," he said, proudly, "until I have had the opportunity of explaining how strangely this poor child was placed in my care."

The rector took the proffered seat he indicated.

Izetta nestled closer to Ulmont's side thoughtlessly, confidingly, as a child might have done, as he repeated to this stranger her sorrowful story.

There were tears in Mr. Illingsworth's eyes as he finished the narrative.

"I don't see how you can take her to your home knowing your mother as well as I do, without preparing the way for her," said the rector, decidedly, shaking his head. "Could you not leave her with some of your friends for a few days, at least?"

"That is a point which I have myself been trying to decide. I confess I was never so sorely puzzled. I had preferred leaving her for a short time with strangers. I had not desired my friends to know of the affair. My experience at Sussex makes me doubtful of success. No one would receive this innocent child, money was no inducement, simply because she was not my wife."

"Precisely," answered the rector; "you do not realize how a curious world receives this story, which seems more like a romance than a sad reality; truths are stranger than fiction, yet often unbelieved. Poor child," he added sadly, patting Izetta's dark curls, "the poor boy means well by you, but Heaven alone knows the bitter scorn and weary heartaches you will have to endure alone and unprotected."

"Not so," answered Ulmont quickly, "I am her protector. Have I not made the most solemn vow man can make to stand between this helpless orphan and the cold world, and I certainly mean to fulfill it."

"You could only have protected her fully from the wild storms in one way."

"And that?" asked Ulmont, a strange, indefinable feeling creeping over him.

"As your wife," answered the rector, gravely. "You have wealth, youth and beauty, Ulmont; I can foresee how this will end. The child will learn to love you, you will be her world, her all; but hark you, as you value the honor of your race, an honor never tarnished, as you deal by this hapless orphan, Heaven will deal with you. You have always been wayward from boyhood up, but I shall believe your heart is pure and spotless. Never forget the future welfare of this trusting orphan lies at your door—she is at your mercy."

The Rev. Paul Illingsworth spoke rapidly, vehemently.

Ulmont Ulvesford rose to his feet, pacing rapidly to and fro.

The eloquent appeal of the rector filled him with strange thoughts, he stopped suddenly before him, his proud head tossed back, his dark-brown, waving hair pushed back from his forehead in careless disorder.

Scarcely two minutes before he spoke the idea had not crossed his mind; and when he looked back at that moment in after years it almost seemed to him that another voice had spoken with his lips.

His honor was touched, his pride wounded.

"Mr. Illingsworth," he said, calmly, "I have resolved upon Izetta's future."

"I have determined she shall be my

The properties of this Company are situated directly west and 600 feet lower in elevation than the famous Le Roi, No. 1 and Le Roi No. 2, that are now shipping 10,000 tons a week. Our assays have averaged from $5.00 to $800 in Gold, Copper and Silver, and the shipping facilities are the best. The Life of Competition

"Competition is the life of trade," and advertising is the life of competition. No business man who hopes to keep within shouting distance of the front in the race for commercial supremacy can afford to let his competitors monopolise the attention of the public. He must tell the people what facilities he has for supplying their wants; otherwise they will assume that he has no facilities at all, and their dollars will jingle in the pockets of some wide-awake rival whose business announcements appear regularly in the public prints. Everybody reads The Times.

A PLEASANT OUTING,

And a Very Exciting Steamboat Race Between Young's Point and Lakefield.

On Saturday last, the employees of the Peterborough Planing Mill, (Mr. J. D. Baptie,) were afforded a very pleasant outing, through the kindness of Mr. J. R. Donell, superintendent, who placed his trim little steam yacht Mayflower, at their disposal. The party of about a dozen employees, took the early train to Lakefield, and were then taken on board and landed at Kilkenny, Mr. Donell's handsome summer resort, where they were sumptuously entertained. On the return trip quite as exciting event took place. Arriving at Young's Point, they overhauled a Lakefield party on board Capt. Zack White's steamer, who challenged the Mayflower to a race to Lakefield. It is needless to say the challenge was accepted. Capt. White's boat leaving first, closely followed by the Mayflower. For half a mile or more, the race was fairly even, btu the Mayflower gradually drew away from her opponent, and reached Lakefield well in advance. With Capt. Rupert Donell at the helm, there was no such thing as defeat. After a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Donell and Capt. Rupert, the party boarded Cooper's bus, and were driven to town, and thoroughly pleased with their outing.

THE LATE D. M. SPENCE.

Rev. Mr. Shorey Conducts Special Services Last Night

Last night the Lecture Room of the George Street Methodist Church was filled to overflowing by citizens who went to attend the memorial services in connection with the late Pte. D. M. Spence, whose tragic death while serving his Queen and country in South Africa, has already been recorded in these columns.

The principal speaker was the late soldier's last pastor, Rev. S. J. Shorey, who paid a glowing tribute to the memory of the dead hero. Suitable music was furnished by the choir.

"RED CHEEKS."

"Other Children Have, Why Not Yours?"

The above comments occur in a letter referring to proper selection of food, from E. J. Wilson, 342 Hemlock St., Allegheny, Pa. "When our first baby boy reached seven months, he began to lose strength and grow pale. He could not digest any of the ordinary baby foods or prepared milk.

"Acting on the advice of a sister-in-law who was bringing the roses to the cheeks of her two children, by their diet of Grape-Nuts food, my wife purchased a package and began feeding it gradually to our baby, preparing it with a little hot water until it was the consistency of a thick gruel. She not only fed it to the baby but herself began eating it three times a day.

"The transformation was wonderful. Within a month the baby was free from all stomach trouble and my wife's strength was completely renewed, that feeling of fatigue having entirely disappeared. Do not over-feed when giving Grape-Nuts food to the baby. Other children have red cheeks, why not yours?"

This food is concentrated and requires less in volume than any food known. Its delicious taste wins friends and the remarkable effects win the reason of any thoughtful person. It was originally prepared for brain workers, but the effect upon the nerve centres and brain is so valuable that it can be used with even nursing babes, to their very great advantage.

MR. STRATTON AT WOODSTOCK.

The Popular Provincial Secretary Opens the Oxford County Exhibition.

Hon. J. R. Stratton visited Woodstock on Friday last, where he opened the Oxford County Exhibition. The Woodstock Sentinel-Review says that the feature of the afternoon was the reception and address of the Hon. Mr. Stratton, who arrived upon the grounds about two o'clock, and who delivered an address which was listened to by a very large number of people.

Previous to this an address of welcome was presented to the Provincial Secretary, on behalf of the Agricultural Society and citizens generally.

During the morning Mr. Stratton was driven through the town and royally entertained.

She Wouldn't Pay.

"I shall have to ask you for a ticket for that boy, ma'am," said conductor Fred Haskell on the Lakefield train, a few days ago.

"I guess not.

"He's too old to travel free. He occupies a whole seat, and the car's crowded. There are people standing up."

"That's all right."

"I haven't any time to argue the matter, ma'am. You'll have to pay for that boy."

"I've never paid for him yet, and I'm not going to begin to do it now."

"You've got to begin doing it some time. If you haven't had to put up any fare for him you're mighty lucky, or else you don't do much travelling."

"That's all right."

"You'll pay for that boy, ma'am, or I'll stop the car and put him off."

"That's all right. You put him off if you think that's the way to get anything out of me."

"You ought to know what the rules of the Grand Trunk are, ma'am. How old is that boy?"

"I don't know. I never saw him before. If you want a ticket for him you'd better ask that old gentleman down there. He got on with him."

St. Andrew's Night

HALF-HEARTED ATTEMPTS

TO GET WELL ARE NEVER SUCCESSFUL.

Honest Use of

Paine's Celery Compound

Will Permanently Banish Your Troubles.

THE GREAT COMPOUND GUARANTEES A NEW LEASE OF LIFE.

It is pitiable to see the half-hearted and almost useless attempts made by many people to get rid of poor health. More determined efforts and greater energy would be put forth to achieve victory in any other undertaking.

Too many are believers in "fatalism"; others make use of almost anything that is recommended by neighbors, while many are quite satisfied if temporary relief is afforded.

If Paine's Celery Compound be used to cleanse the blood, to regulate and tone the nerves, to banish rheumatism, neuralgia, headaches, kidney disease and dyspepsia, then be assured the good work is fully and permanently accomplished.

It is positively criminal and foolish for young or old to mope around in a half-sick condition and shut their eyes to the grand blessings offered by Paine's Celery Compound. The world knows of no other medicine as good for fortifying and building up the system to battle against the trying and varying weather of autumn.

Go to your druggist at once and procure a bottle of Paine's Celery Compound and see how soon the "blues" will vanish; your nervous depression, headache, backache, rheumatism and neuralgia will go, and permanent health, activity and happiness will be yours.

The Ledger Monthly for October.

The October number of the Ledger Monthly has on its cover a picture for the month of apples, this peculiarly American fruit furnishing the subject. The artist has portrayed a rustic boy with a straw-hat full of ripe apples, holding one up for a little girl to take a bite. The frontispiece is a beautiful fall harvest scene, entitled "The Spirit of the Woods." "Hallowe'en Merry-making" is a seasonable article, charmingly illustrated, on the editorial page. "New York to Boston by Trolley," by Dawson Stearns, is an interesting account of a trip made by the author and his wife, giving all the changes, fares, and necessary information for making the trip, with twenty-two photographic illustrations of interesting scenes met in passing through the country. "The Women in China" is a very interesting and timely illustrated article by Mrs. E. Louise Liddell. The fiction of this number is of especial interest, and is beautifully illustrated. All the usual departments as the "Cultivation of Physical Beauty," "Current Fashions," "Architectural Department," and the interesting series entitled "Thoughts Affecting the Life of a Young Girl," form part of the literary and pictorial contributions of this number of The Ledger Monthly. In the "Youth and Home" departments there are two capital features this month, a child's story entitled "The Runaway Pigs," by Geo. R. Knapp, and a story by Henry Irving Dodge, entitled "The Yankee and the Wild Man." There are many other features of interest which we have not space to mention. Price of the Ledger Monthly is 5 cents a copy, 50 cents a year. It will not surprise the public to learn that after the issue of the present number the Ledger Monthly will be 10 cents a copy and $1 a year. The Ledger Monthly will be increased in size. The succeeding issues have been so handsome that this change was generally anticipated. Robert Bonner's Sons, Publishers, Ledger Building, New York City, N. Y.

PERSONALITIES IN ENGLISH CAMPAIGN

Unexpected Heat Developed by the Efforts of Liberals

London, Sept. 29.—The election campaign is developing unexpected heat, chiefly due to the vigorous efforts of the Liberals to show a united front. Personalities are figuring more than usual in the contests. Mr. Chamberlain, by reason of the aggressive tone of all his speeches, is the object of many bitter personal remarks. Some of his enemies have declared him to be politically dishonest, and even go further than that.

Winston Churchill, in Oldham, has been so vigorously attacked that Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood, the Adjutant-General, has had to come to his assistance with a letter declaring there was nothing dishonorable connected with his resignation from the army, and vouching for the correctness of Churchill's recent dual role of officer and correspondent. Some of the Liberals of Oldham apparently make more serious insinuations against the young candidate. But, like his father, Churchill seems to revel in a fight and is said to stand a good chance of being elected.

Another war character, Captain Lambton, of the British cruiser Powerful, has been assisted in his fight against the Government by getting a letter from Lord Rosebery. He is also backed by all the aristocratic interests of the Durham family.

NO SETTLEMENT UNTIL THE STRIKERS CONFER

Colliers Will Not at Once Accept the Offer of Employers.

NO MATERIAL CHANGE IN THE SITUATION.

A Little Violence is Reported From One of the Districts but Otherwise Everything Moves Along Very Quietly.

Hazleton, Pa., Oct. 2.—The officials of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, which posted notices last night, reported the same number of men at work to-day as worked yesterday, and similar information was received from the various individual collieries where the advance had not yet been offered. The mine workers as a rule do not appear to grasp the meaning of the notice as posted by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, and declare they will not make a move towards resumption of work until ordered to do so by a mine-workers' convention.

Half a dozen houses in different parts of this city occupied by non-striking mine workers were stoned during the night by unknown persons. Nobody was hurt, several persons had narrow escapes from being hit by flying boulders and glass.

BIG PARADE AND MEETING.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 2.—The collieries in the Wyoming Valley are all idle this morning except the West End Coal Company at Mocanaqua. The only thing talked about this morning is the big parade and mass meeting to be held here this afternoon. The weather is as mild as a day in June. The operators who were seen this morning said they did not know what action the men proposed to take on the offer of an increase of wages. They said they supposed every body was busy to-day with the parade, and that no move would be made until to-morrow.

NOTICE OF INCREASE.

Hazleton, Pa., Oct. 2.—Notices of increase in wages and the reduction in the price of powder decided upon by the operators at Wilkesbarre were posted at all the collieries in the Lehigh region. President Mitchell says that there will be no resumption of work until a conference with the anthracite miners had been called and the proposition considered.

TROOPS TO BE SENT HOME.

Shenandoah, Pa., Oct. 2.—Superintendent Zehner of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company's collieries at Lansford, to-day informed the Associated Press correspondent that no trouble was anticipated in the Panther Creek Valley. "We have ten collieries there, employing 5,000 men," said Mr. Zehner, and they are all working with full forces. No attempt was made this morning to interfear with our workmen and we do not think the strike will affect our collieries."

SALISBURY STILL AHEAD.

British Government has 145 Seats Against 16 for the Opposition

London, Oct. 4.—The election in Galway City yesterday resulted in another Conservative gain. The Hon Martin Morris polled 882 votes, against 763 votes polled by Mr. F. Leamy, Nationalist.

The Unionist gains thus far, therefore, are three seats, and the Liberals have gained one seat.

Up to 6 o'clock this evening the total number of members of Parliament elected was 179, as follows.

Ministerialists	145
Liberals	16
Nationalists	18

The Nationalists elected include Mr. Wm. Redmond and Mr. James Daly.

Other membres elected include Sir Matthew White Ridley, the Secretary of State for Home Affairs; Mr. Victor William Cavendish, heir-presumptive of the Duke of Devonshire, Liberal Unionist; Mr. Charles K. D. Tanner, a whip of the Irish party, and Mr. Partrick O'Brien, also a whip of the Irish party.

The success of Mr. Morris in Galway City was a genuine surprise. The constituency has long been a Nationalist stronghold.

DISASTER TO AMERICANS

FLIPINOS CAPTURED OR KILLED 53 OF THEM.

Detachment of 29th Volunteer Infantry, Under Capt. Shields, has not been heard from since September 11th

Washington, D. C., Oct. 1.—The War Department has received the following cablegram from Gen. MacArthur—

Manila, October 2.

Adjutant General, Washington—

On September 11th Capt. Devereaux Shields, 51 men Company F, 29th Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, 1 hospital-corps man, left Santa Cruz, Marinduque, by gunboat Villalocos, for Torrijos, intending return overland Santa Cruz. Have heard nothing since from Shields. Scarcely doubt entire party captured with many killed, wounded; Shields among latter. Information sent by letter from commanding officer at Boac, dated 20th, received September 24th, consisted of rumors through natives. Yorktown and two gunboats, George S. Anderson (colonel 38th Volunteer Infantry), two companies 38th Volunteer Infantry, sent Marinduque immediately. Anderson confirms first report as to capture, but unable on September 27th to give details, present whereabouts Shields and party, names killed and wounded. This information probably available soon. Anderson has orders commence operations immediately and move relentlessly until Shields and party rescued. All troops expected soon. Logan will be sent Marinduque if necessary clear up situation.

(Signed) M'ARTHUR.

The 29th Infantry was recruited at Fort McPherson, Atlanta, Ga. Capt. Shields was lieutenant colonel of the Second Mississippi during the Spanish War. He was made captain in the 29th Infantry on July 5, 1899. He was an inhabitant of Natchez, Miss., where his wife now lives.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 28.—Col. Clarence R. Edwards, chief of the insular division in the War Department, has received a letter from an officer in the Phillipines, which shows the ingeniousness of the Filipinos and the manner in which they take advantage of everything in the way of materials for carrying on the war. The writer says—

I have sent you a couple of rounds of ammunition that I captured in a trench the other day. At first glance it looks like Mauser ammunition, but if you will notice the markings on the base you will see that one is K. C. and the other W. S. A. ammunition, both 30 caliber. One is a cartridge that some soldier dropped and the other is reloaded shell. Both are filed off so that they will go into a clip. I tried them in a captured Mauser rifle and it works finely. The ammunition that is used in the Remington is just as ingenious. They use anything from an old .45 pistol shell or a .30 caliber to a home-made shell from a tin can. Except in the Mausers, of which they have only a few, they use black powder and not very good at that.

DEVOTED TO THE BRITISH EMPIRE

Native Chiefs of India Prove Loyal to the Crown.

WERE NOT FOUND WANTING

The South African and Chinese Wars Put Them to the Test.

Nothing has brought out the devotion of the native chiefs of India to the British Empire like the Boer war and the trouble in China. While all the European continent was croaking about Great Britain's decadence, in view of the first inevitable successes of the burghers of the Orange Free State and the Transvaal, the chiefs of independent and dependent states alike in India were offering their services to the Biritish Government. It was impossible to accept these services in South Africa, as the British Government does not employ troops drawn from native races against white people. So the loyal feudatory chiefs whose swords had so long been idle had to content themselves with giving such aid as they could, and wait for the next opportunity.

THEY WAITED AND IT CAME.

That opportunity was not long in coming. The fanaticism of the Chinese, fanned by real and imaginary insults to their relation into a fierce flame, suddenly set the region around Pekin and the valley of the Pei-Ho in a blaze. Distant Manchuria heard the call and rushed to expel the Russian invader. Even the usually peaceful southern provinces burst out there and there volcanically against the "foreign devils." Once more came the offer of the services of the Indian regiments. This time there was no objection to their employment, and when Britain's hands were tied in South Africa, the Imperial Service troops, as well as the regular regiments of Sikhs, lancers and Ghoorkhas, assembled for the defence of the Empire.

A PROUD EAST INDIAN.

Foremost among those who offered their services, and who is now in Pekin, where he did good work, is Sir Pertab Singh, one of the best beloved of the Indian princes. He is of ancient lineage, and, like many of the united old friends of Great Britain, entitled to stand before the king. But according to court etiquette he is not a sovereign pince, So at the Queen's jubilee festivities he was set down in the master of ceremonies' list to follow the other Indian princes in the procession. The master of ceremonies is an estimable man and discharges the difficult duties of his office with a tact that is greatly to his credit, but it is not to be woundered at if he is unacquainted with all the minute degrees of Indian pedigree.

THE TACTFUL PRINCE.

Sir Pertab Singh demurred at the station offered him in the royal procession. "I may not be a sovereign prince," he exclaimed, "but many of those that are here preferred before me would not dare, in my own land, to sit down in my presence." This he sent in writing to the master of ceremonies, coupled with a dignified intimation that he would leave at once for India if the slight were perisisted in. To offend a man like Sir Pertab would have been disastrous. The court was in despair. At last the master applied for assistance to the tactful Prince of Wales, who immediately solved the difficulty by appointing Sir Pertab his own personal equerry, to ride in attendance on him in the jubilee procession. So with his diamonds and rubies—a king's ransom—glittering in his turban, and blazing on his scimetar and jewelled zone, Sir Pertab rode in the train of the prince among the princes of the blood, and the fiery eastern pride was satisfied.

LOYAL AND TRUE.

Sir Pertab's father was one of the few native princes who remained faithful to the British at the time of the Indian mutiny. His greatest friend was Col. Thomas Caddell of Cockenzie, who won the Victoria Cross of Indian soil. Col. Caddell's son, a year or two ago, was with his regiment in India, when he was smitten with enteric fever in a distant part of the country. Sir Pertab Singh heard of the young man's danger and immediately set out by rail to his aid. Unfortunately the lad—he was only 18 yesars old—died. The Indian prince with his own hands laid him in his coffin—an unprecedented event in the land of "caste." Then he wrote a letter, manly and soldier-like, to tell his father that a soldier's voice had comforted his son in his last hours and a soldier's hand shad laid him in his grave.

HIGHEST MARK SCHOLARS.

The following report was received from Mr. Duncan Walker—

Gentlemen,—On behalf of the Peterborough Entrance Board of Examiners for 1900, I beg to report that the girl and boy children of ratepayers who obtained the highest marks at the recent Entrance Examinations were, respectively, Edna Francis Armstrong, and Mark Watson Butcher. These will, therefore, be entitled to the scholarship awarded by you, of one year's free tuition in your Collegiate Institute.

HOME ECONOMICS.

Rev. H. Symonds and Mr. Barton waited upon the Board in the interests of a committee organized with a view to giving a series of free lectures on "Home Economics." Rev. H. Symonds explained that as the contemplated lectures are on a subject calculated to mould the character of the rising generation so as to produce a greater amount of economic value than hitherto experiences, he thought a small grant to help defray the expenses connected therewith might perhaps be reasonable asked of the Board, and would be approved of by the educationists of Peterborough.

Mr. Barton next addressed the Board, and going pretty thoroughly into the whole subject, summed up by claiming that man when educated on the lines of Domestic Economics would return greater commercial and industrial value to his country than could possibly be assured in any other way.

Inspector Walker, on being requested to express his opinion, remarked that so far as the educational value of the lectures were concerned, they would no doubt, prove beneficial. Schools of Technology, Domestic Economy and other sciences are being established elsewhere in the Dominion and were, he thought, a move in the right direction, but he did not feel justified in advising the Board in the matter of a money grant in support of the lectures.

Mr. Fessenden concurred with Mr. Walker in his opinion, but he would not like to advise the introduction of such subjects in the schools.

The Board being in sympathy with the movement, Trustee McBain moved, seconded by Trustee Hays,—That a sum of $30 be voted towards paying for a series of lectures on Domestic Economy.—Carried.

The Board then adjourned.

FRANCE OPPOSES GERMANY'S PLAN

Thinks Negotiations Should Be Carried on Simultaneously with Punishment of Officials.

A WEAKER POLICY TO BE ADOPTED IN CHINA.

If Britain Also Decides Against Germany, China Will Have Won a Victory—Li Hung Chang Dare Not Go to Pekin.

(Special to The Times.)

Pekin, Sept. 26, via Shanghai, Sept. 2. The Americans, with the assistance of missionaries are trying a system of pacification throughout numerous villages in the vicinity of Tung Chau.

Pekin, Sept. 26, via Shanghai Oct. 2. The object of yesterday's movement south of the Imperial hunting park was to punish the Chinese for firing on a German patrol. Gen. Von Hoepfner's force, which included a battery, burned several villages where arms were found. The German commander then proceeded to Nanhung Nen, and dispersed a body of Boxers outside of the town. Half were armed with rifles and the others with pikes and swords. Some of them advanced to within twenty yards of the German Rifles, performing Boxer exercises and were moved down.

London, Oct. 2, 4.50 a.m. There is no fresh news from China to-day, except a Shanghai rumor that the allies have captured Shanhaikwan and a report from Canton that mission property has been destroyed at Kung Min.

London, Oct. 2.—"The Austro-Hungarian Foreign Office," says the Vienna correspondent of the Morning Post, "has received a circular note which France has addressed to the powers, in which she agrees to the necessity of obtaining satisfaction for the anti-foreign attack, but suggests that the Ministers in Pekin should immediately begin negotiations on the other questions at issue.

"The note also proposes the permanent prohibition of the import of arms and ammunition into China, the razing of the fortifications between Pekin and the sea, and the maintenance of legation guards."

FRANCE'S SCHEME.

Vienna, Oct. 1.—The French Ambassador to-day delivered to the Foreign Office a note from his Government to the powers, outlining a proposal for the settlement of the Chinese question. The note reviews all the proposals that have been made heretofore, and attempts to harmonize them.

The note recommends that the powers shall insist upon the punishment of the instigators of the outrages and of the leaders of the Boxers. It advocates immediate negotiations with the Chinese plenipotentiaries regarding the material compensation to be demanded on account of the damage inflicted upon the missions and the commercial interests of individuals who suffered through the connivance or negligence of the Chinese Government, those negotiations to include also consideration of the indemnity due to the powers themselves. Guarantees are also to be demanded to prevent the recurrence of the outbreaks. France, in this note, makes the additional suggestions that the Chinese trade in arms and ammunition be prohibited, the forts between Pekin and Taku destroyed, and a permanent guard established in each Legation at Pekin, with the idea that the latter shall become eventually a composite international guard. The French note argues that the plan is best designed to preserve the integrity of the empire and the "open door."

It is understood that an advance assent to the foregoing proposals has been secured from all the Continental powers. It is hoped that America will assent, because the French plan meets the views expressed in her reply to the German note, but doubts are expressed in diplomatic circles as to the acquiescence of Great Britain. It is difficult to conceive the grounds for these fears, unless the French note contains something which is not included in the foregoing summary.

CHINESE OFFICIALS DEGRADED.

Washington, Oct. 2.—The Chinese Minister has delivered to the State Department official confirmation of the degradation of Prince Tuan and many other Chinese leaders. The following official statement is made as to Minister Wu's despatch—

"A cablegram received from Director-General Sheng at Shanghai states that by Imperial edict issued on September 25, Prince Cwang, Prince Yih, secondary Princes Tsai Lien and Tsai Ying are deprived of all their respective ranks and offices; that Prince Tuan is deprived of offices and is handed over to the Imperial Clan Court, which shall consult and decide upon a severe penalty, and his salary is to be stopped; that Duke Tsai Lan and the President of the Censorate Ying Nien, are handed over tot he said board, who shall consult and decide upon a severe penalty; and that Kang Yi, Assistant Grand Secretary and President of the Civil Board, and Chao Shu Chiao, President of the Board of Punishment, are handed over to the Board of Censors, who shall consult and decide upon a penalty."

WON'T GO TO PEKIN.

Tien Tsin, Sept. 28, via Taku, Sept. 29, via Shanghai, Oct. 2.—Li Hung Chang has abandoned his decision to proceed to Pekin, and will, it is announced, begin negotiations with the Russian Minister to China, M. De Giers, upon the latter's arrival at Tien Tsin.

Gen Chaffee has designated the Ninth Infantry, the Third Squadron of the Sixth Cavalry and Battery F to remain at Pekin. He estimates that it will take a month to get the American troops out of China.

EXPEDITION POSTPONED.

Taku, Sept. 29.—The expedition to Pao Ting Fu has been postponed and the start will not be made until Oct. 6. Gen. Gaselee and the German general will command the Pekin and Tien Tsin columns respectively. The Russians have occupied Tong Shan without opposition. The New South Wales contingent of the British troop swill winter in Pekin.

FRANCE'S NOTE TO THE POWERS.

Paris, Oct. 2.— An official of the French Foreign Office to-day confirmed the accuracy of details of France's note to the powers on the Chinese question, as telegraphed from Vienna. A representative of the Associated Press questioned the official as to the causes of actuating the French Minister of Foreign Affairs in issuing the note. The official said.

"M. Delcasse has been contemplating this action for a number of days. France wants peace, and desires it expenditously. There is no foundation for the statement that an effort is making to secure continental accord to the detriment of England or the United States. We are unable to understand exactly the course the United States intends to pursure. Germany's note, as understood here, presents two propositions. One, the punishment of the guilty; the other, the peace proceedings. While some people interpret it as meaning that the first is an absolute condition preliminary to the second, we see no reason why the powers should not proceed with the treaty preliminaries with those appointed emissaries of the Chinese Government at Pekin, while the armies seek out and punish Prince Tuan and his guilty associates.

"There is no incompatibility which will not permit the two actions from occurring simultaneously. Our hope for an agreement to begin negotiations, and the note expresses M. Delcasse's ideas of how best that end can be secured. We feel that there is nothing in it antagonistic to the interests of the United States and trust we shall receive her acquiescence."

SEVERED HEAD STILL AGITATES CHICAGO.

Sheriff Lawrence Has a Theory That it is That of Pearl Bryan

Chicago, Oct. 2.—Experts on bones will be called upon to determine the character of the skull found in Cedar Lake. A portion of the scalp and some teeth were dragged from the lake yesterday by a searching party, but no other portion of the body was found.

Sheriff Lawrence of Crown Point, Ind., says—

"We have had several dentists examine the plate. They all say that it is from the mouth of a medium sized woman—that it is too small to have been from the mouth of a man."

Sheriff Lawrence has evolved a theory that the head is none other than that of Pearl Bryan, who was murdered at Covington, Ky., a few years ago.

The head of Miss Bryan was taken away in a gunnysack like that which enclosed the find in Cedar Lake and she wore a plate in her mouth.

Acting on this theory, Sheriff Lawrence has written to the father of Pearl Bryan, giving a full account of the finding of the head, and a description of the plate.

FILIPINO TACTICS PERFECT.

Filipino Leaders Are Well Educated and are Fully Trusted.

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 2.—Captain Walter H. Gordon, of the Eighteenth United States Infantry, stationed in the Philippines, is the guest of Captain William A. Pratt, of this city. Captain Gordon's health has been poor, but is now picking up.

The captain says the leaders of the Filipinos are mostly well educated men, whose opinions are accepted by the people and who insist on self government for the islands. Asked whether the fighting was nearly over, Captain Gordon said—

"You cannot say that. You understand the natives are following a plan of guerrilla warfare. It is as perfect in its way of the German army. In the province where I have been located (about Iloilo) the native general follows the plan of never allowing his men to engage in a battle. He strikes at a time when you are least expecting it and for this reason you must keep constantly on the watch. The natives simply watch and shoot at a man whenever they can without being seen."

THE CIGARETTE CURSE.

The crusade against the cigaret gathers force. Superintendent Farrier of the Mimico Industrial school reports that out of twenty-five boys recently admitted to that school eighteen were confirmed cigaret smokers. This is an alarming fact, and should arouse the police force of the towns and cities to such action as will compel respect for the law governing the sale of cigarets to children. The Toronto News, in view of Supt. Farrier's report, says—

"The use of cigarets by children is increasing with alarming rapidity and is far reaching in its effects, in that it undermines the health at a period when the foundation of physical and mental vigor is laid.

"Dealers in this deadly weapon are not sufficiently interested in the future of the race to so guard their sales that no children will be their customers. There also seems to be a carelessness on the part of the authorities in enforcing the statute, which inflicts a fine of from $10 to $50 on any person who sells, gives or furnishes cigarets to a minor under eighteen years of age. A prosecution for such an offence is seldom heard of."

THE EVERLASTING LAST SURVIVOR.

The announcement is made that the last of "the six hundred" who rode behind Lord Cardigan at Balaklava, is dead. This time he is dead at Upper Sandusky, Ohio. The information is further given that 625 men made the charge and that more than 600 were slain.

If this information is based on the story of the last man at Sandusky when he was quick, his condition now that he is not is scarcely enviable. As a matter of fact, 670 men rode in the charge, and from it returned 198 who were not wounded, and less than 300 were slain. At a recent dinner of the survivors in London, at which presided Lord Tredegar, who is captain of the Seventeenth Lancers, rode on the left of the charging line, fifty-three survivors were present, and added to these were eight horses who had carried troopers in the battle on that October day of carnage. Most, if not all, of these members of the Light Brigade still live and probably the horses or some of them do also, for they were at that time led into the banquet hall and given abundance of oats, which they are said to have heartily enjoyed amid the cheers that greeted them. Lord Tredegar's own charger is still ridden by that officer at the parades of the Monmouthshire militia. As the survivors are slated for another dinner at the Hotel Victoria, in London.

OLD FORT HAYS

Famous Frontier Post and Its Exciting History.

The most famous military post in the Kansas frontier has, by the passage of the Fort Hays bill by Congress, been wiped out of existence. This fort, which was for many years the central point of the army operations against the redskins, has for years been deserted. Its 7,000 acres have been leased to cattlemen and the splendid timber that is unequaled in Western Kansas has been furnishing the settlers with fuel. Nineteen big frame cottages, the officers' homes, the barracks and training quarters, have been unoccupied, and it will be a great delight to the people of this section to see them filled with students of the State normal school and the State agricultural school, both of which are under the bill to have branches there.

This fort was the barrier against the Indian raids that marked the last attempts of the redskins to frighten the people of the State. When the Cheyennes came down from the Northwest the soldiers of Hays, with the assistance of those from Wallace and Harker, met them and drove them back, saving the lives of thousands of settlers. Gen. George Forsythe followed Roman Nose into the Upper Republican country, and there, with his band of 100 soldiers, was surrounded by fully 1,000 of the redskins. For three days they were held there, and then were rescued by succor brought by two scouts who escaped and went back to the fort. It was found that the imprisoned soldiers had been more than victors, for they had killed more than a dozen for every one of their own number that fell. Roman Nose himself was among the killed.

There was another scare in the latter '60's, when the people as far east as Topeka felt uneasy, but the Indians did not come so far as on the earlier occasion. It then became apparent that there was no further need of the maintenance of the post, and it was abandoned a few years after. All this time the buildings have stood empty, and the caretaker has had the lonesome task of looking after them.

Fort Hays has had an eventful history. It was originally called Fort Fletcher, and was located fourteen miles south of here on the Big Muddy. One day the creek was swelled by a storm and the waters drove the soldiers out of the fort. Several colored soldiers who were too slow were drowned, and Gen. Pope ordered the location changed to the present site. The buildings were then erected and improvements made.

The town of Hays City, which was then founded a short distance to the north, was a rough place, being filled with cowboys and frontiersmen who followed the building of the railroad. The City Council granted thirty-seven saloon licenses the first day that it met. There were "killers" without number, and on the slopes of a little hill were laid the victims of their prowess. It was called Boot Hill, and there lie forty-five of the distinguished gentry who died with their boots on, some being known by their real names and some not. It will never be known who really were laid to rest in the unceremonious fashion of the frontier days, for now it is too late to find out.

"Wild Bill" was Marshal of the town for a while, until one day he shot three soldiers on the street, and then it was healthier for him to go hence. He went, and was next heard of at Abilene, where he was again Marshal, with a predilection for killing.

The most famous event in the history of the fort was the raiding of the army stores in 1869. The government then had a great many stores there and the surplus that could not be cared for at the fort was piled up along the railroad track with two watchmen to guard it. One of them, John Hays, went across the street one night and entered a saloon to get a drink. As he went in he was met by two soldiers from the fort, who, without provocation, killed him. The soldiers were colored and were drunk. They went into a barber shop and broke mirrors and scared the proprietor to the roof of his shop. He went to the fort and when the men were ranged in dress parade by order of the Colonel he picked out the desperadoes. They were taken to Hays and shut up in a cellar that served as a jail. That night they were taken out by the citizens and strung up to the railroad bridge. In 1874 the Ninth Infantry (colored) tried to get even with the town, but in the battle that ensued six of their number were left dead in the street. There were many other fatalities in the conflicts between the town and fort, and the soldiers found that they had a town of fighters to deal with.

The old-timers, like the late Henry Inman and Gen. Forsythe, tried their mettle here and found honor. Now it will be devoted to peace, for the terms of the grant are that the agricultural college and State normal school shall have it for branches of those institutions. It is expected that at least 200 students will be in attendance.—Globe-Democrat.

Women Not Cowardly.

When cowardice is described as a leading feminine attribute somebody makes a huge mistake. Women do the most daring things on record—take chances which would appal a man. They may jump at the sight or mere mention of a harmless mouse, but they court death several times a year. It is one of the traits which makes feminine nature so puzzling. I have known women who were timid to a degree, under ordinary circumstances, come forth as heroines under the pressure of occasion. A woman who shudders at the sight of a small cut from which blood oozes will often exhibit a marvelous courage in a shocking accident. It is beautiful to think that dependence can be placed upon the sex in times of need.

"Oh the perfidy of mankind," sighed the little Miss Dresden. "Here Mr. Timmidy has sent me a valentine with a verse beginning, 'Oh, the earth has no treasures too costly for thee,' and when I took it to the store to see what it cost they told me it was twenty cents last season, but marked down to eleven."

It sometimes happens that a man of resources is one who has ingenious methods of contracting liabilities.

A man learns a good many things from his children until they get old enough to know as little as he does.

The Bridal Feast

Is not infrequently followed by a long, lenten period of enforced fasting and fleshly mortification. The cheek grows hollow, the eyes are dull and deep ringed, and the step is slow and languid. There is an "all dragged-out feeling," which makes life an utter burden. The great functional changes which follow marriage are not usually anticipated, or the wifely suffering might be avoided.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best friend of weak and sickly women. It cures the womanly diseases that rob the eye of brightness and the step of lightness. It tones up the system and establishes the womanly organism on a basis of sound health.

"Favorite Prescription" contains no alcohol, neither opium, cocaine, nor other narcotics. Accept no substitute. There is no other medicine "just as good" for weak and sickly women.

"I had been a great sufferer from female weakness for about two years," writes Mrs. Emma Richardson, of Goss, Wayne Co., Ky. "Could not do my work part of the time. I took four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and felt as well as I ever did."

Young married women will find a lasting friend in Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser. It contains 1008 pages and is sent free (in paper covers, on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Cloth binding, 50 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

wife; see now she clings to me," he cried. "I have sworn to protect her I can and I will as my wife."

He had quite forgotten the beautiful, golden-haired young girl who awaited his coming, the peerless, proud young beauty who was to have been his wife in one short week.

In one brief instant the recklessness of his impulsive nature asserted itself; he forgot the warning face of his mother and of his promised bride he thought only of the present difficulties and of a way out of them by which he could keep his vow to the very letter.

"Mr. Illingsworth," he continued "you must help me— you must marry us."

"You cannot be serious," replied the pastor; "besides you are too young to think of marrying yet."

"I am of age to-day," continued Ulmont; "one ought certainly to be able to think for themselves at that age, they are men, not boys. I am terribly in earnest, I assure you."

Persuasion was useless; the one great evil — self- will — which had been sown in his breast in infancy, would brook no opposition.

He quite forgot what was due to his mother, to Loraine; forgot what was due to the honor of his race. He only saw in his rashness a way which should compel the world to respect and honor the poor young orphan whom they had turned from their doors because she was not his wife.

The rector was sorely discomforted; he was too wise to openly thwart the young heir, yet he begged him "not to be too rash, to take time to consider so important a step."

An angry flush rose to Ulmont's face, but he controlled his impatience.

"I shall make the request but once Mr. Illingsworth. If you refuse me, you may perhaps rue it all your life."

The rector wondered if he did not refuse him, if he would be more apt to rue it; he was irritated at Ulmont's recklessness and utter folly, while he was forced to admire the young heir's honor and courage.

Isetta, as she listened, was conscious of but one thought— she was not to lose Mr. Ross— they were settling her future; she was not to lose the handsome, sympathetic young friend, who seemed brighter to her than the sunshine.

Isetta had been born under the warm, bright, sunny skies of Italy; she had imbibed the warm, bright passionate heart of its people; such natures as Isetta's were not slow to feel the mystic power of love. Yet she had never once dreamed of it.

How was she to understand that the bright, swift love of a lifetime, the one great crowning power of womanhood, was slowly but surely engulfing her?

The bright, dreamy years of her childhood lay far back in the past.

Isetta Bianzi stood on the borderland of womanhood as her hands clasped Ulmont's while he explained to her in the fervor of his eloquent fancy that she must be his wife.

"Is there nothing which can shake your purpose?" asked the rector in despair.

"Nothing," answered Ulmont decisively.

Again they stood upon the silent deck, quite deserted, save by these three. Again the pale moon looked down upon a tragic picture.

The fleecy clouds, like a white hand, seemed to warn them. A star or two fell from the heavens, leaving long trails of phosphorescent light against the blue sky.

The green waves dashed their white foam like a restless spirit against the swaying steamer.

Was it a dream? Isetta almost fancied the wild dashing waves were singing a requiem, murmuring, oh, so sadly in their song:

"Be warned—be warned!"

In all her after life, she could always hear in the murmuring of the waves that one, sad voice, whispering:

"Be warned—be warned!"

Now, she was only conscious of handsome Mr. Ross holding her hands tightly, while the minister of God impressively performed the marriage ceremony; she had but a confused remembrance of the words he was saying, as she made her responses.

At last it was over and the hands of the rector were laid upon her head in fervent blessing.

Surely there was never so strange a wedding as this.

A few rain drops fell from the darkening heavens— Isetta always thought they were angels' tears— and the stars died out of the sky.

If those silent waves could only have whispered to her of the woful secret, which, from this night's work, was to darken her young life, she would have cast herself then and there into their cold embrace, and been gathered to happiness and rest in their bosom.

CHAPTER IV.

Repented at Leisure.

The week that followed seemed like a strange dream to Isetta.

Those who saw the young gentleman and his beautiful, clinging girl-wife wondered at them.

There was a world of passionate love in the girl's dark eyes; every one could see she lived on his words and glances; her sweet, foreign face told its own story. A child no longer — love had made her a woman, devoted and tender, as the genial sunshine expands the bud into the rose.

Her husband made little pretense of affection, yet it was not in human nature to be wholly blind to the ardent love that glowed in that beautiful face.

Ulmont was beginning to realize that the love which the Rev. Paul Illingsworth had predicted was coming to his young wife; he had yet to learn its depths. He never dreamed the one great thought that filled Isetta's soul was:

"I love Alderic so dearly, so deeply, he must love me in return."

The week had hardly passed ere Ulmont repented most bitterly what he had done; it was a sad fact, yet too terribly true, he told himself.

The vow which had been extorted from him had cost him a terrible price.

How should he meet Loraine, who was his betrothed bride, and tell her what he had done? What excuse could he offer to atone for her outraged pride? He knew Loraine loved him deeply in her cold, proud way; he knew how she would come forth to meet him, a flush on her beautiful face, and with the love- light in her eyes; his ring— the ring with which they had plighted their troth—sparkling on her little white hand; how the light would die out of her beautiful eyes when he told her what he had done.

She could easily see he had not married for love, he told himself; he had been forced into it through duty; still, the fatal work had been done— he was securely married.

Brave as the young man was, he had not the courage to face his stern, haughty mother; he would not have flinched in the foremost of a battle, with shot and shell falling thickly about him; yet he did shrink from the fury that would gather in his mother's eyes when he spoke the words which were beginning to gall like wormwood on his lips— he was married. If it had been Loraine, proud, peerless, and self- possessed, how different it would all have been.

If he chanced to meet a maiden with golden hair, his heart almost ceased to beat, and the name Loraine would spring unconsciously to his lips.

If he saw a handsome, graceful woman, whom every one universally admired, or heard her silvery laughter, he would remain silent for long hours, thinking how blind and rash he had been; thus his impulsive recklessness struck home to his heart at last.

It was a strange bridal week.

Ulmont treated his young wife gently, considerately, but in his own heart he cried out:

"This marriage was a great mistake!"

The young heir of Ulvesford Mines told himself he was wretchedly unhappy, yet all of his future years must pay the price of one moment's impulsiveness.

There was no one to blame but himself. He fully resolved, however, that Isetta should not suffer for it.

One bright, sunlit morning, toward the close of that eventful week, Ulmont asked Isetta if she would like to take a ramble by the seashore; the sun was lighting the water, with a thousand arrowy sparkles, and the air was vigorous and exhilarating, and laden with the aroma of the distant spice- groves and myriads of blossoms over which it had lately lingered.

"I should be so pleased to go, Mr. Ross," she said.

How she longed to call him husband, but Ulmont's proud, haughty face invited little familiarity.

He had grown quite used to the title; indeed, it had never struck him as strange his beautiful young wife should call him Mr. Ross.

Woman- like, Isetta had donned her prettiest robes, of which he had purchased her quite a supply, to please him. Ulmont had been simply surprised at the great difference dress could make in her.

In her plain dark dress and crimson cloak he had thought of her as a child, yet he was forced to admit she was a beautiful young girl in the soft, dark plush traveling- dress she wore, which fitted her so perfectly; yet, after the first surprise, he quite forgot to notice her appearance at all.

For quite an hour they promenaded the beach in utter silence; those who passed them wondered why the young man's face was turned so persistently away from the beautiful, foreign face that was raised so wistfully toward his own; they wondered why he looked far out over the sea and sighed.

Isetta never attempted to converse with him, being only too content to answer his questions if he chanced to address her.

She often saw him take from his pocket a packet of letters, tied by a dainty, pale-blue ribbon; some of them were old and worn, as if by many perusals, and once she was quite sure she saw him gazing long and earnestly at a lock of golden hair, which he replaced with the letters in his breast- pocket.

Then, for the first time during the short week of her marriage, she addressed him involuntarily:

"Do you like golden hair very much, Alderic?" she asked, wistfully.

For a brief instant Ulmont quite forgot it was his dark- haired wife who asked the question, as he answered, enthusiastically:

"It is the most glorious of all the crowns of womanhood."

Ulmont never dreamed that Isetta was wondering why God made her own curls so dark, with a deep pain in her heart, while her handsome young husband admired fair, shining hair.

"I will show you, Isetta," he said, "how gloriously shimmering golden hair can crown a beautiful face."

As he spoke he drew from his pocket a pearl case, half hidden in its bed of purple. Isetta silently took the picture from his hand.

"I warn you not to be enraptured," he laughed. "I am the artist, so you see it is by no means what it should have been; the subject, though, is worthy of the grandest masters."

Isetta gazed long and earnestly at the picture, drinking in every detail of that exquisitely perfect face.

A strange, numb feeling stole over her.

She was to remember it all with vivid distinctness in after years.

The picture was certainly a strange one—half reality, half ideal.

A graceful, tall, white lily was represented on the polished ivory, quite in the centre of a vase of rare exotics, while upon its snowy petal was the rarest face Isetta had ever gazed upon.

A face pure and spiritual, yet blended with the coldest pride, from the perfect, arched brows to the delicate curves of the smiling, sensitive mouth, so like a cleft, deep crimson rose-leaf.

The eyes were a large, deep, expressive blue, the face was perfect in contour and dainty coloring, crowned in a halo of golden hair, long and curling, which mingled with the lily's golden calyx.

Beneath was written in fanciful design, "My love."

Isetta scarcely knew how long she gazed at it. Ulmont interrupted her.

"You are pleased with my fancy?" he said, gently.

"This is your ideal of love, Alderic," she said, softly; "it is very beautiful, yet is only a picture from your imagination, is it not, Alderic?"

The flush deepened on Ulmont's face as he answered, evasively:

"I have seen such a picture; it was one of a few choice ones in a private collection. I painted it quite from memory."

"It must have impressed you strongly, Alderic."

"So it did," he replied, carelessly enough.

How little she knew every lineament of that beautiful face, of which Lo-

—The annual meeting of the Catholic Literary Association for the nomination of directors took place last night.

—Your best friend can give you no better advice than this—"For impure blood, bad stomach and weak nerves take Hood's Sarsaparilla."

—The little pony belonging to Miss Fairweather, ran away yesterday on George street, but was captured when near the C.P.R. station. No damage was done.

—Mr. J. H. Yelland has a Gendron bicycle for which he would like an owner. Last night about 1 o'clock he saw a wheel out in front of the Y.M.C.A. building, and thinking that someone had forgotten it when going home, he took charge of it for the owner.

—Mr. C. McGill, General Manager of the Ontario Bank, was elected a director of the Port Hope Brewing and Malting Company, at the annual meeting, which took place on Friday last in Port Hope. Mr. H. M. Allen was re-elected Vice-President.

—A young lad, the son of Mr. Jas. Shea, was knocked down and stepped on by a horse yesterday afternoon while crossing the road at the corner of George and Hunter streets. He was but slightly hurt, however, and in a few minutes was running around as usual.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

—Mr. C. D. Crawford, auditor of the Rathbun Co., is in town for a day or two in connection with the company's business.

—Rev. S. J. Shorey, of Picton, formerly pastor of the George Street Methodist Church, spent yesterday inn town, renewing old acquaintances.

—The many friends in town of Commodore Calcutt are pleased to see him almost every day, out driving, and looking bright and well. He is gradually and surely recovering from his recent severe illness, and has every hope of being better than he has been for many years.

WEATHER NOTES.

A VERY SAD DEATH

Further Particulars Regarding the Fatal Accident at Stony Lake

Additonal particulars of the fatal shooting accident which occurred at Stony Lake on Monday afternoon, are at hand. The gun was in the hands of a boy named Stratford, who was carrying with both hammers cocked, instead of half-cocked, as he supposed. The gun in some way slipped from his hands, discharging both barrels, the contents entering young Campbell's head, just behind the ear, causing instant death.

The deceased is a son of Mr. Samuel Campbell, and a brother of Mr. Charles Campbell, proprietor of the Grand Union Hotel Toronto Relatives came down on the C.P.R. midnight express Monday, and drove out to Lakefield. Yesterday the remains were taken to Toronto per C. P. R.

Another Account of the Accident from a Correspondent

A sad accident occurred on Monday afternoon by which master Samuel Campbell a lad of fourteen, son of the manager of the Grand Union Hotel Toronto, lost his life.

The boys of the Grove school which young Campbell was attending had a holiday, which was spent at Kills Creek Stony Lake, the steamer Majestic taking them up. One of the older boys, master Stratford, had taken his gun with him, and with a companion had spent most of the afternoon after partridge, they returned just as the boat was leaving and all the rest of the boys were in. As young Stratford got on board by the bow gang way both barrels of his gun (which must have been at full cock) were discharged the contents entered the back of poor young Campbells head (about a yard distant) almost cutting it in two, he at once sank to the floor, death of course being instantaneous. On arrival opposite the school the boat was landed and the lifeless body carried to his room by the crew of the Majestic.

Coroner Dr. Bell was notified, but decided no inquest was required, it being purely an accident. The body was taken to Peterborough by undertaker Nickle and forewarded to his home by yesterday morning's C.P.R. train. It is needless to say, the sad fate of the boy has cast a gloom over the whole school, where he was a great favorite, and the sympathies of our citizens are extended to the parents and to his teachers who are deeply grieved over his untimely end.

WENT TO TEA

And it Wound Her Bobbin.

Tea drinking frequently affects people as badly as coffee. A lady in Salisbury, Md., Mrs. Belle H. Jones, says that she was compelled to abandon the use of coffee a good many years ago, because it threatened to ruin her health and that she went over to tea drinking, but that finally, about three years ago she had dyspepsia so badly that she had lost twenty-five pounds and no food seemed to agree with her.

She further says.—"At this time I was induced to take up the famous food drink, Postum Food Coffee, and was so much pleased with the results that I have never been without it since. I commenced to improve at once, regained my twenty-five pounds of flesh and went some beyond my usual weight.

"I know Postum to be good, pure, and healthy, and there never was an article, and never will be, I believe, that goes so surely take the place of coffee, as Postum Food Coffee. The beauty of it all is that it is satisfying and wonderfully nourishing. I feel as if I could not sing its praises too loud."

The Town's Coal Supply

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I see the contractor whose figures were accepted for supplying town coal, has written the Council that in consequence of the advance in the price of coal, caused by the miners' strikers, he will be unable to complete his contract. I would like to know, Mr., Editor, how it would have been had coal dropped in price a few dollars per ton. Would the party referred to have been willing to reduce the price to the corporation. Not much. Then, it's a poor rule that won't work both ways.

FAIR PLAY.

Treat all Alike.

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—I see an effort is being made to have a national testimonial presented to Rev. Father O'Leary, Roman Catholic chaplain of the first contingent to South Africa. The Council, it would appear, propose to open a subscription in Peterborough, in compliance with a request made at their last meeting.

Now, sir, I have no objection to assisting in so worthy an object. Father O' Leary deserves much at the hands of the people of Canada. But why is he singled out for this honor. There are Protestant clergyman connected with the Canadian forces in Africa who did noble and heroic work as well. Why are they not also entitled to recognition? Is it because they are Protestants that no notice is taken of their service to their country?

I say, then, let the Council show that so far as Peterborough is concerned, at least, we will treat our soldiers all alike. I would be the last one to detract from or belittle the heroic conduct of a brave and faithful Catholic priest, but when we know that at least one Protestant Canadian clergyman was just as brave, just as faithful, and just as much of a hero, we must be careful to be just, as well as generous.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am.

VERITAS.

A Pernicious Evil

Editor Morning Times

Sir.—Several times I have drawn the attention of parents to the injurious results attending the cigarette practice and more especially when the smoker is a mere boy. The law says that no dealer shall sell tobacco to a youth under a certain age, but that section is violated daily. The superintendent of the Industrial School at Mimico says that eighteen out of every twenty-five boys committed to his care is an inveterate smoker of the coffin nails. This shows that the practice is indulged in extensively and that parents have not only neglected the bringing up of their children, but have allowed them to acquire a habit dangerous — extremely dangerous — to their mental faculties. Teachers and parents should unite in this matter and insist on the law being observed, I was talking only the other day to a man who had taken the opium cure drug he said that the appetite for the drug was created by frequent indulgence in cigarettes. But as the whiskey habit is, there is no hope for the whiskey fiend than for the person who smokes the arsenic paper opinion lined cigarette.

A PARENT.

GOLDSTEIN CASE COLLAPSED.

Toronto, Oct. 2.—Fanny Helpert and Meyer Shapero are free again, the charge against them that they poisoned Morris Goldstein having utterly collapsed this morning in the Police Court. The Crown had absolutely no evidence against them. Only three witnesses were called and for a very few moments each.

Dr. Elliott was the first of these, but only a few questions were put to him. He and Dr. Parry had performed the postmortem examination and the result of this was that Goldstein was adjudged to have died by carbolic acid poisoning, administered in one dose, probably by himself.

Dr. Parry corroborated this, though he admitted that at first he had thought that the acid had been administered in more than one dose, because of a slight inflamation visible in the bowels and which did not seem, to be attributable easily to other causes. He had since learned that Goldstein had been complaining of pains in his addomen while he was in jail, sometime before his death. Dr. Parry now thought that one dose only had been taken.

Dr. Johnson of Bloor street, was also heard, but his evidence was unimportant. The Crown Attorney related the details concerning Goldstein's life, since he met Fanny Helpert and then addmitted that he had no testimony on which any jury could convict.

The magistrate remarked that all the circumstances of the case, not only did not point to murder, but favored the theory that Goldstein had suicided. He was in financial difficulties, he had quarelling with Helpert and Shapero, he had been in jail for contempt of court, and another charge was pending. He was dissatisfied with Toronto, and had intended to go to South Africa, but could not do so because of a lack of funds.

There was certainly no evidence of murder or conspiracy, and it was useless going further with the matter. The prisoners would be discharged. They immediately left the dock and the court-room, followed by a large crowd of Jews, who enthusiastically congratulated them on their release.

"He That Stays Does the Business."

All the world admires "staying power." On this quality success depends. The blood is the best friend the heart has, and "faint heart" never won anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best friend the blood ever had; it cleanses the blood of everything.

If you would be strong in the race of life and "do the business," you must "stay." Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the struggle easy. It gives clear, strong blood; hence perfect health ensues. It never disappoints.

Stomach Trouble—"I had pains in my sides and kidneys. Stomach and liver troubles caused my distress. I had doctored without avail and used many medicines unsuccessfully. My sister advised Hood's Sarsaparilla and in a short time it cured me. I am now stronger and sleep better. I shall never be without Hood's Sarsaparilla in the house." MRS. FRANCKE, 209 Ossington Avenue, Toronto, Ont.

No Strength—"My whole system was run down. I was weak and could hardly get around to do my work. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and after using five bottles I found that my strength had returned and appetite much improved." MRS. KELLEY, 318 Dufferin St., Toronto, Ont.

ATTACK of ROYAL CANADIANS at Paardeberg

The present is a time when war pictures are in greater demand than ever. The conduct of the British soldiers on the battlefield has won the plaudits of admiring nations. We have at great expense published four large, beautiful pictures size 20x24, on heavy, superfine calendered paper. A picture that will commend itself and send a thrill to the heart of every true Canadian is the one called Attack of Royal Canadians at Paardeberg, there are literally hundreds of figures on this picture, the mountains or kopjes stretching out into the distance are swarming with men, while here and there a prostrate figure speaks only too well of the Boer rifleman. It was on this battlefield the gallant Major Arnold met death unflinchingly. Indeed, it is only too true that many of those gallant hearts that beat so high when the cheering thousands bade them Godspeed as they sailed from Canada's shores now lie still forever in lonely graves on the other side of the world under African skies. To every Canadian heart, to every Canadian home, the deeds of their brave soldier boys speak with an irresistible thrill of patriotism and pride. Gordon Highlanders at the Battle of Belmont, Charging the Boer Guns at Elandslaagte and the Charge of Gen. French's Cavalry on the Retreating Gen Cronje's Army. These are all stirring pictures and cannot fail to commend themselves to anyone who will examine them. They are RED HOT SELLERS! Agents coin money. Big profits. Enormous success. One agent sold 68 in one day. Sample and terms 25 cts (none free); four for 80 cts; $1.75 per dozen; 25 for $3.25; 50 for $6.00; 100 for $11.00. Write to-day for a dozen and make money. No other business school in Canada, nor perhaps on the continent, is in a better position to do as much for its pupils as we are doing.

These successes are simply the RESULTS of the thorough course of training which this school has been giving its pupils during the past 24 years, and which has gained us the confidence of the business public and enables us to place many of our pupils with the best business houses. What we get we hold. What we have not got, we're after.

We pay the railway fare of students from a distance, provided it does not exceed $8. Board for ladies at $3 per week, $2.50 for gentlemen.

Write for one of our catalogues. It also is a specimen of RESULTS and is believed to be the handsomest issued by any business school in America.

BOERS CAPTURE A BRITISH CONVOY

Five of the Guards Killed, Nineteen Injured and Forty Missing.

REFUGEES CAN RETURN ON OCTOBER 10TH.

Probability That a State of Peace Will Be Declared on That Day, After Which the Armed Boers Will Be Treated as Bandits.

London, Oct. 3.—The following despatch has been received from Lord Roberts.

"Pretoria, Tuesday, Oct. 2.—A convoy of 22 wagons, escorted by sixty mounted men, were attacked by 140 Boers October 1, near De Jagers Drift, while on the way to Vryheid. Twelve of the men escaped. The fate of the others is not known.

"The Boers derailed a train near Pan yesterday evening, five Coldstream Guards were killed and nineteen were injured.

"Commandant Dierkson, who has been opposing Paget, has surrendered after a personal visit to Komatipoort to assure himself that Kruger had gone into Portuguese territory."

IDAHO WILL COME TO HALIFAX.

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 3.—C. W. Taylor, transport officer, to-day received following cable from transport officer, Cape Town, to transport officer, Halifax. "Idaho sailed St. Helena, St. Vincent, due Halifax 25th October, has 18 Canadian officers, 310 men."

KRUGER A VIRTUAL PRISONER.

New York, Oct. 3.—The restrictions around Kruger are increasing and he is virtually a prisoner says a despatch from Lorenzo Marques. He had been allowed to use the Portuguese Governor's carriage. While driving yesterday he met a party of burghers and made them a partriotic speech. The Governor has now refused the use of his carriage. Kruger has been warned to make no more speeches and is forbidden to wear the green sash that is the insignia of his office. Kruger expects to sail on the Dutch cruiser for Holland next week.

REFUGEES MAY RETURN.

Johannesburg, Oct. 3.—The military Governor on September 28, informed headquarters that he would be prepared for the return of three thousand to four thousand refugees weekly after October 10.

KITCHENER TO COMMAND.

London, Oct. 3.—"Sir Redvers Buller," says the Daily Mail correspondent at Pietermaritzburg, "will return to England, I hear, with Lord Roberts, and Lord Kitchener will remain in the chief command in South Africa."

DAVITT NOT DISILLUSIONED.

London, Oct. 3.—The Standard the other day gave currency to a report that before quitting South Africa Mr. Michael Davitt confessed that he was "disillusioned" concerning the Boer. Mr. Davitt now gives a denial to the story, and in a letter to The Standard says.

"A Dublin evening paper credits The Standard with publishing a letter from a Pretoria correspondent in which I am represented as having made statements before leaving the Transvaal capital reflecting upon the courage of the Boers, and that they proposed prolonging the fight for the one object of keeping up the bars of gold they are taking from the mines, and accumulating and hoarding them, in obedience to the dictation of that old man Kruger."

"Allow me to say that if any correspondent in Pretoria or elsewhere has attributed any such words or sentiments to me, he has simply put his own or someone else's expressions in my mouth. I never gave expression to any such language about the Boers or their President in Pretoria or elsewhere. I have not written a word about the splendid struggle which the Boers have made that I desire to withdraw; and the only regret I felt in leaving Pretoria is the one I still have with reference to the infamous war with your country has waged against these people, and that is, that victory has not been where justice was—on the side of the Boers."

London, Oct. 3.—Visitors to Glasgow should be careful not to allude to the first sword of honor which was presented to Major-General Hector MacDonald. Reference is made to the first sword, because there was two, and the original presentation recalls painful memories, as the following story will show. It will be remembered that when "Fighting Mac" returned home from Egypt after the battle of Omdurman, the citizens of Glasgow presented him with a sword of honor in recolnition of gallant services given for his country, and the duty of selecting the sword was entrusted to a committee of three. Among the applicants for the contract was one MacDonald, and partly with the idea of giving the work to a fellowclansman of the distinguished soldier, he obtained the order, the price agreed upon being £250. In due time the sword—a magnificent gold-hilted specimen—was duly presented, and the general took it with him to India. When in South Africa he chanced in packing up to break the hilt of the sword. Upon sending it to a jeweller in Cape Town the general was amazed to learn that the hilt was a far baser metal than gold, and that the entire sword, scabbard and all, was not worth more than £7. The sequel is still more painful. When the selection committee were informed of the jeweller's opinion they hurried across to the business premises of the other MacDonald, only to find the shutters up and the "clansman" flown. Then it leaked out that the committee had never seen the alleged contractor MacDonald at all, nor had they previously by ocular proof even established the fact of his existence. They had, instead, conducted negotiations with a well-dressed gentle youth, who said he "represented" MacDonald. The committee of three are having a new sword of honor made for their favorite soldier at their own expense, and they are trying hard to forget the first one.

ELECTIONS TO TAKE PLACE ON OCT. 30

Dissolution in a Day or so—Quebec Provincial Elections May be on at the Same Time

Tuesday, October 30th, is certain to be the day that the Laurier Government will go before the country, and the announcement will be made within a day or two.

There is no legal time between dissolution and polling day. As soon as the writs are in the hands of the returning officers an election can be announced, but three weeks is the shortest period that would be resorted to, and the Government could hold off dissolution until next Tuesday and still fix polling day for the 30th. It is certain that the people will be called upon to cast their votes on that day, though dissolution may not be announced until the last possible moment.

The date might have been given publicity on Monday, only, it is said Hon. Mr. Parent, the Prime Minister of Quebec, had in view a dissolution of the Local House, and was anxious to fix the date of polling on the same day as in the Dominion, feeling that the cause would be strengthened, releasing Sir Wilfrid's great popularity and power in the province.

PRINTERS WANT MORE MONEY.

Toronto, Oct. 3.—A meeting of the Employing Printers Association will be held this evening at the Queen's Hotel to consider the demand of the men for an increased scale of wages. The men want a wage of $15 a week of 54 hours. They are now getting $12 a week, having been granted an increase of $1 a week some months ago. It is not likely that the request will be acceded to.

NO MOVE MADE BY OPERATORS

Individual Owners Still Hold Out Against Proposals to Settle.

STRIKERS USING DYNAMITE

They Damage the House of a Collier Who Persists in Remaining at Work

(Special to The Times.)

Hazleton, Pa., Oct. 3.—As yet there has been no move on the part of the individual operators who are still holding out against the big coal mining and coal carrying companies to post notices of an advance in wages to the men in this region. President Mitchell and the officals of the United Mine Workers' organization who went to Wilkesbarre to participate in the labor demonstration returned to headquarters here this morning.

PEACE REIGNS AT SHENANDOAH.

Shenandoah, Pa., Oct. 3. — Absolute peace reigns in and about Shenandoah, Gen. Gobin said to-day that he hoped to send the Eighth Regiment home to-morrow. This will leave the Fourth Regiment, Battery O and the Governor's troop in the field, about 800 men in all. Major Farquhar, Provost Marshal, stated that the foreigners in the vicinity of Indian Ridge colliery and the eastern end of Shenandoah are displaying an ugly disposition. He says he has ordered the Provost guard to make frequent trips through that section.

ANOTHER MINE CLOSED DOWN.

Shamokin, Pa., Oct. 3.—Following the example of the owners of Mid Valley colliery, in shutting down their works until the strike is over, the Shamokin Coal Company's Natalie colliery between here and Mount Carmel was closed down this morning. 300 men and boys were given employment there during the past two weeks.

Fifty-nine cars were loaded with coal at the North Franklin colliery at Trevorton yesterday. It was the largest one day tonnage in the history of the operation.

STRIKERS USED DYNAMITE.

Hazleton, Pa., Oct. 3.—There was no material change in the strike situation hereabouts this morning. So far as could be learned, about the same number of men were idle to-day as yesterday.

An attempt was made early this morning to blow up with dynamite the house occupied by Michael Zulick, a mine worker, in the eastern part of the city, but no extensive damage was caused. Zulick has been working since the strike went into effect.

A CHANCE FOR THE EAGLE TO SCREAM

Another Boundary Dispute in the Western Mining District.

Vancouver, Oct. 3.—A dispute over the exact location of the boundary line at Mount Baker, a new mining camp on the border of British Columbia and Washington, is in progress. On Saturday the American customs authorities seized a pack train proceeding from Chilliwack on the Canadian side, to the Lone Jack mine, which the Dominion Government Surveyor Deane, who is now surveying the district, and defining the boundary line, says is in Canadian territory.

Mr. Deane's survey will be completed on Saturday, and it is stated will prove that several of the chief properties in the district are on the Canadian side of the line, which he has located two miles south of the present supposed boundary. This will place several American owned mines on Canadian soil.

WEALTHY MAN SUICIDES.

New York, Oct. 3.—What appears to be a case similar to that of Banker Robert McCurdy Lord, who rented a house in Mount Vernon in which to commit suicide, occurred to-day in a vacant house at 2,012 Fifth avenue. The owner, James O. West, worth between $300,000 and $400,000, was found dead there this morning. The only furniture in the place was what he had taken in, a comfortable, a sofa cushion and the window curtains. He took down there curtains, laid them on the floor of the second story rear, placed the comfortable and cushion on that and died, in a what manner is unknown. He lived at 147 West 27th street with his wife and five children.

A surgeon who examined the body did not determine the cause of death. There are no marks about the body and no letters or other papers to indicate the cause of his death. There are not the slightest signs of violence and no robbery was committed, as the man had diamonds and money on his person.

Mr. West had lost money in speculation, so far as is known. He was 70 years old.

NEW LINE OF FIVE ATLANTIC VESSELS

Will Carry Grain From Quebec to Great Britain.

Quebec, Oct. 3.—The announcement is now made that a fleet of five vessels, each of 15,000 tons capacity, has been engaged to operate next year in connection with the Great Nothern Railway. The ships will be the equal of and freight carriers trading to American ports.

Within two weeks the first train over the completed Great Nothern will reach this city, and within six weeks the two elevators in this port will be stroed with grain. Two vessels will be loaded this fall with grain at Quebec, and in the spring the new fleet will begin to do business regularly from Quebec.

WORN-OUT HORSES.

London, Oct 4.—The agitation for the more humane treatment of horses in war has already had some effect, and letters from the front lend weight to the plea on behalf of the dumb warriors. A sad picture is described by a correspondent at Kroonstad, He writes.

"After Lord Roberts and the troops moved on they left behind them hundreds and hundreds of horses and mules, too worn out, sick, and starved to be of any more use.

"It was realy a heart-rending sight. The poor beasts roamed about the streets and covered the veldt, look for food where food was not, and by scores and scores they laid down and died. Wrecks of magnificent chargers and artillery horses, many of them who had probable taken part in many a hard march and bitter fight.

"The townspeople took in to shelter, and food, such as they could, and there was not a shanty or pondock in the village that did not harbor one or more of these poor deserted servants.

"I dreaded to go out in the morning for the rows of sad, patient faces looking over our fences—horses and mules just dying before our eyes.

"Many and many an hour the children and I spent carrying water to these poor beasts, digging up tuffs of dry grass from the garden, and chopping straw bottle covers for them. But it was hopeless work; one by one they trailed away to die, until, out of all our proteges, there remained but a crippled trek ox, which had dropped in one of the convoy wagons and been cut loose.

"He had fallen about fifty yards from our fence, and both his hind legs were useless, but day by day he pulled himself on his stomach a bit nearer to where he knew help was to be had, until he got close enough to put his nose through the wires and call for aid.

"We kept him alive for a fortnight on straw covers, eked out occasionally by a bucket of bran from a kind-hearted Tommy. We were quite fond of him, for he got to know us well and looked so grateful.

"I can tell you there was quite a lump in my throat one morning when, after a bitter night of rain, I found our poor pensioner evidently done for—with blood streaming from his mouth, and such a look in his poor dim eyes. He tried to raise his head when I brought his food, but he could not eat, and was slowly dying all day, sympathetically watched over and stroked by the children and kind soldier friend."

BULLET TAKEN FROM BRAIN

London, Oct. 3.—The war has supplied many remarkable cases of recovery from bullet wounds which were regarded as fatal. Not the least extraordinary is that of Trooper L. A. Palmer, of the Australian Horse. Nearly six months ago he was wounded in the head with a Mauser bullet, and after a stay in various hospitals in South Africa was invalided to England. Last Tuesday week, at the University College Hospital, Mr. Horsley, a well known surgeon, having taken a Rontgen ray photograph of the bullet, which appeared to be embedded in the brain, extracted it in the presence of an admiring audience. On Friday Trooper Palmer accompanied the colonials to Windsor, and said he felt perfectly fit. Almost the only inconvenience he felt from the wound was a violent headache, which came on about ten days before the operation.

MORE MONEY FOR WAR.

London, Oct. 3.—The Saturday Review predicts that the House of Commons will be summoned to meet early in October for the obvious purpose of voting more money for the war. Had Sir Michael Hicks Beach taken the advice which was offered to him from competent quarters in the city, and, instead of inviting the public first to subscribe the khaki loan and then to take up Exchequer bonds, asked early in the year for powers to issue consols as and when required, the disagreeable necessity of calling Parliament together in the autumn would have been avoided. But the Chancellor of the Exchequer is self-willed, and his obstinacy will probably do the Government much harm. Whether Parliament will be prorogued until January and then dissolved at its rising next month, will depend upon the state of affairs in South Africa.

TERRIBLE ATROCITIES BY CHINESE

Escaped Native Christian Tells of Awful Cruelty and Treachery.

TWO LADY MISSIONARIES BEATEN TO DEATH.

Whole Party Betrayed to Boxers by Chinese Official and Butchered—Horrors of Cawnpore and the Blackhole of Calcutta Outdone in China.

(Special to The Times.)

St. Petersburg, Oct. 3.

The Russian General Staff has received a despatch dealing with the operations north of Ald Niua Chwang, which says that General Fleischer's drivision of 6,000 men, with artillery, engaged the Chinese on a vast plain, covered with high grass. The Russians lost two officers killed and eighteen wounded. According to the same advices, Col. Artamanoff, while reconnoitering with two squadrons of cavalry came into touch with fourteen thousand disciplined Chinese. These General Fleischer is expected to engage.

THIRD BRIGADE STARTS FOR TAKU.

Wei Hai Wei, Province of Shantung, Monday, Oct. 1.—The British first-class cruiser Terrible and the British second-class cruiser Arethusa, with the transports, having on board the third brigade of British Indian troops, started for Taku to-day at short notice.

HORRIBLE CHINESE ATROCITIES.

Tien Tsin, China, Sept. 5, (via San Francisco, Oct. 3.—A circumstantial narrative of the massacres in Shan Si province has reached here through a native Christian teacher who escaped and after a remarkable journey through the country by foot and boat has just arrived. This man is a graduate from the North China College, speaking English fluently, and absolute confidence is placed in his statements by the missionary officials here. His story confirms previously reported murders, adds details of shocking cruelties and directly implicates Hu Hsien, Governor of Shan Si, who has previously been charged with instigating and abetting the killing of foreigners. It is said that a few days after the rescue of the Legationers at Pekin a prominent member of the Tsung Li Yamen appeared at the British Legation and formally accused Hu Hsien of inviting all the foreigners in Tai Yuan into his Yamen under pretense of escorting them in safety to the coast and having them all put to death. The names of the victims at Yen Chou Fu were given by the Helpers, who escaped. According to the refugees none of the missionaries at that station had been molested up to August 12.

Missionaries Expelled.

One old prefect of the district died shortly before that date and the Governor of Shan Si sent a new man, who two days after his arrival demanded of the local officials why the foreigners had not been expelled. The district magistrate who was friendly to the missionaries replied that there was no occasion for their expulsion. But under compulsion he arrested the chief dispenser of the hospital. The man was given 300 blows and the demand was made that he should secure the arms in the possession of the mission. There were accordingly given up two pistols, and two rifles. The demand was repeated that they must hasten their departure. A request was made on behalf of Mrs. Atwater, who was about to be confined, that they be allowed a few days of respite, but the prefect insisted that they were to be sent away to the coast and must be ready the next day. Four country carts were prepared for them and their goods duly packed. There were in the party Mr. and Mrs. Atwater and their two little children. Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Price, their son, all of the American board; Mr. and Mrs. Laugreu, of the Swedish mission, and Miss Eldred, an English lady, and they were to start on August 15. A guard of twenty soldiers was made ready. As soon as the arrangements were made the foreign houses were closed up. The missionaries property was confiscated, but they were allowed to sell a small possession in a country village and thereby obtain a small sum of silver. The escaped teacher, who rode a horse given him by Mr. Atwater, overheard remarks by the soldiers and gathered that mischief was meant. On the advice of one of the soldiers he escaped from the party some few miles from the village of Kai Shi.

Attacked and Killed.

When not far away on his line of escape he heard the firing of a gun. He afterwards learned that this was the signal for the attack on the party. They were escorted by the soldiers a few miles further, where they were met by another detachment and all were attacked and killed with swords.

Beaten to Death.

Going back to early in June this teacher gives a graphic account of all the murders in the Shen Si Province. Much of it is too horrible for publication. Men, women and children were butchered, their bodies mutilated and in many instances their heads placed on the gates of the villages. So far as is known, the first murders occurred on June 22, when two women, members of the Chinese Inland Mission, were killed at Hiaso Ti Hai Fu. They were Miss Whitechurch and Miss Sewell, who lived alone at the mission, a remote place. On the day mentioned about 300 Boxers forced an entrance into the mission compound and some of the village men smashed the gate. The local magistrate was sent for, but it is said he reproved the messenger for disturbing him. The mob took this as an indication that they were not to be interfered with and forced an entrance into the house. The two women made appeals for mercy, but were beaten to death with clubs, and heavy glass bottles. Their clothing was stripped off and their valuables stolen. When the local magistrate was informed of the murders he sent two boxes in which the bodies were placed and buried in the Baptistry.

Thirty-Three Slain.

The next outrage took place at Show Yang, about 75 miles from Tai Yuan Fu, which was a mission station of the independent workers on June 29. The story of this massacre, if true, leaves little doubt of the guilt of the local Chinese authority and also of the Governor of the province. In all 33 persons were slain. It appears that Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Piggott, their son; Mr. Robertson, a tutor; Miss Duval, a teacher, and two daughters of Rev. M. Atwater, of Yen Chou Fu, were driven from their homes and for several days hid in the mountains. Finally they determined to return to the mission. They were arrested and sent to Tai Yuen. They were chained and handcuffed and iron collars were placed around their necks, and during the terrible march they suffered excruciatingly. They were not permitted to purchase food, and during the entire march were practically without anything to eat. On arriving at Tai Yuan they were placed in separate rooms, and suffered many indignities. In the meantime most of the foreign houses in Tai Yuen were burned, foreigners taking refuge in the home of a Mr. Farthing, of the English Baptist Mission. One woman, Miss Coombs, the principal of a girls' school, however, failed to escape and fell a victim to the mob. Hampered by the efforts to protect her scholars, she was separated from the others and caught by the rioters, who were looting the burning buildings. In spite of her pleading she was seized and thrown into the flames.

Frightful Treachery.

The missionaries remained until July 7 in the house of Mr. Farthing, when a complete list of all foreigners was demanded by the Governor. He then ordered them all to come to his Yamen, assuring them that they would be protected and safely escorted to the coast. The order was complied with and the entire party of foreigners was admitted between files of soldiers through the outer gate to the court. Once safely in the walls of the Yamen, the ranks of the soldiers were opened and about forty Boxers admitted. They fell upon the unarmed missionaries with swords and a horrible butchery ensued. The bodies of the unfortunate men and women were hacked to pieces, and their heads placed in baskets which were suspended over the four gates of the city.

Forty native Christians were also slain, and the following day the Catholic priests, said to have been Frenchmen, were beheaded. In addition to the Pigott party from Shou Yang the following perished at Tai Yuen—

Governor Asked a Reward.

Mr. Stokes and wife, Mr. Simpson and wife, Mr. Beynan, wife and three children, Mr. Farthing, wife and three children, Dr. Leavitt, wife and one child, Dr. Miller Wilson and wife, Mr. Whitehouse and wife. The list is very incomplete, but it is certain that all [illegible] white persons were slain. According to reports current here and at Pekin the Governor at Shen Si sent a despatch to the Pekin Government reporting the massacre and demanding a reward.

Thirty-five miles from Tai Yuen is the British Baptist mission of Hsin Chou on the great road. There were at Hsin Chou six persons whose fate is unknown. They were Mr. and Mrs. Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. McCurran and an unmarried man and a woman. At the outbreak of the trouble it is reported the entire party fled to the mountains, escaping safely from the village. Since then no word has been heard of them, and their fate is conjectural.

GERMANY'S WAR WITH CHINA.

It is now known that Count Von Waldersee was not sent from Germany for nothing, and that his mission means real war in China. Great as is Germany's present grievance, it is still a fact that her own aggressions and particularly the seizure of the Bay of Kiau-Chau in November, 1897, have been pointing to war and that the Kaiser has attained his aim in fomenting it and making preparations on a large scale to conduct it successfully. The murder of his Minister was only an incident in the movement of events, and the reprisal which is demanded, the head of the chief participants in the murder, is one that China is probably unable, as she is unwilling to yield.

But back of this is the Kiau-Chau affair of three years ago, which was so high-handed an outrage that even England gasped with astonishment, and only recovered herself in time to reach out in the same way and seize Wei-Hai-Wei. Subsequently both countries secured a lease for ninety-nine years of the territory they had occupied, Germany taking over with the bay, which is 212 square miles in extent, 143 square miles of adjacent lands and defining a sphere of influence of 2,745 square miles additional within which China cannot take any measures without Germany's assent.

It is not, however, upon the territory that Germany will establish her base of operations, but at Tien-Tsin, and at Pekin, from whence her military movements may be conducted with great advantage. Into the maelstrom of war which is thus created France, Italy and Austria are almost certain to be carried. The position of Russia and Japan is scarcely defined. England and the United States profess the intention of standing out, but it can be seen how easily all of them, except this country, where the people are almost unanimously opposed to war with China, can be swept up by the current and become allies for spoil just as they became such for the rescue of the Ministers in Pekin.

We are only lookers-on at this feast of the wolves, and it would be better for Mr. Conger to retire from Pekin in order that the protective body of troops assigned to remain with him may also depart. We will only be safe from the danger of being involved in the trouble when we no longer have an armed man on Chinese soil, and our diplomatic interests can be served without the presence of our minister in a city where he cannot exert an effective opposition to a policy that this country can never endorse.

—Mr. C. McGill, General Manager of the Ontario Bank, was elected a director of the Port Hope Brewing and Malting Company, at the annual meeting, which took place on Friday last in Port Hope. Mr. H. M. Allan was re-elected Vice-President.

THE GOLF WIDOW.

Up to Date No Silver Tongued Orator Has Pleaded Her Cause.

For several years now the golf widow's situation has been most pathetic, but she gets very little sympathy from any one save the other golf widows, and they are too busy sympathising with themselves to feel another's woes. The attitude of the general public toward the stricken one is: "Serves her right. Any one who is fool enough to play the game deserves any hard luck she gets." Your true zealot is proverbially hard-hearted.

A married woman to-day must play golf or give up her husband. Even when she plays she probably has only the melancholy satisfaction of occasionally seeing the fluttering of his golf coat across a far bunker; but that is something. It's a devoted and self-sacrificing man who plays golf with his own wife, save at rare intervals, when no man friend is in sight or when he feels inclined to show his proud superiority by a little valuable instruction. Flattery, judiciously administered, will also bring the family together on the links occasionally. If a wife can only reduce herself to a condition of awe-struck appreciation, and knows just enough about the game to wonder and adore in technical sporting terms, she may be allowed to trail around the links with her husband, but it takes tact to achieve this proud distinction. The most she can hope for under ordinary circumstances is to lunch or dine with her golf-smitten husband, and hear him fight his battles over again; but that is better than dining and lunching alone, and she may prevent complete and final estrangement.

The wife of a cummuter has an especially hard time. He is so hurried and he really doesn't have time to go home at all save for purposes of sleep. Yet, after all, the city man does the same thing, and it is harder for his wife to follow him to the links than it is for the wife of the commuter to follow him, so perhaps honors are easy. The business man doesn't go home from the office to change his clothes. Not he. He keeps golf tog in his locker at the club. As early as he can possibly cut business he leaves the office, races for a train, goes straight to the links, plays until dark and dines at the club house, where he and the other men tell what would have happened if what did happen hadn't happened. Later he goes home so tired and sleepy that he doesn't stand upon the order of his going to bed, but goes at once, unless he stays awake long enough to tell his wife about his phenomenal drive from the sixth tee and the spectacular long put by which he halved the seventh hole. If she doesn't know the tee from lemonade so much the worse for her.

The golfer goes to the office early, so that he can get away early, and in the gray dawn he talk across the breakfast table about the virtues of his new brassey and the approach he has learned from Vardon. Then he goes off, wondering whether the weather will be too heavy for good work across the green, and calling back over his shoulder that he will not be at home for dinner unless it rains hard.

Countless golf widows are praying for rain as ardently as a Texas farmer in time of drought. A wet season is their only hope, and the wetness must be of the wettest variety. No ordinary drizzle will stop a golf game. No thunder shower will daunt a golf fiend.

"Over at home," says Willie, (every well regulated and warranted golf professional is a Willie, though there is some slight variety in our names), "no one wad think o' stopping for a Scotch mist, and any Scotch mist is a deal worse than this bit of drizzle."

And the American devotees of the ancient royal game turn up their coat collars, take a grip upon their clubs and their stoicism and paddle around the links, warmed by the thought that they are living up to Scotch tradition and that the quality of the clubhouse "Scotch" is beyond reproach.

So only a summer of continuous and pouring rain can restore the golfing husband to the arms of a non-golfing wife, and, if there is anything in prayer, it's a lucky thing for the general public that the golfers are praying for fair weather as earnestly as the golf widows are praying for foul, and that the former class outnumber the latter.

Saturday and Sunday used to be the days for domestic joys, with the tired business man. They are field days now, and the insidious thing about the game is that there's no age limit immunity from attacks of the disease. Anything from the infant to the octogenarian is fair prey for the golf germ, and only paralysis or blindness can make masculinity immune. Local attacks of morality have stopped Sunday playing in certain clubs and there has been a good deal of eloquent arguing for and against it. There's no denying that a day on the links is a tremendous physical invigorator for a man confined to an office during the week, and when one gets into the morals of the problem the issues are sadly complicated, but there's the golf widow. Some concession ought to be made to her; but, up to date, no silver-tongued orator has pleaded her cause.

On the whole, the best thing the deserted wives can do is to get into the game, whether they like it or not. They may hate violent exercise, and the sun may give them headaches and ruin their complexions, and they may find golfing so fatiguing and time-consuming that it leaves no time or energy for social duties or care of home and children; but, if they are going to leave all things and cleave to their husbands, they will have to do their cleaving on the golf links. If health or home cares absolutely prevent their playing the game, they will have to summon their feminine fortitude and resign themselves to the role of golf widow.

"Mrs. Strongmind is a warm advocate of women's rights, is she not?" "Oh, yes. If she had her way, man would not be eligible for anything more important than the vice-presidency."—Brooklyn Life.

A Good Whipping.

Two young lads, named respectively Douglas Christie and George McAndrew, were flogged yesterday by order of the Police Magistrate. The Chief of Police wielded the rawhide, and did his work thoroughly. The youthful offenders were convicted of breaking into Peters' store, corner of Aylmer and Charlotte streets, on Sunday last, and rifling the till as well as stealing some candy. The shrieks of the boys, as the flogging progressed, was heard by many in the neighborhood of the Police Station.

Just The Blues.

Many a woman dresses to go out, feels irresolute, sits down, and falls into a fit of despondent musing. Ask her what's the matter, and she'll probably answer "Just the blues." And what are the blues? Only another name, in general, for a disordered liver and a diseased stomach. Cleanse the liver, heal the stomach, purify the blood, and there'll be no more blues. It can be done by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This medicine puts the diseased organs of digestion and nutrition into a condition of sound health. It eliminates from the blood all impure and poisonous substances, and cleanses the clogged liver. It contains neither alcohol nor narcotics.

"I had liver complaint for the past fifteen years, complicated with dyspepsia and gall stones," writes Mrs. N. Bernier, of 461 Elm St., Oshkosh, Wis. "I doctored with seven of our prominent doctors, and not one or all of them have done me the good, nor begun to do what your medicines have. I have used three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, one vial of his 'Pleasant Pellets,' and one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and have gained about eighteen pounds since I first began to take these remedies."

A NOVEL.

raine Lorrimer was the original, was stamped indelibly on his heart.

The great wonder was, how was he ever to learn to forget her? Isetta's hand trembled as she handed the portrait back to her husband.

Was it fate that caused the handsome case to drop from her nervous fingers upon the sharp crags at her feet? She uttered a startled cry.

There was but little damage done; the face was uninjured, only a portion of one of the corners was broken off, which fell into her hand as she stooped to recover it.

Isetta could not just then account for the sudden impulse that led her to preserve that little jagged edge of pearl so carefully; perhaps because it had belonged to something her husband had prized; it had lain in her hands; his eyes had gazed upon it.

Ulmont was quite amused at the grieved face turned toward him.

"I hope you will forgive me, Alderic," she said; "I have spoiled your beautiful portrait, your pretty love."

How little Isetta realized the vital truth of her words. Ah! she had spoiled his love, and his life; yet he laughed gayly at her sorrow. Of course he was sorry, too, but mistakes would happen; there was no help for them.

Ulmont laughed as he noted how a few pleasant words had brought back the sunshine to her eyes.

She came up closer to him and laid her hand timidly on his arm.

"Do you think, Alderic," she asked, simply as a child might have done, "your ideal of love is prettier than if You had not seen me then."

The very candor of the question amazed him. Looking down into those starry eyes, he, so chivalrous to all women, how could he help telling her evasively that her face, above all others, was the most beautiful in the world!

As he looked down upon her he wondered if, after all, there was ever any possibility of his becoming really interested in his fair young wife.

At that moment a sudden impulse seized him to throw the portrait far out into the sea and the letters after it.

What right had he, now that he was bound to another, to dream of the fair face of Loraine Lorrimer, or to gaze ruefully upon the pictured face?

Had Ulmont, for once in his life, obeyed the sudden impulse that sprang from his heart, the greatest tragedy of his life would have been spared him.

The grand old name and honor of Ulvesford, which the young heir would have shielded with his life, would never have been dragged through the mire of dishonor, and this story would never have been written.

Then a strange event happened.

When Ulmont had parted from the rector he had asked, as a special favor, that the Rev. Illingsworth should, upon his arrival at Boston, call immediately on his mother.

Ulmont knew that the rector, above all others, was the one best fitted to break the news of her son's marriage to the stern, cold woman, who never forgot nor forgave an injury.

If she would pardon him and receive Isetta as his wife Ulmont had decided to return at once; that was the message he sent her, which the strange workings of fate destined she should never receive.

It happened in this wise:

Ulmont had desired the rector to let him know at once the result of this interview, directing his communication to a small station at the crossroad, which they should read late in the week.

If favorable, he could take Isetta direct to Boston; if not, he could take her for the present to his old nurse at Silvernook, who would receive her with open arms for his sake.

He hoped when his haughty mother saw remonstrance was useless and regrets in vain the principal difficulty would be removed.

When they reached the station at the crossroads, Ulmont received a note which quite unmanned him.

A letter, dated two days previous, hastily written, awaited him, which was as follows:

"Boston, Thursday morning — My Dear Boy:— If you would see your mother alive hasten home at once or you may be too late. I found her in so feeble a condition, fearing the slightest shock might prove fatal, I dared not broach the subject of your marriage. Leave your wife there until the crisis is past. I will be at each train to meet you. Your faithful friend,

"Paul Illingsworth."

Again Ulmont made the mistake of his life by not confiding fully and unreservedly in his young wife.

In ten minutes the train started for Silvernook; five minutes later he could catch the express direct to Boston. He had not a minute to lose.

He hurriedly explained to Isetta, as he thought, all that was necessary for her to know at present. His mother lay ill, perhaps dying; he must go to her at once, while she must go on alone to Silvernook, which was fortunately but an hour's ride.

He would give her a note to his old nurse, whom she could readily find, who would receive her kindly until he came for her, which would certainly be within the following week.

Ulmont hastily tore a leaf from his memorandum, wrote a short note which he addressed and placed in her hand, together with the little package containing the money her grandfather had left her, and two hundred dollars which he happened to have by him.

It was all so sudden.

Isetta struggled hard to bravely bear the separation from the husband whom she so madly worshipped. The next moment found her alone on the train.

Ulmont watched long and earnestly till she was quite out of sight, the sweet, tear-stained face pressed close against the window-pane.

His heart gave a great throb.

"Was it possible," he asked himself, "he was learning to love his young wife after all?"

Isetta's face haunted him during all of his journey home; he quite wished she was by his side again.

CHAPTER V.

In the midst of a green and grassy lawn, thickly studded here and there with towering elms and stately beech trees, stood a gray-stone structure, half hidden from the main road by creeping vines and intervening shrubbery; its moss-grown turrets and gabled roof towering toward the sunshine— this was Lorrimer Place, one of the finest old mansions to be found in the suburbs of Boston.

The spacious grounds which surrounded it were a model of artistic beauty, from the miniature lakes on which the graceful white-necked swans glided to and fro, to the marble statuary half hidden by the rare, dense foliage, and rose-covered arbors which extended to the thickly-wooded glen which lay beyond.

At one of the windows, from which the heavy, amber satin curtains were looped back, stood Loraine Lorrimer, the heiress.

The golden sunshine never lingered upon a fairer picture than she made in her morning dress of creamy lace, which fell in graceful folds about her perfect figure; she looked what she was—a queenly young girl, one born to command.

There were pride, poetry and passion blended in each glance of her blue, flashing eyes, her face in its haughty, charming repose, was simply a perfect one, from which her long golden hair was pushed carelessly back, a spray of white heath in its golden waves, fastened with a diamond arrow.

At last she turned from the window, with a light shade of disappointment on her face.

"I had quite expected a letter from Ulmont," she said, meditatively. "I am surprised at not having some kind of a message from him.

Her mother, who reclined on an adjacent divan, closed the book she held in her lap with a smile as she replied:

"Ulmont may count himself lucky if he reaches here by to-morrow. You must not forget, my dear Loraine, how very uncertain the arrival of these steamers are nowadays. Young people are always impatient. I never saw a young, expectant bride, without thinking of the day before my own wedding."

"Did you feel a strange, happy restlessness that you could scarcely explain, mamma?" asked Loraine, blushing rosily, seating herself on a low hassock at her feet.

"Yes, and I was much like you, never quite satisfied unless I was at the window, watching for the coming of my lover."

The rose bloom deepened on Loraine Lorrimer's flower-like face.

"You are mistaken, there, mamma," she said. "I do not expect him until the eventful to-morrow."

As she spoke, she thought of the closing sentence of the last letter she had received from him; he had written:

"I shall be at Lorrimer Place by the 15th inst., positively, to claim for my bride the sweetest, fairest girl in all the wide, wide world. My sweet Loraine, time nor tide could e'er withhold me."

The superb trousseau a princess might have been proud of, had arrived the day before; then Loraine had done a foolish thing; she had arrayed herself in the shimmering gossamer robes to note the effect; even clasped the pearls around her perfect neck and arms, and fastened the veil to her golden hair, smiling proudly the while, as she thought how pleased her handsome young lover would be with her.

As Loraine stood there an event happened, which, though trifling in itself, caused her a strange sensation.

She had gone to her jewel-case to consult her watch.

"How strange," she said to herself, as she took it in her hand. "It has stopped!"

It wanted twenty minutes to eight. Loraine gathered up her bridal robes about her, stepping out into the corridor, to where the huge old clock ticked away the hours; her heart almost ceased to beat—the pendulum stood still, watch and clock, as if by common consent, had stopped on the selfsame moment— twenty minutes to eight.

Loraine hastily re-entered her boudoir; she was not superstitious, yet she could not help but remember the story she had often heard, how that same old clock had stopped on the eve preceding some great, sorrowful family event. Still she did not like to remember old traditions on the eve before her wedding-day.

Pretty young bridesmaids had taken full possession of the hall. "Everything should be in perfect readiness on the morrow," they said.

The bride'cake had arrived, and was really a work of art in its way.

Merry peals of laughter filled the corridors and spacious rooms, as nimble fingers fashioned the great pillars of roses.

"One wedding makes many." More than one maiden secretly hoped that some faint-hearted lover would take courage, under the mystic influence of the occasion, and who knew but their own wedding-night might be the next to follow.

Full many a happy thought was twined among those roses, those sweet, fragrant roses, that could keep their own secrets.

Mrs. Lorrimer gazed upon her daughter with all a mother's fond pride.

"You are peerlessly beautiful, Loraine," she said, caressing the young girl's bright, golden hair. "You might have married a duke or prince, yet you have chosen love. You have wealth, beauty and love; truly your lines have fallen in pleasant places."

"If you please, Miss Loraine," she said, "there is a person down stairs who insists upon seeing you, although I told him you gave orders that no stranger should be admitted."

"Did he give you no card, or state his business?" asked Loraine, surprisedly.

"Card! oh, no," answered the maid, with a slight grimace. "He is down in the servants' hall and refuses to give his name."

"That's strange," murmured the heiress, reflectively, thinking perhaps it was some poor tenant, or a former recipient of her generous bounty; for Loraine was as capricious and generous as she was haughty and beautiful.

"What kind of a looking person is he, Katy?"

"A dark, swarthy man," answered the maid, promptly, "with a long, dark beard, and the sharpest, cruelest

Delays Are Dangerous.

A small pimple on your face may seem of little consequence, but it shows your blood is impure, and impure blood is what causes most of the diseases from which people suffer. Better heed the warning given by the pimple and purify your blood at once by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine cures all diseases due to bad blood, including scrofula and salt rheum.

The Conservative convention will take place in Norwood to-day. Quite a number from town will doubtless go down. It is said that Mr. E. A. Peck, of Ashburnham, will be the choice of the meeting. Mr. Peck is, without doubt, a strong man, and would make things lively for his opponent.

Wielded the Rawhide.

Chief Roxzel called up the Times yesterday to say that the paragraph which appeared in our issue of yesterday, to the effect that he had whipped a couple of boys by order of the Magistrate, was a "lie." While we think Mr. Roxzel might have used a less positive and vulgar term in expressing himself, we nevertheless hasten to make the correction. It appears he did not use the rawhide, but merely "bossed the job," while the father of one of the boys and the mother of the other, did the whipping.

A Pretty Wedding.

Yesterday afternoon a very pretty wedding was celebrated at the residence of the bride's father, when Mr. Herbert H. Lush, baker, was united in marriage to Miss Lilla S., daughter of Mr. J. The ceremony was performed by the Rev Mr. Nicholl, and appropriate music was rendered by Miss Polly Udy. The handsome gowns of the bride and bridesmaid were of white organdie muslin, with trimmings of chiffon and lace. A large number of friends and relatives were present from Peterborough, Lindsay, Bridgenorth and other places, and after the ceremony an excellent wedding supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Udy, will reside in Bridgenorth, where they are very popular. Congratulations.

A MATRIMONIAL EVENT.

Marriage of Mr. W. J. Thompson to Miss Edith M. Battisby.

A matrimonial event of much interest was celebrated yesterday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Wm. Battisby, Water street, when his fifth daughter, Miss Edith, was united in marriage to Mr. W. J. Thompson of Messrs. Davis, Thompson & Co., of town The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Torrance, in the presence of a goodly number of invited guests. The nuptial knot was tied beneath a beautiful bell of smilax and nasturtiums, the bride being given away by her father.

She was attended by her niece, Miss Eva Hutchings, of Toronto, who was attired in white organdie trimmed with lace and insertion and carried a boquet of pink roses. The groom's present to the bride was a gold watch, to the bridesmaid a beautiful pearl crescent, and to the maid of honor an opal ring. The groomsman's present to the bride was a silver tea service and to the bridesmaid a dozen gold coffee spoons.

The bride and groom were the recipients of many beautiful presents, testifying to the high regard in which they are held by their many friends. The groom was one of the leading young business men, was handsomely remembered by his friends. His associates in the office of the Davis, Thompson Company made him the present of a beautiful oak china closet whilst a few of his gentlemen friends remembered him with a handsome Morris chair, a lamp and table.

The Times joins Mr. and Mrs. Thompson's many friends in wishing them a long and happy married life.

WRAPPED IN KERNELS.

An employee in the pension office at Washington, J. R. Weathers, says, regarding food—"For thirty years I have been a brain worker. Originally I inherited a good physical organism and this reserve of life force carried me through upwards of twenty years of ambitious work as a professional teacher.

"Ten years ago I turned from that vocation to the present occupation; here again, was mental work and sedentary habits, which coupled with poorly selected food, finally set up indigestion, constipation, liver trouble, brain fag, and loss of mental power. Nervousness marked me for torture and for years the afflictions increased. I spent hundreds of dollars in vain efforts to find a cure.

"Finally I quit all drugs and took up Grape-Nuts, which I had heard of as a food for the brain and nerve centres. After giving the food a fair trial, I found it was not necessary to give up my occupation, but I have been able to keep right along and do more work, while the result has been marvellous. My anxiety is gone, work is a pleasure and I am a new man throughout. The wonderful blessings wrapped up in the toothsome little kernels of Grape-Nuts can be extracted by any one who wishes to repair the waste and wear of brain and nerves."

REPARTEE ON DRESS PARADE

An Incident of One of the English Reviews at Aldershot.

During some manoeuvres at Aldershot to gain practice in the vedette system of employing cavalry to watch and report the movements of an enemy the mounted troops employed on the occasion were extended at intervals in a long line reaching some miles.

The major at one end of the line had occasion to send a message to the captain, who was at the opposite end:

"The enemy are in force in front."

The signal was passed along the line all right till it came to a man stationed about midway, who thought fit to add a private message of his own, intended for the benefit of his neighbor:

"Have you a chaw of tobacco?"

Unluckily, his comrade thought these words were part of the signal message, and they were passed from man to man until they reached the captain.

The latter was somewhat astonished at this request, but sent back this answer:

"I don't use tobacco, but there are two cigars."

The major found the cigars welcome, and as he lighted one, sent back the answer: "Who said you did?"

M. Faure's Irreverence.

Here is a laughable and true little anecdote about President Faure's historic visit to St. Petersburg. It seems that the Cathedral of Sts. Peter and Paul at St. Petersburg has a remarkable repeating echo, which is nowhere so pronounced as in the passages leading to the subterranean crypt where the famous collection of holy relics is stored. Moreover, as might be expected, the approaches to the crypt are somewhat drafty. Just at the moment when in solemn silence the group of ecclesiastical and other dignitaries in attendance on the president and czar were ushering their illustrious visitors into the hallowed vaults, M. Faure's voice was heard in the half darkness to this effect: "Mollard!"

Immediately and as if by enchantment, innumerable other eerie voices resounded and re-echoed the word on all sides.

"Mollard! Mollard! Mo-oll-a-rd!"

M. Mollard is a diplomatist of parts, but it was distinctly uncanny to hear his homely name thundering away thus in the obscurity of the crypt. The Russian clergy present were scandalized, the laymen were astounded.

But the astonishment became more intense when the president's voice droned out once more:

"My hat!"

And once more the noisy echoes took up the words and bandied them to and fro among the gloomy arches: "My hat! My hat! My ha-at!"

M. Mollard brought the president's hat. And M. Faure immediately and unconsciously did the cause of the third republic much mischief by putting it on while he made his obeisance to the sacred relics of the imperial church of Russia.

The Deception of Sight.

"I'm through trying to prevent crime," exclaimed Brown.

"What's up now?" asked Cumpstead, wiping his fingers on the towel that swung from the counter.

"Well, it was this way," his friend went on. "You see, I went over to the Lyceum theatre the other evening—George Nicolai's a friend of mine, you know—and after the first act I strolled out into the confectionery next door for a package of cigarettes.

"There was a girl waiting on the crowd there. I bought a large package of the brand I smoke and handed the young lady in payment ten cents. She rang up five on the register. 'Ah, ha,' I said to myself, 'knocking down, I see.' Then a man came along and bought three glasses of ginger ale for himself and two friends. He gave the girl fifteen cents. She rang up another nickel. Then a fellow bought a quarter's worth of cigars and she rang up five dollars. Light began to dawn upon me. I understood. 'That girl,' I thought, 'knocks down a while, then rings up a big amount to sorter square her stealings.' I watched her a few moments longer. I saw her ring up three nickels on three purchases of a dime each, and then I made up my mind to tip her off to George. I couldn't see my friend Nicolai done like that, you know. So I went and told him. He listened till I had finished, and then what do you suppose happened?"

"I don't know," replied Cumpstead, "what did?"

"He laughed a loud, hoarse, winter weather laugh and told me the register was busted and had been for three weeks, and that nickels and five dollars were all that it would ring. And I've been buying things for Lyceum employes ever since."

No Wonder.

"I learn," she said reproachfully, "that you were devoted to no fewer than five girls before you finally proposed to me. How do I know that you didn't make desperate love to all of them?"

"I did," he replied promptly.

"You did!" she exclaimed.

"Certainly," he returned. "You don't suppose for a minute I would be foolhardy enough to try for such a prize as you are without practicing a little at first, do you?"—Chicago Post.

Need of Pure Air.

In order that sleep may perform its legitimate work of restoration it demands that its conditions and environment shall offer no obstacle to its accomplishment. Sleep demands a purer atmosphere than the waking hours of life. Awake and at work we are somewhat on the defensive, but we yield ourselves into the arms of slumber and are at the mercy of unseen foes lurking in secret hiding places about our rooms, close beside our beds and beneath our very pillows.

Ten Consecutive Years.

Mr. C. H. Knapp, advance agent of Guy Bros.' celebrated Minstrels, was in town yesterday, preparing for the appearance of the Company here on Wednesday, Oct. 10. Mr. Knapp has made ten consecutive yearly trips through Canada in connection with this popular Company. He says the Guys are popular wherever they go in Canada, and have crowded houses. The entire family of six brothers are with the Company this year.

COL. SAM'S RECEPTION.

The Gallant Colonel Arrived Home Yesterday From South Africa.

Col. Sam Hughes, M.P., arrived in Lindsay yesterday from Toronto, and was accorded a splendid reception. It was estimated that there were over 6,000 strangers in town, cheap railway fares from various points being an inducement for many to come.

The roads leading to the railway station were blocked with people, as the time for the arrival of the train approached. When the Col. alighted from the train he was greeted with deafening cheers which were kept up as the procession passed through the town. Arriving at the drill shed Col. Hughes was tendered an address on behalf of the citizens, which was read by Mayor Smythe, who also presented him with a sword. Col. Hughes responded in eloquent terms.

The streets through which the procession passed were handsomely decorated with flags and bunting, the work being done by Messrs. J. J. Turner & Son, town.

Had Vault Opened.

Mr. George Goodwin the well known conductor, who resided in Peterborough for several years while the work of the Burleigh and Buckhorn locks was in progress, left Ottawa for Montreal on Monday last, without telling anyone in his house, and the family became alarmed in the evening, and fearing he was shut in the vault, they had the door drilled and opened. Mr. Goodwin returned on the late train.

ATTACK of ROYAL CANADIANS at Paardeberg

The present is a time when war pictures are in greater demand than ever. The conduct of the British soldiers on the battlefield has won the plaudits of admiring nations. We have at great expense published four large, beautiful pictures size 20x24, on heavy, superfine calendered paper. A picture that will commend itself and send a thrill to the heart of every true Canadian is the one called Attack of Royal Canadians at Paardeberg, there are literally hundreds of figures on this picture, the mountains or kopjes stretching out into the distance are swarming with men, while here and there a prostrate figure speaks only too well of the Boer rifleman. It was on this battlefield the gallant Major Arnold met death unflinchingly. Indeed, it is only too true that many of those gallant hearts that beat so high when the cheering thousands bade them Godspeed as they sailed from Canada's shores now lie still forever in lonely graves on the other side of the world under African skies. To every Canadian heart, to every Canadian home, the deeds of their brave soldier boys speak with an irresistible thrill of patriotism and pride. Gordon Highlanders at the Battle of Belmont, Charging the Boer Guns at Elandslaagte and the Charge of Gen. French's Cavalry on the Retreating Gen. Cronje's Army. These are all stirring pictures and cannot fail to commend themselves to anyone who will examine them. They are RED HOT SELLERS! Agents coin money. Big profits. Enormous success. One agent sold 60 in one day. Sample and terms 25 cts (none free); four for 80 cts; $1.75 per dozen; 25 for $3.50; 50 for $6.00; 100 for $11.00 Write to-day for a dozen and make money. No other business school in Canada, nor perhaps on the continent, is in a better position to do as much for its pupils as we are doing.

These successes are simply the RESULTS of the thorough course of training which this school has been giving its pupils during the past 20 years, and which has gained us the confidence of the business public and enables us to place many of our pupils with the best business houses. What we get we hold. What we have not got, we're after.

We pay the railway fare of students from a distance, provided it does not exceed $8. Board for ladies at $2 per week and for gentlemen $2.50.

Write for one of our catalogues. It also is a compilation of RESULTS and is believed to be the handsomest issued by any business school in America.

UNITED STATES AND GERMANY AGREE

Will Ask Ambassadors Whether Guilty Officials Are Punished Sufficiently.

PEACE CONGRESS PRONOUNCES ON THE CRISIS.

Action of Missionaries Said to be Often Intolerant—Policy Suggested for the Settlement of Chinese Affairs.

Berlin, Oct. 4.—An official of the Foreign Office informs the correspondent of the Associated Press that Germany is issuing a second note to the powers regarding the method of securing punishment for those guilty of the outrages in China. his note is issued as a result of the edict of the Emperor of China beginning proceedings against Prince Tuan and others. The note will shortly be published.

TEXT OF THE NOTE.

Berlin, Oct. 4.—The new German official note is as follows—

"The Emperor of China has addressed to the powers an edict dated September 25, in which he orders the punishment of a number of Princes and dignitaries, mentioned by name, for having encouraged the Boxers. On the assumption that the edict is genuine, the German Government, in furtherance of the procedure proposed, in its circular note of September 17, has further proposed to the powers to come to an agreement to instruct their diplomatic representatives in China to examine and give their opinion on the following points—

"First—Whether the list contained in the edict of persons to be punished is sufficient and correct.

"Second—Whether the punishments proposed meet the case.

"Third—In what way the powers can control the carrying out of the penalities imposed.

"The information received up to the present concerning the reception of this proposal by the powers justifies the belief that a general understanding on this matter may be looked for."

AMERICA AGREES WITH GERMNAY.

Washington, Oct. 4.—The United States Government has taken another decisive step in the development of the Chinese situation in a note delivered to-day by Secretary Hay to the German Charge d'Affaires, Baron Speck Von Sternberg. In the note favorable action by this Government on Germany's latest suggestion concerning the punishment of Chinese criminals is expressed, and the announcement is made that the United States has already sent instructions to Minister Conger along the lines indicated. The instructions to Minister Conger are that he shall learn the names of the Chinese offenders who are to be punished; also whether the punishment to be administered is adequate to their offences; and finally whether the punishments are actually administered.

The American note is considered most important in the establishment of complete unity of action between the United States and Germany.

MISSIONARIES BLAMED.

New York, Oct. 4.—The International Congress of Peace now being held in Paris has adopted several resolutions concerning policy in China, says a cablegram to the Times.

The congress resolved that the action of the missionaries was often intolerant; that their religious propaganda should not be backed up by diplomatic or military force; that they should go into China at their own risks and perils; that Europe should abandon any religious protectorate in China; that forcible annexation of territory, especially that held sacred by the Chinese, should cease; that the powers should attempt to establish a stable native government capable of undertaking internal reforms, and that the open door for the honest commerce of the world on equal terms was the only policy which gave any guarantee for the country's future peace and stability.

SOUTH AFRICAN SETTLEMENT.

London, Oct. 3.—At a meeting at Mortley Mr. Alfred Baldwin, M. P. for West Worcestershire, read the following extract from a letter from Mr. Rudyard Kipling, written on Sept. 4. "It is in the talk of the South African resettlement that the more slim of the Cape Dutch will try to filch back what they may have lost during the war. The Free States and Transvaalers who have been under the harrow are far less likely to delay and cripple reform than our loyal friends in the old colony, who have had the profits of the game so far and none of the risks. They will do their utmost to convince people that the recall of Sir Alfred Milner is one of the ways to conciliate the Dutch. Milner has been through the past few years with them. He has watched their unutterable shiftiness, their astounding conceptions of loyalty, their simple notions of honor and their more simple views of progress. It is just possible that by now, they argue, he may know them, and they would vastly prefer a High Commissioner who did not know them. Quite so. Well, one can try on things with even the best of new men that one would not dream of attempting with an oold hand, and in the present state of Cape politics the temptation is obvious. Moreover, Milner is respected by those who hate him most, inasmuch as he is not playing to either gallery, and can neither be stamped into severity nor coaxed into weakness. When that first flush of talk is over he is very likely to make the resettlement of South Africa a sane and orderly success. Theoretically, of course, this matter, as one affecting the Empire, should stand outside politics, but the trouble is that Milner is an administrator, and therefore detestable to a certain type of politicians. I do hope you will be able to make the people your way realise that this silent, capable man, working out his path alone down south, in the face of all conceivable discouragements, is not a steward to be got rid of on the threats or the wirepullings of a rebel commando."

A New Swindle

A couple of fakirs were gathered in by Constable Cotton on Monday on a charge of fraudulently obtaining $5 from Wm. Reid, of Warminster, at the Fair here last week, says the Orillia News-Letter. It was the old trick padlock game, but it was new to William, and it is generally worked in this way. First fakir gets in conversation with victim and shows him trick padlock and how to unlock it by means of a secret spring. Second fakir comes along a few minutes later, supposed to be a stranger and casually enters into conversation with first fakir and the victim. In a little while first fakir pulls out the padlock and shows it as a curiosity to second fakir, his partner, who works at it for a few minutes, cannot open it, pretends to lose his temper, and offers to bet the victim $5 that he cannot open it in three minutes. First fakir knowingly winks at victim, who readily accepts bet and the money is deposited in No. 1's hands. Then victim gets the lock and vainly tries to unlock it, but too late he finds that things are not what they seem, for the fakir has changed the combination and the dupe is out his money. There are other charges against the two that are in the lock-up and they will come up before Magistrate Lafferty in the police court this afternoon at 4.30.

BRITISH FLAG TRAMPLED ON.

Surrender of Klersdorp Illustrates the Brutality of the Boers.

London, Oct 4.—Mr. H. S. Pearse, war correspondent of The Daily News, gives a humiliating story of the surrender of Klersdorp, in the course of which he says.

From Government buildings the Union Jack has been hauled down by a youth named Masurek, who but a few hours before was working as a clerk in the supply depot, and earning British pay. Mrs. Roos, whose husband was on commando, then came on the scene wearing cross belts to which two formidable revolvers were slung. With many signs of bitter animosity she took the Union Jack, struck one of our troopers across the face with it, and, tearing the flag in tatters, spat and trampled upon it. Her example was followed by several burghers, who thus took their revenge for the way in which they were bluffed out of Klerksdorp a week or two before. At two o'clock Lieutenant Sheppard returned with his patrol of two men, who were promptly disarmed, and their spurs taken off before they dismounted. Then the Kaffir police, who had fought so pluckily against odds for hours, until not a shot was left among them, came in under strong escort. They had been shamefully ill-treated by their captors, whose sjamboks, wielded without mercy, had scored deep, red gashes on the black backs, even on the faces of some. That was the last ghastly scene in the surrender of Klerksdorp, and British officers blushed as they looked on it with shame, to think that these poor natives alone had been allowed to fight and bleed in defence of a British garrison.

After remaining in Klerksdorp prison for two days the troops were sent to Witnortje. On the 29th the officers, civilians, and local recruits followed by ox convoy, and a day later they were all taken to Commandant Lubenburg's laager, where they stayed two days, being well treated and fed rather better than the Boers themselves. Then two or three men of the Cheshire Regiment, a few Imperial Yeomanry, one Engineer, and some men who had been working in the train captured near Potchefstroom were also brought in with Trooper Hilton, of the Imperial Light Horse, who, with only one Zulu servant, had stood at bay for three days against fifteen Boers near Venterskroom. On August 1 they began their trek northward with an ox convoy, under Commandant Nicholas Mayer, who showed every consideration for the prisoners entrusted to his charge, but, nevertheless, did all he could to prevent them from getting away. He always avoided main roads, doubled on his track again and again, to lessen the danger of being overtaken by British cavalry, and hid in wooded dongas and in hollows among kopjes whenever he heard that our troops were near. Once some Boers came in looking very disgusted, and, according to custom, when things have gone wrong with them, they held a "thanksgiving." After they had sung hymns the Cheshire men led off with "God Save the Queen," a chorus that was taken up very lustily by all the prisoners, who gathered that the enemy must have been hit hard by General Smith-Dorriens force. The next sight, at dark, Sergeant Johnson, of the Imperial Light House, Serving with the Provisional Police, escaped by dropping among long grass until the rear-guard got past him. Another had got away two days earlier, and he it was who, after some strange adventures, got a letter through to Krugersdorp saying that all the prisoners were well. They went on trekking slowly and wearily at the rate of eight or twelve miles in six marching hours by devious routes, but always bearing northward. They knew by that time what their ultimate destination would be, failing aid in some form.

DIED ON HER SISTER'S GRAVE.

New York Oct 4.—Lying on her face across the mound of her little sister's grave, Johanna Caspers, twenty-two years old, of 100 First Avenue, was found Monday afternoon by a gardener of the Lutheran Cemetary. She was dea. Her body was clod and stiff, and she had lain their some time. A white powder sprinkeld on the bosom of her dress and adhering to her lips at once caused the suspicion of suicide.

The gardener had often seen the girl visiting the grave where she was found but he did not know who she was. Sunday after Sunday, year in, year out, a tall blonde girl had come to the cemetary, each time bearing a wreath or bouquet for the little grave. For want of a name the cemetary employes called her "Elsie," this being the name on the tombstone over the tiny mound.

When the gardener found the body, he called an ambulance from St. John's Hospital. When the surgeon arrived he pronounced the girl dead. The body was then taken to the shop of Shelton, a Newtown undertaker, where it was identified this morning by the dead girl's brother, who had gone straight to the cemetary to seek the cause of her non-appearance at home.

Later in the day a letter was received at the dead girl's home. It was from her, was postmarked 7 o'clock, and was a pitiful appeal for forgiveness for the step she was about to take. As a reason she said she could no longer withstand the yearning after her little dead sister, and that she had to join her.

The bod was taken to the girl's home last night.

DESTROYED BY ONLY SIX SHOTS

British Astonish an Ashantee Chief With Artillery.

THREE VILLAGES BURNED.

Ashantis Attacked at the Point of the Bayonet.

Coomassie, Oct. 4.—Most interesting experiments as to the effect of a 75 millimete gun on a stockade were made recently. Up to the present, shells have done comparatively little injury to stockages, either falling short or going straight through them. Major Montenaro, Royal Artillery, has now devised a plan for firing with the range on heights double the actual distance, so as to allow for the great weight—double that of the common shell—and he suggested using two hundred yards' elevation for one hundred yards' range. Longer ranges than this has never been possible in the bush. Col. Willcocks accordingly ordered the experiments, and had a fac-simile large Ashanti stockade erected, six feet high and six feet thick, composed of piled logs of wood, the spaces filled with earth and stones, and supported back and front by huge stakes driven deep in the ground. The practice was a complete success, every shell bursting on the stockade, which was completely destroyed after the sixth shot.

A prisoner—a chief—was taken to watch the proceedings, and was greatly astonished and impressed. The day of Ashanti stockades is now practically over. With Major Montenaro's method they can easily be destroyed.

A great review of the troops in the garrison at Coomassie was held. The force, which had nine guns, consisted of the West African Regiment, the West African Frontier Force, the Central African Regiment, the Sierra Leone Frontier Police and the Lagos Haussas—in all, 1,700.

London, Oct. 4.—A despatch to the Morning Post from Coomassie reports that heavy fighting took place last Sunday between Col. Willcocks' column and the Ashantees at Abu Asu.

"After heavy firing," says the despatch, "the British column made an ineffectual attempt to charge the Ashantee position, but was obliged to retire and to resume the rifle duel while awaiting reinforcements. Eventually, after hard work, Col. Willcocks captured the position and occupied the village of Inassu without opposition.

"Subsequently the British carried three other villages at the point of the bayonet and burned them. Seventy Ashantees were killed.

"The British losses were Maj. Mellise and Capt. Luard, severely wounded, three officers slightly wounded, three men killed and 23 others wounded."

A flying column of 800 men, with two guns, was sent Monday in pursuit of the enemy.

THE WHITE DEATH.

A Frozen Fog of Which Indians are Very Much Afraid

"Of all the natural phenomena peculiar to the Rocky Mountain region none is more stranger or terrible than the mysterious storm known to the Indians as "the white death." Scientific men have never yet had an opportunity of investigating it, because it comes at the most unexpected times and may keep away from a locality for years. Well-read men who have been through it say that it is really a frozen fog. But where the can say. This phenomenon occurs most fog comes from is more than any one frequently in the northern part of Colorado in Wyoming, and occasionally in Montana.

"About two years ago a party of three women and two men were crossing North Park in a waggon in the month of February. The air was bitterly cold, but dry as a bone and motionless. The sun shone with almost startling brilliancy. As the five people drove along the crisp snow they did not experience the least cold, but really felt more confortable, and rather enjoyed the trip. Mountain peaks fifty miles away could be seen as distinctly as the pine trees by the roadside.

"Suddenly one of the women put her hand up to her face, and remarked that something had stung her. Then other members of the party did the same thing, although not a sign of an insect could be seen. All marvelled greatly at this. A moment later they noticed that the distant mountains were disappearing behind a cloud of mist. Mist in Colorado in January! Surely there must be some mistake. But there was no mistake, because within ten minutes a gentle wind began to blow and the air became filled with fine particles of something that scintillated like diamond dust in the sunshine. Still the people drove on until they came to a cabin where a man signalled to them to stop. With his head tied up in a bundle of mufflers, he rushed out and handed the driver a piece of paper on which was written. "Come into the house quick, or this storm will kill all of you. Don't talk outside here."

"Of course no time was lost in getting under cover and putting the horses in the stables. But they were a little late, for in less than an hour the whole party was sick with violent coughs and fever. Before the next morning one of the women died with all the symptoms of pneumonia. The others were violently ill of it, but managed to pull through after long sickness.

"I seen you people driving along the road long before you got to my house, and I knowed you didn't know what you were driving through,' said the man, as soon as the surviving members of the party were able to talk. 'That stuff ye seen in the air in small pieces of ice, frozen so cold it goes clear down into your lungs without melting. If any man stayed out a few hours without his head covered up he would be sure to die. One winter about eight years ago it cleaned out a whole tribe across the Wyoming line. They are more afraid of it than they are of rattlesnakes. That's the reason they call it the "white death."

DEATH OF MR. E. Y. EATON.

One of Toronto's Best Esteemed Citizens Passes Away

It is with sorrow we are obliged to chronicle the death of the Edward Young Eaton, eldest son of the Timothy Eaton, which sad event occurred at the family residence, Toronto, on Thursday last.

Mr. Eaton, who had been combatting for several years the malady, disease of the kidneys, which finally caused his death, was taken seriously ill on Sept. 24th and sank rapidly until on Tuesday he became unconscious, in which condition he remained until yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when he passed away.

Mr. Eaton, was 37 years of age, and was one of the best known young business men in Toronto. He had been identified with the T. Eaton Company ever since he left school, and filled evry position from the most humble to Vice-President of the Company, which office he held at the time of his death.

He was highly esteemed by all who had business dealings with him, and beloved by his friends everywhere. His many friends in Peterborough will deeply regret his demise.

EXTENDING THE WORKS.

The Canadian General Electric Company in Toronto

It would appear that Peterborough is not to have a monopoly of the works of the Canadian General Electric Company.

The latter has purchased Canada Foundry Company's plant and the old St. Lawrence Foundry, Toronto. It is said that the foundry will be continued as a separate foundry, at least for the present, where most of the heavy casting required by the Electric Company will be made.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

—Mr. W. W. Daly, agent of the National Insurance Co. was in Lindsay yesterday.

—Mr. William Dundas, of the firm of Dundas & Flavelle Bros., Lindsay, was in town yesterday.

—Mrs. J. Mann and Miss Mann, of Toronto, and Mrs. Beavis, of Dunsford, are the guests of Mrs. H. H. Mann, George street.

—Mr. J. Kingan, of Toronto, Kansas, who has been the guest of his friends in town for a few weeks, returned home yesterday.

GALA DAYS WHEN ROBERTS RETURNS

Britain Proposes to Receive Soldiers Royally

SHOWS IN THREE TOWNS.

Great Festivities on Arrival of Lord Roberts With Guards and Volunteers.

London, Oct. 4.

Lord Roberts has wired as follows to the War Office—"Hart returned to Krugersdorp Oct. 1. He has been 60 miles from his base, marched 310 miles, was in contact with the enemy 30 days, killed an unknown number and captured 60. The British lost three killed, three prisoners and 24 wounded. Hart brought back 2,720 head of cattle and 3,231 sheep. Buller has returned to Lydenburg from Spitskop with 1,000 sheep. There are skirmishes with the Boers daily, but they are small affairs. The Dublin Fusiliers made a night attack with the bayonet on a Boer laager between Pretoria and Johannesburg, and captured nine men, mostly important Boers who have troubled the district. A party of Boers have penetrated the southern part of Orange River Colony, entering Dewetsdorp and Wepener. Detachments are after them."

New York, Oct. 4.—Public interest in Great Britain in the Boer war is revived by the prospect of a series of gala days when the soldiers and generals return, says the Tribune's London correspondent. Three great town shows will commemorate the arrival of the Guards, the London Volunteers, and Lord Roberts, and there will be a series of minor events. The North of Ireland will also have a royal festival. The Queen was invited to visit Belfast when she was in Dublin, but was forced to decline the invitation. The Prince of Wales will visit Ulster in the winter in her place, and there will be great festivities there.

HORSES 15,000, MULES 42,000.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—A special to the Record from New Orleans says.

The British army headquarters in this city are to be closed soon. Since the English officers were sent here in August, 1899, to purchase supplies, 15,000 horses and 42,000 mules have been shipped to Cape Town, as well as large quantities of forage and other supplies, the pay therefor being about $10,000,000 in English gold.

MERCENARIES PAID OFF.

London, Oct. 4.—A despatch to The Daily Telegraph from Lorenzo Marques says 500 mercenaries who have been fighting with the Boers sailed for Europe to-day. They received their passage from money and part of their war pay from the Boer officials. They were also assured that they would get the rest of their money when they arrived at their destinations. Most of the Irish-Americans, who have been making threats against President Kruger and the Boer officials because they have not received the money promised them for their services, were appeased in this way.

SOUTH AFRICAN PROSPECTS.

Though the resistance of the Boers, as an organized force, is palpably at an end there can be no definite termination of the hostilities on a fixed date such as attends a war between nations each of which possesses a central legal authority. In the first place the Free Staters and Boers in arms have all along been—technically speaking—rebels against the authority of the Queen; foreign nations tacitly recognized this fact when they declined during the Hague conference to allow the question to come before them as a matter upon which arbitration could be urged. In the second place the formal proclamations of annexation destroyed those privileges of local self-government which under the conventions the Transvaal and Free State had been allowed to exercise. There is consequently no recognizable authority—either individual or collective—which could be negotiated with or sign any such treaty of peace as marks the close of hostilities between independent nations. The Boers are legally in the position of the confederates after the capture of Richmond. It is possible that a further period of grace may be allowed such men as De Wet and Delarey, who seem inclined to continue resistance to the new regime, but so soon as the refugees who were driven out of the Transvaal and Free State on account of their loyalty to the Queen are reinstated in their holdings we may expect a declaration of outlawry being made against all persons who attempt to molest them or the newly constituted authorities which Sir Alfred Milner and General Baden-Powell are now organizing. The return of that Outlander population which formed the majority of the white population of Johannesburg and almost all the towns in the two states, except Pretoria, and the reopening of the mining industries will do infinitely more than further military demonstrations to restore the ordinary routine of work-a-day life. Apart from the killed, there are about 18,000 Boer breadwinners in exile and the depletion of stock and stores, the minimized tillage of the ground and the paralysis of all agricultural and industrial work during the last twelve months must have reduced the great majority of Boer families to a pitiable condition of dependence. There is plenty of evidence that many of those who took up arms against the Queen did so under a total misapprehension of the facts due to that ignorance which Lord Wolseley said was greater in the Boer than in any other so-called civilized race he had ever mixed with. This ignorance was taken advantage of and such men as Steyn, Reitz and Leyds with their large entourage of self-seeking but educated Hollander immigrants are probably the more to blame than even that [illegible] would be Moses, Paul Kruger, for the disaster to life and property which a foolish ambition has caused. An enormous responsibility will rest upon the individuals selected by the Imperial authorities to administer the affairs of the Orange and Vaal River provinces of South Africa during the next four years. They should not only be perfect in the patois of the district but as conversant with the customs of the Afrikander as are the British residents in India with the peculiarites of their miscellaneous pharges. Tact and goood temper, a generous relief of bodily necessities without too urgent enquiries as to the conduct of the necessitous during the war plus an absolute administration of justice as between Outlanders and Boers will go a long way towards restoring amicable relations between the two dominant races in South Africa, a result which the very experiences of the war have shown to be essential to the welfare of both as well as to that of the British Empire at large. The fact that a reasonable measure for the settlement of the difficulties arising from the war has been passed by the Cape Colony Parliament without causing such a political crisis as might have necessitated the temporary suspension of the constitution is a satisfactory feature. Almost as heated debates as those reported during the discussion of the bill have taken place at Westminster or in the old days in the Parliament Houses of Quebec and Montreal. They are the safety valves for party passion and hereafter we may hear them in a federated South African House of Commons in which Afrikander and Briton will be content to exchange fiery invectives for th epublic good of the people as a whole—natives as well as whites.

"LOST AND FOUND"

Carelessness in New York Department Stores.

The carelessness of the shopping public is marvellous. You begin to feel after awhile that people who are so thoughtless don't deserve to have anything. We never receive handkerchiefs at the "Lost and Found" desk unless a very handsome one is brought to us and we accept it under protest. Neither do our customers often inquire for them, possibly because they think they dropped them in the street.

Umbrellas are among the articles most frequently lost. Sometimes on a rainy day the desk looks like a bargain counter of umbrellas.

Strange as it may seem, pocketbooks are third in the list of articles most often lost. There is never a day in which from one to eight pocketbooks do not either find their way to the desk or are reported as lost in the store.

A woman came the other day to say that she had given the baby her purse to play with and he had opened it and dropped out two $10 bills, for which she wished us to make search. It is seldom that a purse is picked up that does not contain one or two rings and some other small pieces of jewelry.

Many capes, jackets and furs are dropped. A customer once reported that she was afraid of pickpockets and so had taken off her handsome diamond watch and was carrying it in her hand. Unfortunately she had laid it down somewhere and couldn't find it.

Gloves and veils are frequently picked up and parcels innumerable. Garters seem to have a fashion of getting away from the wearers, and sometimes a stray bustle finds its way to the desk. Customers when they miss something usually go to the counter where they think they left it. If they don't find it there they are prone to insinuate that the girl behind the counter got it.

Now, it is an astonishing fact that customers seldom find anything. The superintendent is surprised when an article is brought to the desk by a shopper. It is the clerks and the little cash girls who turn over anything that they may find. It is my experience that our girls, who have small salaries, are constantly exposed to temptation and every day see pretty things they would like and cannot have are almost invariably honest.

Conscience plays strange pranks sometimes. Only last week we received through the mail a box of jewelry. There were trinkets of every kind in it, rings, breastpins, chains, bracelets, lockets, in all enough to stock a country store. Every piece had been removed from its card, and there was no name or message. It was recognized as belonging to our jewelry department, but how so much got away without being missed remains a mystery. Such a quantity could hardly have been taken by a regular shoplifter. One theory is that some one in the department took it and afterward acknowledged the theft at confession and the priest ordered the jewelry returned to us. We have had several cases of that kind.

On another occasion we received a box of expensive handkerchiefs. Within was a card. It read: "I am afraid the innocent will suffer, so I send these back to you, although I know you don't need them and I do."

Whenever any one asks at the desk for any article they have lost in the store we ask for a description. It would be amusing if it were not annoying to see how indignant the average woman gets at this question. She considers it an imputation that she is not honest, and she often resents it in the most energetic manner.

Altogether the life of the man in charge of the "Lost and Found" desk is by no means pleasant.

Filipino Plea for Parley

He put away his flag of truce
And sadly muttered, "What's the use?
The Spaniards, though to justice blind,
Were far more sociably inclined."

"Oh, it's nice to be a press agent," said one of that happy tribe the other day. "Here I have been putting in all my time this morning trying to convince two dramatic critics and four managing editors that our show is the best thing that ever opened in town, and I have been called the biggest liar on earth by all but one of them. Such practical unanimity makes a man think there may be something in the proposition."

"What did the sixth man tell you?"

"He wouldn't see me at all. He had seen the show."—Chicago Post.

A NOVEL.

The maid did not answer, she knew not what to say. With slow, measured chimes, that struck a strange knell in Loraine's heart, the clock on the mantel struck the hour of eight.

She arose from her seat and paced up and down the room.

Five— ten— fifteen minutes dragged themselves slowly by. Still the mirthful hum of voices floated up, as if to mock her.

"They are growing impatient," she said to herself, as she drew aside the curtain from the window, and gazed anxiously down the road.

Twenty minutes— a half hour, and yet another ten dragged by.

As the door closed softly after her, Loraine threw herself down on a seat by the window, pressed her flushed face to the cool pane, straining her eyes eagerly down the main road.

"He has not come," she cried, wringing her hands in sharp agony. She felt bewildered; there was a strange pain in her heart, growing more intense each moment.

"Could anything have happened?"

Again there was a knock at the door; this time it was a servant.

"Has Mr. Ulvesford yet arrived?" asked Loraine, eagerly scanning the girl's face.

"No, ma'am, but the minister and your ma says may they come up again and talk with you?"

"No, no, no!" groaned Loraine, pitifully, throwing herself down on the divan and burying her face in the cushions. "I don't want to see any one. I want to be left alone. Do you understand— all alone."

The girl quietly withdrew from the room. There was a strange hush in the voices down below.

"Oh, he must have come," she said. With bated breath she opened the door of her boudoir slightly, and listened.

The words of a young lady, seeming to come from close proximity, caught her attention. They seemed to have been shrieked on the air, caught up and muttered on every breeze; they were simple words, jestingly spoken, yet they "hit a mark the archer little meant." It was a young, careless voice that spoke them, but each word pierced Loraine's heart like a sharp dagger.

"I do not think the bridegroom is coming. Poor Loraine! What a terrible blow this must be to her; such a keen disgrace."

There seemed to be a general murmur of assent from all below.

Loraine quickly closed the door. She had heard enough. Her brain seemed on fire; her senses reeled. She drew the bolt of the door, flung herself down on the carpet, and there the beautiful, proud young heiress wept the bitterest tears that ever welled up from a human heart.

After a violent storm of grief, a calm usually follows, but it was not so in this case.

The sparkling diamond glowing upon her finger— his ring— maddened her with its prismatic glow; she drew it from her finger, flinging it with all the fury of her strength into the furthermost corner of the room.

She laughed a little, low, wild laugh.

"I will fling it from me as I do his love," she cried; "tear out his image from my heart forever and ever. Yes, I say, forever and ever."

Loraine felt a wondrous, strange sensation creeping over her.

Every sob ended in a mocking laugh. The strange stillness of the house puzzled her. Queer spectres danced around her, and with their long, bony fingers, pointed mockingly at the white robes and bridal veil she wore. How dared they approach the secret of her own chamber? She flung back upon them their cruel taunts and jeers; and they in turn mocked her every look and word.

"Fools!" she cried. "Do you think I care? What if the whole world were gathered downstairs, what need I care if they do know he did not come? I do not care," she sobbed, her voice growing louder and louder. "I will go down among them and be the gayest of the gay; no wit shall be more brilliant than mine.

"Yet, why are they here, all these people?" she pondered slowly. "What do they want? I am trying hard to think, yes, to think; but my poor brain is on fire. I cannot remember why they are here. Where are my flowers and fan? But an instant ago I placed them on this table. No, they were on that stand. I do not see them in the room. Ha! Katy has taken them downstairs."

She unbolted the door and rushed into the hall.

There were strange hilarious laughter and burst of song heard by those below, that froze the blood in their veins; the next Loraine Lorrimer, the beautiful, spoiled, petted child stood among them.

Her hair was disheveled, her white veil torn and disordered. There was a strange pallor on her face; even the ripeness had faded from her lips, as she fell into a deep swoon, which mercifully preserved her reason.

At that moment a horseman, covered with dust and foam, dashed rapidly up to the entrance gate, bearing a telegram in his hand addressed to Loraine.

The next morning the whole country round was rife with the terrible news, that had ended in a fearful tragedy, on what was to have been the marriage day of the young heir of the Ulvesford Mines and the peerless Loraine Lorrimer of Lorrimer Place.

He had but that day returned from abroad, so the story ran, and while en route to the home of his bride to be, where he was to have found his mother also in waiting, he was intercepted by a telegram urging him, if he would see his mother alive, to come directly home. Rev. Paul Illingsworth, with a pair of the fleetest bays from the Ulvesford stables, and a driver, had met Ulmont at the train. They were last seen driving at a furious pace along the highway.

Their path lay through a high, narrow roadway, overlooking the sea on one side, high shelving rock on the other. 'Twas there the terrible tragedy had been enacted.

Two vehicles, approaching each other from different directions, had collided, and the carriage containing the young heir had been thrown over into the sea.

In an instant the wildest confusion had prevailed.

Ulmont Ulvesford alone had been recovered. He had sustained a terrible fracture of the skull against the sharp rocks as he fell. It was hardly expected his life would last until they reached his home, some four miles distant.

While the mother called for her son, the long halls echoing with his beloved name, and fair Loraine awaited him in her bridal robes, Ulmont Ulvesford, in another part of his home, lay dying.

In the soft, solemn stillness that had fallen around those who watched by his couch, the physician bending over him had said, slowly and solemnly, as he watched critically the motionless, white face:

"His life hangs by a single thread; if he lives, his reason may be partially restored; never wholly, unless by a violent shock, which might cost him his life. If he lives at all, you must be content."

CHAPTER VII.

A Fatal Consequence.

There were few dry eyes among these wedding guests assembled as the contents of telegram were read to them, and every heart throbbed with pity for hapless Loraine save one, who stood leaning gracefully against a marble Psyche, engaged in conversation with Mrs. Lorrimer, when Loraine had so unexpectedly appeared among them.

The dark, handsome face of Heath Hampton, for it was he, grew a shade paler as he listened to the telegram.

"Saved," he muttered, under his breath; "I do not see how it could have been possible. I have failed— ignominiously failed!"

"Did you say he was dying?" he asked, taking the telegram from Mrs Lorrimer's nerveless fingers.

Yes, so it read; his life hung by a slender thread.

Silently the guests quitted the mansion. Heath Hampton was among the last to depart; his dark eyes roved eagerly over the stately mansion, and the magnificent grounds which surrounded it, as they lay dark and silent, bathed in the shadowy moonbeams.

"If he dies," he said to himself, "all this may yet be mine. It is worth a desperate struggle, and I mean to make it."

Of the past life of Heath Hampton but little was known. He had come with his mother to Boston some three years previously; none knew from whence.

They had purchased what was afterward known as Hampton Place, and there they lived in stately, lonely splendor.

The mother was haughty, peculiar, silent and reserved, shunning all intercourse or overtures from the outside world.

The son was quite the opposite, winning and refined, with much grace of presence and courtesy of breeding.

He spent money with a lavish hand, yet one who was a keen observer of human nature could see he was utterly devoid of principle; one who only lacked the opportunity of becoming the deepest of villains; yet the cloak of hypocrisy was gathered so tightly about him, the outer world little dreamed of the inner blackness.

Heath Hampton found no difficulty in gaining an entree into the most exclusive society; as is too often the case, no one thought of inquiring into his antecedents.

He had lain siege at once to the heart and hand of the pretty heiress. It had been a close tie between Ulmont Ulvesford and himself as to which was in reality the favored suitor.

There had been a time when Loraine hardly knew herself just which she like better; when she ultimately chose Ulmont Ulvesford, all hopes of reigning as master of Lorrimer Hall fell like a house of cards around the schemer.

He had never loved the fair, haughty beauty, yet he had vowed to win her fortune, he had been resigned to accept Loraine with it.

Eagerly he watched the rapid recovery of his rival, bitterly cursing his luck. His congratulations, although being anything but sincere, had the essence of earnestness in tone and look, which, although a spurious article, readily passed for the genuine coin.

Loraine, who had rapidly recovered from her terrible shock, had taken up her place with his mother, whose illness had not proven so serious as was at first supposed, at Ulmont's bedside, and good old Dr. Nelson often remarked his patient's rapid recovery was in a great measure due to Loraine's careful nursing.

"I never could have spared him," she would say, with a bright, happy laugh, while Ulmont answered gently:

"The life you have striven so hard to save, Loraine, shall ever be devoted to you!"

To Ulmont Ulvesford there seemed to exist no break in the love he had always borne to Loraine.

Mrs. Ulvesford had taken up her vigil by his bedside, refusing to be comforted; all the love of her life was centered in her handsome, only son.

Once, in his dreams, and she saw his lips move, as she bent her head, she thought she heard him whisper a sweet, fanciful name; it sounded like "Isetta."

He never uttered the name but once, and she soon forgot the incident, it was of so little import.

Slowly Ulmont Ulvesford gathered up the tangled threads of his life again; by degrees a part of the scattered past returned to him.

He remembered quite well his travels abroad, the people whom he had met, and the pleasant ocean voyage homeward as he was coming to claim his bride.

He remembered he must have passed his twenty-first birthday on the ocean. He remembered often gazing upon Loraine's portrait in the moonlight, but beyond this, heaven help him! he remembered nothing; leaning over the rails, gazing down on the moonlit waves at midnight, was the last recollection that crossed Ulmont Ulvesford's mind.

The following events, which had so quickly followed in rapid succession —how he landed, or the slightest remembrance of the accident which had so nearly cost him his life, were entirely obliterated from his mind.

Was the past ever more to be as a sealed book to him! Alas, for the strange complications of fate, often more cruel than death.

We hope that a sufficient sum will be obtained to erect a monument that will be worthy of the man, and that will show to the world that the dead trooper has not been forgotten in his native town.

Marriage Bells.

On Wednesday night, a quiet wedding took place at the Methodist parsonage, when Mr. David R. Jones and Miss Minnie Hewitt, daughter of Mr. Wm. Jones, of Peterborough, were united in marriage. The wedding was attended by a few of the friends of the bride and groom. Mr. Jones is an employee of the Geo. Matthews Co. The newly married couple have the best wishes of many friends, in which the Times cordially joins.

Injured at Norwood

While Mr. W. S. Nelson, of town, was driving in the ring at the Norwood fair yesterday afternoon, the horse by some means became unmanageable, and the sulky in which he was seated was upset. Mr. Nelson was dragged a considerable distance, receiving painful, but, we are pleased to say, not dangerous injuries. His leg was torn, necessitating several stitches, and he was otherwise bruised. He returned by train and is doing as well as can be expected.

A Bobcaygeon Railway.

Lindsay Post.—Our citizens and the people of the townships interested will rejoice to learn that the provisional directors of the Lindsay, Bobcaygeon & Pontypool Railway are at least in a position to report progress, after experiencing many difficulties which it would not be wise to enumerate at the present time. Let it suffice to say that the directors have not been lagging, and that the delay was entirely due to financial reasons. We take pleasure in announcing that Engineer W. J. Jennings and Engineer James McDougall, of Toronto, with several assistants, arrived in town yesterday on the way to Bobcaygeon, from which point they will make a preparatory survey of the line to Lindsay, and thence to Pontypool. After agreeing upon the most desirable line, Engineer McDougall will take charge of the preliminary construction work. There are good reasons for hoping that twelve months hence will see the line well advanced towards completion.

THE EAST RIDING

CONSERVATIVES MEET AT NORWOOD YESTERDAY

But Adjourn Without Nominating a Candidate—Addresses Delivered by Messrs. Breeder, M. P., J. Kendry, M. P., and Organizer Leavitt

The Conservative convention at Norwood yesterday was not largely attended. This was due to the fact that the meeting had been poorly advertised, and also because the Agricultural Fair at Keene was in full swing. Amongst those who went down from Peterborough were Messrs. James Kendry, M.P., A. E. Peck, Geo. W. Hatton, H. T. Strickland and R. A. Morrow.

Short addresses were delivered by Messrs. Breder, M.P., Dundas; James Kendry, M.P., Peterborough, and organizer Leavitt, and G. J. Sherry, Norwood.

After some discussion it was decided to adjourn until the afternoon of Wednesday, October 17. In the meantime the Secretary was instructed to get out posters and to properly advertise the convention.

Some Questions Requiring Solution.

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—There are some things in this world we do not know, and there are things we cannot know; but there are things we should know and do not. Among the things we as members of the Y.M.C.A. should know and do not is the following—Mr. Curtis, our esteemed townsman, was a long time janitor of the Y.M.C.A. rooms. A better man cannot be found—obliging, quite capable, he was always there and always did his work. Mr. Curtis has left. What for we ask? None of the members knew of his leaving, till a new man came, or they would have raised a row with some folks. I have asked after the cause of Mr. Curtis' leaving. On Saturday night he was not allowed to draw the plug of the plunge bath until 9.30 p.m. The bath takes 2 1-2 hours to empty, and half an hour to clean. It was always one o'clock on Sunday morning before he could be finished. Christianity, indeed! better to be in China. Very like Oom Paul and his Bible.

The hours were 14 per day and on Saturday 17, for the magnificent sum of about 6 1-4 cents per hour. Better be a dog and bark at the moon. The sooner this is remedied the better, and the sooner Mr. Curtis is taken back the better for the Y.M.C.A., as the members do not intend to allow a man to be bullied by so-called directors. Let a man work in a christian land and pay him a christian wage.

The present janitor is a stranger. Why give it to such? It is another director's little game.

Is it Right?

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—I notice at the last meeting of the Board of Education a grant was made to hold a course of lectures in town. Now, Sir, while I do not for a moment desire to belittle the object, I must say the Board is making a mistake. It might as well make a grant to the Band, to the Volunteers, or to any other object. The Board has no power to do any such thing, and I hereby warn the Secretary-Treasurer not to pay over the money.

To allow this to pass would be setting a precedent that might cause serious trouble and loss.

If the object is a worthy one, as I am sure it is, our friends will have no difficulty in raising all the money needed, without worrying it out of the school funds.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, &c.

ATTACK of ROYAL CANAdians at Paardeberg

The present is a time when war pictures are in greater demand than ever. The conduct of the British soldiers on the battlefield has won the plaudits of admiring nations. We have at great expense published four large, beautiful pictures size 22x28, on heavy, superfine calendered paper. A picture that will commend itself and send a thrill to the heart of every true Canadian is the one called Attack of Royal Canadians at Paardeberg, there are literally hundreds of figures on this picture, the mountains or kopjes stretching out into the distance are swarming with men, while here and there a prostrate figure speaks only too well of the Boer rifleman. It was on this battlefield the gallant Major Arnold met death unflinchingly. Indeed, it is only too true that many of those gallant hearts that beat so high when the cheering thousands bade them God-speed as they sailed from Canada's shores now lie still forever in lonely graves on the other side of the world under African skies. To every Canadian heart, to every Canadian home, the deeds of their brave soldier boys appeal with an irresistible thrill of patriotism and pride. Gordon Highlanders at the Battle of Belmont, Charging the Boer Guns at Elandslaagte and the Charge of Gen. French's Cavalry on the Retreating Gen Cronje's Army. These are all stirring pictures and cannot fail to commend themselves to anyone who will examine them. They are RED HOT SELLERS! Agents coin money. Big profits. Enormous success. One agent sold 68 in one day. Sample and terms 25 cts (none free); four for 80 cts: $1.75 per dozen; 25 for $3.25; 50 for $6.00; 100 for $11.00 Write to day for a dozen and make money. No other business school in Canada, nor perhaps on the continent, is in a better position to do as much for its pupils as we are doing.

These successes are simply the RESULTS of the thorough course of training which this school has been giving its pupils during the past 24 years, and which has gained us the confidence of the business people and enables us to place many of our pupils with the best business houses. What we get we hold. What we have not got, we're after.

We pay the railway fare of students from a distance, provided it does not exceed $8. Board for ladies at $2 per week and for gentlemen $2.50

Write for one of our catalogues. It also is a compilation of RESULTS and is believed to be the handsomest issued by any business school in America.

LI HUNG CHANG UNDER RUSSIA'S WING

He Confers With De Giers and Leaves for Pekin Under Russian Guard.

RUSSIA OVERRUNS THE WHOLE OF MANCHURIA

British Landing Party Seizes Ching Wen Tao, Which is to be Used as a Winter Post by the Allies—Chinese Troops to Disperse Boxers.

Berlin, Oct. 5.

The following despatch from St. Petersburg has been semi-officially issued here—"The Russian Government assents to the proposals in Count Von Buelow's note of Oct. 1. M. De Giers, the Russian Minister at Pekin, has been instructed in that sense."

London, Oct. 5.—The most important feature of the Chinese situation is the indication that the powers are at last approaching some sort of an agreement as to what is best to be done in China, the probability being that Germany's most recent note will be supported by all the allies. The powers still continue under military operations. The port of Ching Wen Tao has been seized by the British with the evident intention of obtaining a winter port in the Gulf of Liao Tung to be used while the allies are wintering in Pekin. Russia has now occupied Mukden, which means that they have overrun the whole of Manchuria and are now almost at the Gulf of Liao Tung. The object of the Russian operations has undoubtedly primarily to draw the Chinese from the railway under construction from the Amor through China, and this object is probably accomplished.

CHINESE MUCH ASTONISHED.

Shanghai, Thursday, Oct. 4.—The astonishment of the Chinese was great when they received to-day official notification from the Viceroy to the effect that foreign pressure had necessitated the degradation of prominent members of the court.

It is reported that the allies will demand an indemnity which will aggregate $300,000,000.

BRITISH OCCUPY CHING WAN TAO.

Tien Tsin, Oct. 3.—The orders given to Tung Lu (the commander-in-chief of the Northern armies and one of the most influential men in China), to join Li Hung Chang, have been countermanded.

A landing part from the British armored cruiser Aurora has occupied Ching Wan Tao.

An order has been sent to Shanghai for the immediate delivery of a plant for the construction of a branch railroad from Tang Ho on the gulf of Liao Tung, to Ching Wan Tao; also for the erection of a pier (to which ships may be anchored.

It is reported that the Russians are moving from Shan Hai Kuan towards Chin Chau.

The Germans have demanded possession of the railroad between Tien Tsin and Pekin, and the Russians have agreed to let them have it. The Germans will shortly begin to repair the road between Yang Tsun and Pekin.

TO DISPERSE THE BOXERS.

Pekin, Oct. 1, via Tien Tsin, Oct. 4, via Shanghai, Oct. 4.—A small body of Imperial Chinese troops appeared at Pei Ta Chun yesterday. They informed the British garrison that their purpose was to disperse the Boxers. It is announced that the Germans will winter 8,000 men in Pekin. The British are reducing their forces in preparation for the winter. One thousand coolies will start for India soon and the Indian cavalry will probably be withdrawn.

The volume of business being done is steadily increasing.

LI CONFERS WITH DE GIERS.

Tien Tsin, Oct. 3, via Shanghai, Oct. 4.—Li Hung Chang and M. De Giers, the Russian Minister to China, had a lengthy conference to-day, after which it was announced that Li Hung Chang would depart for Pekin to-morrow. Li Hung Chang will be accompanied by the Russian admiral, a Russian guard, and his own bodyguard. Peaceful conditions prevail.

The failure of the Russians to rebuild the railway to Pekin is causing talk among the commanders of the restoration of the line to English owners for reconstruction and operation.

The sick among the Americans are being sent to the hospital ship Maine, which will sail soon for Nagasaki, and Yokohama.

RUSSIANS OCCUPY MUKDEN.

Berlin, OOct. 5.—The naval society's news bureau in China cables that the Russians have occupied Mudken, capital of the Province of Liao Tung.

A TOOL OF TUAN.

Berlin, Oct. 5.—The Lokal Anzeigers Shanghai correspondent says that Lu Chuan Lin, recently appointed president of the Grand Council, is a tool of Prince Tuan.

FIRE AND SHIPWRECK.

Barque Primera Caught Fire and Her Crew Were Cast Away.

London, Oct. 5.—An extraordinary tale of shipwreck and suffering has been brought to England by the crew of the barque Primeria, hwo have reached London from Ascension in the Union Castle liner Galeka.

The names of the poor seamen who were cast away in mid-Atlantic are B. Harvard, mate; A. Anderson, Hugh Humphreys, Otto Peterson, Thomas Bastin, A. Elims, and H. Nobles. They are at present at the Seamen's Institute, East India road, Poplar, and they tell the following remarkable story—

On May 29 the barque Primera left London for Walfisch bay with a cargo of coal. All went well until July 7, when the captain died after a short illness, and the mate took charge of the ship. Early on the morning of August 3 a sailor saw smoke issuing from the fore hatch, and believing that some hay stowed in the fore peak had taken fire, 600 bales of the stuff were thrown overboard.

COAL BURNING.

It was presently discovered, however, that the coal was burning. At half-past 1 a.m. on August 4 the fore and main hatches blew up with a terrific report, and the cabin deck was shattered. Finding it impossible to subdue the fire the ship's company and the three passengers took to the two boats, ten men getting aboard the lifeboat and five in a smaller craft.

Along with the mate and the four seamen there were in the lifeboat three passengers, one of whom was making the trip for his health. The other boat was manned by the second mate, W. Thomas, and a crew including Thomas Jones, Edward Grindley, Walter Mackindrich and Albert Crindelman. Two small casks containing sixteen gallons of fresh water, a few tins of corned beef, condensed milk and jam, and some ships' biscuits constituted the provisions of the small craft.

ACCIDENT OCCURRED.

While lowering the lifeboat an accident occured which very nearly sent it to the bottom. A sudden lurch of the burning vessel caused the lifeboat to swing from the davits, colliding with the side of the ship, and knocking a hole in the smaller boat. Constant bailing was therefore necessary for days after the boats were launched, the smaller towed behind the lifeboat.

In these the castaways drifted in light airs and calms for some days watching the burning barque, which by night presented a spectacle at once grand and terrible.

In the hope that the chances of rescue would improve, the boats parted company on August 13, both intending to make St. Helena, which was then distant about 530 miles. Misfortune, however, overtook the occupants of the lifeboat, for the wind fell light, and every day the slender store of water and provisions diminished, until the wretched men were half mad with thirst and starving for wain of food. To render their plight still more desperate a huge whale swam alongside for some days, now and then sinking beneath the boat and reappearing on the other side.

DEPLORABLE STATE.

In this deplorable condition the men remained for many days, and then, as a last hope, it was determined to try to make Ascension, which was sighted on August 26. Three days later they arrived on the island.

The naval authorities of Ascension sent off a boat, which took the castaways in tow, and after being twenty-five days nine hours adrift, the men were carried, more dead than alive to the hospital, where in course of time they grew strong enough to be sent home by the Galeka.

PROBABLY A LONG STRIKE

Operators and Carrying Companies at Loggerheads.

FIVE THOUSAND WORKERS.

These are the Only Ones of 142,000 Not on Strike.

Hazelton, Pa., Oct. 5.—Although there has been no material change in the strike situation here since yesterday, there is a growing conviction that the strike will be long drawn out. This is mainly due to the fact that the developments of the last forty-eight hours have complicated the situation. The strike is no longer a mere demand on the part of the mine workers fo ran increase i nwages, a reduction in the price of powder and the settlement of a list of minor grievances from their employers, but entirely new factors have entered into the arena of the contest. These are the individual operators and the coal carrying companies and their varying interests.

IN CONSULATION

While no information is obtainable from the operators here as to what they are doing thei refforts to induce the coal-carrying companies to grant them lower tonnage rates, it is known that they are in consulation with the railroad officials upon this very question. The operators say they cannot advance wages or increase their operating expenses in any maner unless the carrying companies agree to equalise matters by a compensating freight rate. It is certain that unless these concessions are made the individual operators will close their collieries and suspend operations indefinitely.

NO CONCESSIONS

On the other hand, it is believed in mining circles here that the carrying companies will not make any concessions to the operators with the deliberate intention of thus crowding them out of the business. It has only been a question of time, anyhow, when the individual operators would be gobbled up by the big companies, and the time seems to be very near at hand.

There was an executive session lasting several hours of the National Executive Board of the United Mine Workers here and it was supposed from the secrecy maintained as to its object that there would be some important development. At its conclusion, however, Mr. Mitchell said that there had only been a discussion of the general situation adn a comparison of notes. From all reports received, it was shown that out of 142,000 mine workers in the anthracite district there were only 5,000 men at work, and it was expected that in a few days these would also join the strikers and every colliery in the entire anthracite field would be closed down.

SIMPLY LOOKING ON.

Asked whether, as had been reported, he had been in consultation with the operators in New York by wire, Mr. Mitchell said that he had not been and had not at any time had any talk with an operator. All that he knew was that the carrying companies and the individual operators were having a scrap by themselves and that the Union Mine Workers would now simply lie back and look on. Mr. Mitchell also said that nothing had been done looking toward the calling of a conference, and that he could not say when anything would be done in that direction.

ANOTHER VICTIM OF RIOT.

Shenandoah, Pa., Oct. 5.—Advices received here early to-day state that the North Franklin colliery at Treventon, operated by the Philapelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company, is idle, the employs having failed to report for work. There was no disturbance. The mine employed about 800 men and boys.

Edward Coyle, a miner aged 50 years, one of the victims of the riot here two weeks ago, died to-day. While the riot was in progress Mr. Coyle left his home to look after the safety of his children, when a stray bullet struck him below the heart. A widow and large family survive him.

SALISBURY FARTHER AHEAD.

Conservatives	250
Unionists	43
Liberals and Laborites	76
Nationalists	58

Mr. Timothy M. Healy retains his seat for North Louth after a bitter fight.

The Liberals suffered an unexpected loss in the defeat of Sir Wilfrid Lawson in the Cockermouth division of Cumberland. Sir Wilfrid is the president of the United Kingdom Alliance for the suppression of the liquor traffic.

On the other hand, the Conservatives made an unlooked for gain in Londonderry.

MILITIA TO BE DISMISSED SOON

Volunteers to be Relieved from Duty.

PROVIDING FOR SOLDIERS.

Reservists and Discharged Men to Be Taken Into Public Service.

London, Oct. 5.

The Foreign Office has received the following despatch from the British High Commissioner in South Africa—"The refugees will begin to return to the Transvaal October 12, at the rate of about one thousand weekly. It will take at least three months to repartiate those who are waiting in South Africa."

London, Oct. 5.—In expectation of the complete cessation of hostilities in South Africa, the War office is taking steps for the early disembodment of a considerable portion of the Militia now under arms. It is understood that the battalions called up in December of last year will be amongst the first relieved from duty, and that orders for their dismissal will shortly be issued. Many of the battalions are in South Africa, and these will be brought home in the order in which they went out.

The Government have issued a pamphlet giving instructions as to the civil employment of Army Reserve men and discharged soldiers who will before long return from South Africa. Rules for registrations are clearly defined, and special registers will be kept by the Chief Recruiting Staff Officer, St. George's Barracks, Charing-cross; by the Recruiting Staff Officers at Dublin, Liverpool, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Manchester, Leeds, Birmingham, Sheffield and Woolwich; also by the Commandant of the Discharge Depot, Gosport; the Officer Commanding the Militia and Volunteer Artillery District at Great Yarmouth, Leith and Scarborough; as well as by the Officer Commanding Militia and Artillery Districts at Londonderry and Cork. The Regulations provide for the employment of discharged soldiers (pensioners only as messengers in Government offices, and discharged men in the Royal Army Clothing Department, Ordnance Department, barrack services, Customs, Office of Works, Ordnance Factories, Post Office, prison service, Royal Engineer services, Stationery Office, and Government departments generally. Also employment in the police, in the Corps of Commissionaries, on railways, as Customs watchers, etc. A full list is published of the Railway Companies wh owill engage discharged soldiers, with the rate of wages, and the districts where to apply for work in all parts of the United Kingdom.

BULLER AT PILGRIM'S REST.

London, Oct. 4.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts, under date of Pretoria, Oct. 3.

"Buller returned to Lydenburg yesterday, after a successful march from Spitskop. He reached Pilgrim's Rest Sept. 27, the enemy retiring. The Boers brought two guns into action on Oct. 1, but afterward disappeared, taking the guns with them. During the march 600 head of cattle, 6,000 sheep, and 150 wagon loads of supplies were captured. One hundred and nine burghers surrendered, and 184,000 rounds of small arm ammunition was destroyed.

"Hart has returned to Krugersdorp, having engaged the enemy on twenty-nine occasions in as many days. His casualties were three killed and 24 wounded. Many Boers were killed and 95 made prisoners. He captured 2,720 head of cattle and 3,281 sheep.

"The Dublin Fusiliers made a night assault with the bayonet on a Boer laager between Pretoria and Johannesburg and captured nine men, mostly important Boers, who have troubled the district.

A party of Boers have penetrated the southern part of Orange River Colony, entering De Wetsdorp and Wepener, Detachments are after them.

MAXWELL THE ADMINSTRATOR.

Pretoria, Oct. 5.—Lord Roberts has issued a proclamation declaring that all matters concerning the provisional Government of the Vaal River Colony (Transvaal) must be referred to Gen. Maxwell. The proclamation authorizes Gen. Maxwell to appoint such officers as are necessary for enforcing the laws in the various districts, and authorises him to make such changes in the laws as will make them conform to present conditions.

Commandant Erasmus has not surrendered as yet. He has doubtless retired with his cattle to the northward, and Commandant Grobler has done the same.

The proclamation issued to-day is considered to be well calculated to deal with the situation. It gives Gen. Maxwell complete control of administrative work, which is regarded as a well-earned promotion for one who has served in all branches of the servic.

THE POLICE FORCE.

An order has been published on behalf of Gen. Baden-Powell's new police force to the effect that thrid-class troopers serving in it will receive 7 shillings, and first-class troopers 9 shillings per day, rations, etc., being provided. The term of enlistment is for two years. At the expiration of this term, troopers may re-enlist or enter the reserve, receiving £1 per month. On joining the reserve, men who desire to settle in the colony will be assisted by the Government by grants of land and assistance in its development. The Government promises t oassist the families of brides of any men from England who settle in the by furnishing them with free transportation.

AN OUTSIDE OPINION.

How the Toronto Telegram Regards West Peterborough

The Toronto Telegram has the following which speaks for itself. "James Kendry, M.P., and Mayor of Peterborough, spent yesterday in the city, but political exigencies did not bring him here; it was business, which will always be more improtant to him than politics. James Kendry is a man who has risen from an ordinary employe to the position of manager of the great Auburn woollen mills in the eastern town. A strong National Policy Conservative, Mr. Kendry supports his party with all the time and energy at his disposal, but Knowing Ones declare he is anxious to get out o fpolitics and attend to his woollen mill, which can bring him in better results in a day than the letters M. P. would in an entire Parliament. The convention takes place at Peterboro' on Saturday, and Mr. Kendry may consent to sacrifice his personal interests and again contest the riding. He is by all odds the only man that the Tories can safely count on holding the constituency in line. Last January, in order to defeat J. R. McWilliams, an able Grit politician, the Tories had to get Kendry into the field in order to squench the ambitions of McWilliams. . . . . Kendry won, but it was the hardest fight of his life. Kendry ha dbeen Mayor four times previously, a othe job is not new to him.

J. H. McClellan, the Grit nominee in West Peterboro', boasts that he is a platform orator unsurpassed in the midland district. As a speaker he can easily outmatch Kendry, but as a canvasser McClellan or any Grit or Tory candidate is outmatched by Jim Kendry. He had a greater "glad hand", and "bland smile" then any book agent, on the road. Grits claim, nevertheless, that Orator McClellan will surprise Canvasser Kendry on polling day."

CONVENTION TO-DAY.

Conservatives to Meet To-day to Select a Candidate.

A Convention of West Peterborough Conservatives will take place to-day in the Opera House for the nominal purpose of selecting a candidate for the approaching elections for the House of Commons. It is a foregone conclusion that Mr. Kendry, the present member, will be the candidate. It is said that many Conservatives who shouted for Mr. Garvin at the last local elections, while they marked their ballots for Mr. Stratton, will be there in force.

If the Conservative party is true to itself, and desires to put a stop to crooked election methods, it should request all such persons to retire, and give emphasis to the feelings of all honest members of their party by passing a strongly-worded resolution. It would be interesting to hear Mr. Gurvin express himself on this subject.

While on this matter we might suggest that enquiry might be made at the meeting if a portion of Mr. Kendry's election printing is not being done at the Liberal printing office, and some of Mr. McClellan's at the Tory office. Not that this matters much, but simply to show that our local contemporaries are not in it for their health alone.

THE EAST AND WEST.

How the Political Pot is Boiling in the Peterboroughs.

TORY BAD MANAGEMENT.

East Peterborough Will Probably Return its Old Members.

The Conservatives in the West Will Have To Put up a Big Fight to Win—Mr. Kendry not so Popular With the Working Classes as he Was at the Last Election—How a Prominent Liberal Figures it.

The political cauldron is beginning to sizzle, and if dissolution takes place within a day or two, as it nodoubt will, two weeks will see the pot boiling in earnest. The Tories in the East have made a serious muddle of matters. They called a convention and failed to advertise it properly. A notice in a political paper was all the publicity given the meeting. People will discover that if it is desired to reach the masses, it can only be done through The Times, which is read by all classes of the community. It is somewhat surprising that the political organ of the party here did not, of its own accord, take sufficient interest in the matter to print and distribute a hundred or two posters announcing the convention. It is hinted that the paper referred to is not anxious to put up a fight against Mr. Lang, and hence purposely omitted doing this. Be that as it may, no one knew about the Norwood convention, and few were there. The only thing left to do was to adjourn and call another meeting, which was done. This meeting will take place on the 17th, and should a candidate be selected, he will be badly handicapped on the start. It is said that the polling will take place during the first week in November, which if true, will leave the candidate only a little over two weeks in which to meet the electors. What chance will he have? We leave our readers to judge.

In West Peterborough the Liberals are preparing to put up a fight that will make their opponents hustle, if they mean to win. Mr. McClellan is a worker, and is laying his plans for a vigorous campaign. A prominent Liberal told The Times yesterday that the abuse which the Tories have been heaping upon Tarte and Laurier, will re-act, and many cast their votes for the Liberal candidate, who would not otherwise do so. He said that many Roman Catholics, especially the French, most of whom have invariably voted Tory in Dominion matters and Grit in local elections, will support Mr. McClellan as a result of the act of the Tory paper. It is also intimated that Mr. Kendry is not nearly so popular with the working classes as he was on the last occasion. The troubles which took place amongst the employees of the Auburn Woollen Mills some time ago will have its effect, and deprive him of many votes.

It is quite evident from the above, and also for other reasons, that victory is by no means assured the Conservatives of West Peterborough.

GREAT WORK FOR LITTLE MONEY.

DIAMOND DYES

ARE THE MOST PROFITABLE AGENTS USED IN THE HOME.

No other article used in the homes of the Dominion of Canada are as popular as the Diamond Dyes. These indispensible helps in economical housekeeping make new friends every day. The popularity is gained by quality, excellence of colors and ease and comfort in doing the work of dyeing.

Just think of it! One package of any of the Diamond Dyes will color from one to six pounds of goods, according to the shade desired. This is wonderful work when the small expense is considered.

Your last year's jacket, cape, blouse, dress, skirt, and your husband's suits children's clothes may be soiled, faded and unsightly; but with a ten cent package of Diamond Dyes you can work a mighty change, and make the old things like new for this season's wear. One effort in this work of true economy will convince you that Diamond Dyes are true money savers to the family.

PETERBOROUGH, OCTOBER 6 1900.

They Were Easy.

The richest thing in crime has certainly been unearthed by the Montreal Manager of the Dominion Express Company. When a gang of swindlers operating from an appropriately named place known as Granville seek to victimize only chiefs of police, surely the devices of the villainous have very nearly reached their limit. And yet the scheme was an easy one. The swindlers made up a story of certain bonds having been stolen, notified each rural chief of police that they had ascertained that the bonds had been expressed C.O.D. for $8 to somebody in his district, telling him to pay the money, hold the bonds for further advice and secure an offered reward of $200. Many chiefs throughout the country are said to have bitten, but astute Dominion Express manager at Montreal got on to the game through some correspondence with the Granville agent and blocked it. The letter of advice to the chiefs who were to be victimized gave out that one Brynes, cashier of the Halifax, N. S. Brewing Company, had decamped with $3,200 in cash and $5,000 in certificates of the Newfoundland Pulp and Land Company. For Brynes $250 reward was offered and for the certificates $200. The latter was supposed to have been expressed to a man named Merrill in the respective districts of the chiefs who were to be victimized. Truly the wiles of the wicked are without number.

What a Whale Weighs.

Have you any idea of the size of the common Greenland Whale? Nilson, the zoologist, estimates the full-grown animal to average 100 tons, or 224,000 pounds. That is to say, a whale weighs as much as about eighty elephants or 400 bears. Of course some run larger than this. There are tales among old whalers of whales 110 feet long, and weighing at least 150 tons, but they are not seen in these days. A seventy-foot whale is a big one now. Still, it may give some idea of what monsters are occasionally killed when we mention that a ton of oil has been extracted from the tongue alone of a single whale.

A Well Trained Boy

Mr. Goodfather had brought up his son according to the good old model which teaches that children shall be seen and not heard, say "Yes, sir," and "No, sir," and respect their elders.

When Johnnie went to college he arranged with his father that on his arrival there, if he found everything satisfactory, he would telegraph "Yes." When the telegram arrived the busy father had forgotten what "Yes" referred to, so he wired back, "Yes, what?" and Johnnie answered, "Yes, sir."

The Athletic Girl.

The athletic girl is apt to be influential, to have power—and most of us like this—and when she expresses an opinion she is generally listened to with respect. A sound mind in a sound body is the superlative of attraction, and this a girl may and should possess. For most girls, as for many older women too, it is well to strive for the rounded life, the life of symmetry, the life which is not unduly developed in one direction at the expense of another.—Ladies' Home Journal.

OLD FORT HAYS

Famous Frontier Post and Its Exciting History.

The most famous military post in the Kansas frontier has, by the passage of the Fort Hays bill by Congress, been wiped out of existence. This fort, which was for many years the central point of the army operations against the redskins, has for years been deserted. Its 7,000 acres have been leased to cattlemen and the splendid timber that is unequaled in Western Kansas has been furnishing the settlers with fuel. Nineteen big frame cottages, the officers' homes, the barracks and training quarters, have been unoccupied, and it will be a great delight to the people of this section to see them filled with students of the State normal school and the State agricultural school, both of which are under the bill to have branches there.

This fort was the barrier against the Indian raids that marked the last attempts of the redskins to frighten the people of the State. When the Cheyennes came down from the Northwest the soldiers of Hays, with the assistance of those from Wallace and Harker, met them and drove them back, saving the lives of thousands of settlers. Gen. George Forsythe followed Roman Nose into the Upper Republican country, and there, with his band of 100 soldiers, was surrounded by fully 1,000 of the redskins. For three days they were held there, and then were rescued by succor brought by two scouts who escaped and went back to the fort. It was found that the imprisoned soldiers had been more than victors, for they had killed more than a dozen for every one of their own number that fell. Roman Nose himself was among the killed.

There was another scare in the latter 70's, when the people as far east as Topeka felt uneasy, but the Indians did not come so far as on the earlier occasion. It then became apparent that there was no further need of the maintenance of the post, and it was abandoned a few years after. All this time the buildings have stood empty, and the caretaker has had the lonesome task of looking after them.

Fort Hays has had an eventful history. It was originally called Fort Fletcher, and was located fourteen miles south of here on the Big Muddy. One day the creek was swelled by a storm and the waters drove the soldiers out of the fort. Several colored soldiers who were too slow were drowned, and Gen. Pope ordered the location changed to the present site. The buildings were then erected and improvements made.

The town of Hays City, which was then founded a short distance to the north, was a rough place, being filled with cowboys and frontiersmen who followed the building of the railroad. The City Council granted thirty-seven saloon licenses the first day that it met. There were "killers" without number, and on the slopes of a little hill were laid the victims of their prowess. It was called Boot Hill, and there lie forty-five of the distinguished gentry who died with their boots on, some being known by their real names and some not. It will never be known who really were laid to rest in the unceremonious fashion of the frontier days, for now it is too late to find out.

"Wild Bill" was Marshal of the town for a while, until one day he shot three soldiers on the street, and then it was healthier for him to go hence. He went, and was next heard of at Abilene, where he was again Marshal, with a predilection for killing.

The most famous event in the history of the fort was the raiding of the army stores in 1869. The government then had a great many stores there and the surplus that could not be cared for at the fort was piled up along the railroad track with two watchmen to guard it. One of them, John Hays, went across the street one night and entered a saloon to get a drink. As he went in he was met by two soldiers from the fort, who, without provocation, killed him. The soldiers were colored and were drunk. They went into a barber shop and broke mirrors and scared the proprietor to the roof of his shop. He went to the fort and when the men were ranged in dress parade by order of the Colonel he picked out the desperadoes. They were taken to Hays and shut up in a cellar that served as a jail. That night they were taken out by the citizens and strung up to the railroad bridge. In 1874 the Ninth Infantry (colored) tried to get even with the town, but in the battle that ensued six of their number were left dead in the street. There were many other fatalities in the conflicts between the town and fort, and the soldiers found that they had a town of fighters to deal with.

The old-timers, like the late Henry Inman and Gen. Forsythe, tried their mettle here and found honor. Now it will be devoted to peace, for the terms of the grant are that the agricultural college and State normal school shall have it for branches of those institutions. It is expected that at least 500 students will be in attendance.—Globe-Democrat.

Women Not Cowardly.

When cowardice is described as a leading feminine attribute somebody makes a huge mistake. Women do the most daring things on record—take chances which would appal a man. They may jump at the sight or mere mention of a harmless mouse, but they court death several times a year. It is one of the traits which makes feminine nature so puzzling. I have known women who were timid to a degree, under ordinary circumstances, come forth as heroines under the pressure of occasion. A woman who shudders at the sight of a small cut from which blood oozes will often exhibit a marvelous courage in a shocking accident. It is beautiful to think that dependence can be placed upon the sex in times of need.

"Oiling Up."

Just a little oil on the engine at the right time may mean the difference between life and death to the passengers and crew. What oil is to the friction of the delicate parts of the engine, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is to the delicate organs of the body. It eases their labor, prevents the loss of power and waste of energy caused by friction. Many a man who was all run down, whose limbs ached when he walked, whose back ached when he laid down, who breathed with difficulty, and coughed constantly, has been perfectly cured by the use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It purifies the blood, strengthens the stomach and heals weak lungs.

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," nor any medicine called "just as good" by the dealer.

Mr. Chas. Hanwick, of Lenox, Macomb Co., Mich., writes: "I have never felt better in my life than I do now. I have taken Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery right along. I can now walk quite well with a cane, and hope to throw even that away before long, and as I have had to use crutches for nearly two years, I think I am doing fine. I do not cough now and I can sleep like a school boy. You must know that I have been treated in two hospitals and by three doctors besides, and received no benefit; so I think your medicine the only medicine for me."

A NOVEL.

Heaven pity him! how should he ever know of them again!

The only one who could have pierced the darkness of that benighted brain, and whispered to him of the broken-hearted young wife who waited in vain for his coming, was good old Paul Illingsworth, and with him every memento of that brief, strange past was swept entirely from the face of the earth.

Owing to Ulmont's strong constitution, his convalescence was more rapid than might have been expected. He was amazed when they told him the fall and winter had passed away and spring had come once more. Every one was so pleased to greet the young heir again.

"It was quite worth his illness to see how much people cared for him," he said, with a gay laugh.

He was the same happy, careless, debonair fellow as of old; he was changed only in appearance; yet that change was wonderful — his most intimate friends were amazed.

The deep hazel eyes and laughing mouth were the same; but the dark waving masses of nut-brown hair were gone; fair rings clustered around his brow instead, gold as Loraine's own, soft and shining.

The effect was marvelous. Those who had admired Ulmont Ulvesford before, were doubly charmed with him now.

Since his illness he had been given to strange fits of melancholy reveries which seemed ever seeking some thought quite forgotten, which brought with them a vague, indefinable pain; he could never tell why he always attributed it to some vanished fancy during his illness; he did not care to remember it. Mrs. Ulvesford clasped Loraine in her arms saying the happiest day of her life would be the day which made her her son's wife.

Again, through the cruel mysteries of fate, the wedding preparations were going steadily on. This time it was concluded that the ceremony should be performed at the church in the early morning, when the sun was shining and the birds were singing.

"I could never endure a repetition of that cruel night at Lorrimer Hall, when I thought I had lost you," whispered Loraine.

"You shall have your own way, my darling," answered Ulmont; "your way shall be my law."

So it was arranged that the wedding should take place at the church, and be as quiet a one as possible.

The propitious morning dawned at last.

At an early hour a long array of carriages drew up before the little vine-covered church in the suburbs. The sunshine drifted down through the foliage like molten gold; the robins in the green branches mingled their notes with the tuneful bobolink, the sweet scent of honeysuckle and clover wafted their fragrance over the hawthorn hedges, the sun hinted love to the clouds, the birds sang of love to their mates; love was the song the little brook sang as it danced joyfully over the white pebbles— all nature sang of love on this pitiful marriage morn.

Ulmont would allow no shadow to cross the brightness of the day. If one of those strange, brooding fancies he could not define stole over him, he shook it off and forgot it in watching the beautiful, flower-like face of Loraine.

Neither the sunshine, the flowers, the birds, nor the brooklet warned them of the fatal tragedy which was about to be enacted; a tragedy too deep, too bitter for words to describe, and they went on to their doom with a smile on their faces.

The sunshine streamed in through the colored windows, flecking the bride's soft, fleecy robes, with bars of crimson, purple and gold.

Suddenly, and without warning dark clouds scudded across the sunshine, the soft, summer breeze wailed among the tall oak trees, and the flowering lilacs; the blossoms on the hillside swayed to and fro, bending their heads before the storm.

The distant ocean wildly beat the shore like a relentless, angry spirit; in one brief instant the face of nature had changed. Thunder rolled across the darkening sky, and vivid flashes of lightning, following each other in rapid succession, felled many a stately forest oak, whose crashing as it fell to earth was plainly heard, and they lit up the group that stood before the dim altar, with its cold, bright glare.

Loraine's face was very pale, and Ulmont noticed the little hand which he held fluttered slightly. Ulmont Ulvesford's face was calm and implacable as a marble statue. A half hour after they had entered the dim, old church they were pronounced — oh, cruel mockery of fate— pronounced man and wife. Both loyal, innocent, and trusting, fate was dealing them a bitter blow.

As the last words had been spoken by the pastor, which, as they firmly believed, bound them to each other for weal or for woe, Loraine Ulvesford lifted her eyes to meet the cold, calm gaze of Heath Hampton, while behind him, stealing silently away like a grim, foreboding shadow, was the figure of Vatal, the dwarf.

CHAPTER VIII.

A Fatal Journey.

Six weeks abroad had passed since that bright, sunny morning, when Ulmont Ulvesford and Loraine had stood before the altar in the little church. They had visited France, Italy, and sunny Spain, and were now en route to Switzerland.

"Let us visit the Alps last, my husband," Loraine had said. "I want the scenes I love best to linger last in my memory."

Ulmont was loth to leave the blue skies of Spain, where the olive and the myrtle ripen luxuriantly under the golden sunshine.

"Now that I have you with me, Loraine," he said, "I could linger here forever."

Had Loraine remained in Spain, as her husband so strangely urged, the first cloud that crossed the horizon of their wedded life might never have risen.

Together they went to Savoy, that marvelous valley which lies under the bowlders of Mont Blanc.

and blackest eyes, over which his bushy eyebrows meet in a straight line across his face, and he has the whitest of teeth, and, indeed, he scarcely reaches to my shoulder— he is a dwarf."

"It is Vatal, the dwarf," gasped Loraine, sinking back in affright in her seat. "Quick, quick, Katy," she cried, "bar the doors against him, fasten him out; let him not gain even so much as a foothold in the hall; quick; or you may be too late!"

As the maid sped quickly to do her bidding, Loraine hid her face in her white, jeweled hands.

"Vatal's visit seems the forerunner of some impending evil," she muttered. "Is some cruel blow about to fall upon me? I cannot, I will not, believe it. I wonder what could have brought him here, the day before my wedding?"

A dark shadow fell between her and the sunshine, lingering for a moment only on the opposite wall, upon which her eyes were fastened. Loraine knew full well it was the shadow of Vatal, the dwarf.

The fair young heiress little dreamed the enraged dwarf was at that moment shaking his finger back at her as he muttered:

"You have had your fate in your own hands to-day—I might have saved you and yours, but you scorned my words, barred me from your door—proud daughter of a proud race, go blindly on to your fate!"

The next morning broke clear and bright; no bride ever looked out upon a fairer wedding-morning. No cloud was in the blue, smiling heavens; all nature seemed striving its best to put forth its beauty.

Even the little robins poured forth their sweetest melody, as though they were singing their hearts out in their song, as they gazed up at the fair, happy face at the window with their little, bright eyes, while they dashed their wings in the fountain's spray.

"How bright love makes the world," laughed Loraine; "ah! who has so handsome a lover as I?"

She hid her face in a bouquet of fragrant blossoms.

"My darling," she whispered softly to herself, "how I have counted the long days of the year that have passed! Ah, Ulmont, my love, after a few more hours nothing can separate us!"

She wondered why the word came questioningly back upon her heart, Nothing?

Those who saw Loraine Lorrimer that day wondered at her intense happiness, her brilliancy and wit, as she flitted here and there, a merry group of laughing maidens following after, fluttering and chirping like robins in the bright, gay springtime.

Every one was sure Loraine would make the most peerless bride that ever was seen.

At last everything was in perfect readiness; the last touches had been put to the great columns of roses and the fern-bordered, scented fountains, over which a thousand mellow lights twinkled from the grand chandeliers.

The magnificent repast had been laid, and in the spacious parlors the guests were already beginning to assemble.

* * *

As the train bearing Ulmont Ulvesford neared Boston a close carriage, drawn by a pair of dark horses, was moving slowly along the high, narrow road, but a few miles distant from Ulmont's home.

As they reached a narrow, abrupt turn in the road, one of the two occupants of the carriage touched his companion lightly on the shoulder.

"This must be the spot, Vatal," he said slowly, "they will be sure to take the cross cut from here."

The one addressed as Vatal quietly drew rein, replying:

"No better spot could have been selected. We have everything in our favor, if——"

"Hark you, Vatal," interrupted his companion, impatiently, "there must be no ifs and ands in this matter; it must be done!"

"If you did not know me so well, Heath Hampton, I might affect amusement at this needless precaution," replied the dwarf, doggedly. "Did I ever make a blunder out of anything I undertook yet? and you have given me some rather hard cases to manage."

"Hush!" muttered the other; "no more of this— it is your business to forget a transaction as soon as it ends. This case is of greater importance to me than all those other affairs, and one on which your lips must be forever sealed. I am a desperate man, Vatal; you know me well enough for that. Do you know how I should punish treachery?"

Heath Hampton leaned forward, and whispered just one word in the dwarf's ear, which made the other quail as if a terrible blow had been suddenly dealt him.

As Heath Hampton leaned forward, the long, dark cloak which he wore fell back from his shoulders, and through the fast gathering twilight the faultless evening dress he wore and the flashing of the jewels upon his person were easily discernible, and from beneath the heavy slouch hat which concealed a handsome, dark, desperate face, a pair of dark eyes eagerly scanned the road in the distance, which the gathering twilight was fast obscuring.

More than once he consulted his watch with growing impatience, which he held in his white, shapely fingers, as he beat a tattoo with the heel of his polished boot on the soft carriage rug.

"There can be no doubt about Ulvesford's arrival on this train—I was at the station when the rector received the telegram to that effect," he remarked, presently, continuing, as there was no response from the dwarf, "you will have close work of it, Vatal; you will have ten miles of good hard driving to Lorrimer Place—after that."

"I can easily make it," answered Vatal.

Then both relapsed into silence — Vatal mentally wondering which is greater villain of the two— the one who plans a diabolical deed— or the poor wretch who executes his bidding; the one who reclines the while at his ease, or the hunted criminal— fleeing from the clutch of outraged justice.

Heath Hampton exercised a strange influence over the dwarf.

Five years before he had rescued him—an escaped convict— from the minions of the law— not for the sake of mercy, but for his own designs; he recognized in Vatal a willing tool. He had not mistaken the quality of the terrible wretch whom he held in his power.

THE COLORADO COPPER MINING COMPANY

LOCATION OF OUR MINES

THE COLORADO COPPER MINING COMPANY is fortunate in being the possessor of five splendid showing properties in the great Salida copper belt, the principal copper producing region of this portion of the Rockies. All of our claims have been more or less developed and it is our purpose to put the same on a paying basis at once.

Our company owns, clear of incumbrance, the following claims: The Sedalia Extension, the Sedalia Extension No. 2, which property adjoins the great Sedalia mine, which has been a big producer for upwards of seventeen years; the Copper King of Colorado, which in a measure adjoins the above; the Copper Queen of Salida, a very promising property, only a few steps from the depot in Salida. This claim occupies an imposing position on a mountain just north of the city; and last, but by no means least, the Sunshine, located two miles east of Salida at Cleora Station, on the main trunk line of the great Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, also on the Arkansas river, which in length is one of America's greatest streams.

From Father to Son.

My Dear Son,—Your letter received, and I was indeed pleased to hear from you so soon. I won't waste time with Sarah and the chicks, but will unburden my mind fully. In my last I told you why I turned my coat, and became a Grit. You know your poor old father is open to conviction, especially when it is accompanied by substantial evidence of material prosperity in the shape of duckets. This may not be just in line with strict political morality, but after all, is it not a matter of dollars and cents all round? Do not both political parties promise us unbounded prosperity, which simply means filthy lucre? Do the political bosses not reach for all they can get, and eternally cry for more? By the way, I must tell you that I was offered $100 for a miserable brindle calf. I think it was an agent of the Tory crowd, for the calf ain't worth over $10. I am holding it at $150, however.

But this is not what I want to talk about. You know in Peterborough we have an awful mix-up. The leading Tories all vote Grit at the Stratton election, and the debt is repaid by the leading Grits voting Tory when Kendry is in the field. It is even said that the two political newspapers are in the swim, and help each other to write their political articles. They split up the election printing, the Grit paper doing a portion of the Tory candidate's printing, and the Tory paper doing work for the Grit candidate. This makes me think that it is a beastly conspiracy all round, and I tell you now, my son, that if there was a third party to go to, I would be there.

I will not weary you with too long a letter this time, but will write you again in a few days. Remember, if your poor old turned Grit, it was because there was money in it. Yours,

FARMER.

Mr Nelson's Injuries.

Mr. W. F. Nelson, who was severely injured at the Norwood Fair is, we are happy to say, doing nicely. No bones were broken, the chief injuries received being on the legs. It appears that he entered his trotter in the 2.30 open race and rode a pneumatic-tired sulky. Mr. Jas. Simhirst, Otonabee, on a road sulky, had the pole, while Mr. Nelson was second. during the last lap of the final heat, and the two sulkies in some manner came in contact with each other. Mr. Nelson was thrown to the ground, while his horse, running wildly from the track, dragged him over very rocky ground. Spectators say he would doubtless have sustained fatal injury had not Mr. Geo. W. Fitzgerald, speeding his own horse, came up with the runaway and succeeded in bringing it to a standstill.

FEEDS BRAIN WORKERS

A Food Made Especially for Them

A literary woman, Mrs. J. C. Roberts, 193 Holmes St., Dallas, Tex., has discovered that a properly selected brain food is of great benefit to any brain worker. She says. "My duties as journalist require me to write all day, particularly in the winter, but heretofore, after luncheon, no matter how light I made it, I found myself incapacitated for work for an hour or two, for my brain would not respond to the demand.

"I saw an advertisement of Grape-Nut for brain workers and determined to give it a trial. I am charmed with the result, and am now in perfect health. I use Grape-Nuts for luncheon, and never suffer any inconvenience whatever, returning to my work at once, feeling as bright as when I left it. I know from experience that this preparation is invaluable for brain workers, who are apt to find that that period of time given up to digestion is one almost total eclipse of mental power."

In this day and age of concentrated effort, it is wise for brain workers to use a food especially adapted for rebuilding the brain and nerve centers. Grape-Nuts food was invented by an expert especially for that purpose. Knowledge of the food elements contained in the grains and how to prepare these elements so as to be quickly absorbed by the body, and used directly to replenish the lost phosphate of potash (which is exhausted by mental work) have brought about the result. The proof can be had by any brain worker who will take the trouble to use Grape-Nuts for a few days.

Address to the Electors

To the Free and Independent Electors of West Peterborough—

Gentlemen. —Having accepted the unanimous nomination of the Liberals of this Riding, as a candidate for its representation in the House of Commons I hereby respectfully solicit your support in securing my return at the coming general elections.

The grounds upon which I base my appeal are not so much now chiefly by any means, my personal fitness for the position of your representation though as a citizen of Peterborough and interested in its progress in common with that of the country, I can and do promise, if elected, an intelligent support of such a public policy and such measures as will best conduce to the promotion of all the interests of Canada, the developement of her great resources and the general betterment of the civil moral and material condition of the public; and my best abilities and most assiduous attention shall be devoted to the faithful discharge of my representative duties.

The strongest ground, however, of my appeal consists in the fact that I am a firm supporter of the Liberal Government led by Sir Wilfred Laurier, which is entitled to the renewed confidence of the people, both on the ground of its policy and the splendid record established by the application of that policy. The Liberal party appealed to the country in 1896 upon a clearly defined policy and the promised results followed.

The Liberal party promised a reduction of a high tariff that hampered our industrial and agricultural interests and was hostile to the Mother Country.

The tariff was materially reduced and outwise improved and in such a way as to help instead of hinder the manufacturer and farmer, with the consequence that never before in the history of the country hav eour industries or our farmers enjoyed such great prosperity, our mechanics and working men such constant employment and high wages, nor our commerical and all other interests so flourished.

Our domestic and foreign trade have also greatly increased. The loyal gift of a trade preferance, represented by a tariff reduction on British goods of 33 1-3 per cent., and our despatch of the Canadian Contingent, have resulted in a kindlier feeling towards Canada and greatly increased trade with the Mother Country.

With a largely reduced rate of tariff, our revenue has greatly expanded so that the Government was warranted in practicing true economy (reducing our postal rate one third, giving Imperial penny postage,) and premitting of the completion of great public works, deepening our canals, so long trifled with, pushing the work on the Trent Valley Canal which is now urged and will be urged to completion by the Liberal Government, and the application of a vigorous policy of general development and improvement of our transportation facilities, resulting and to result in easier access to the British market and bette rprices for all our products.

I cannot obviously here, enter into details of how, in other ways the Liberal Government has implemented its promises and applied its policy, but with these and other public questions. I shall have an opportunity during the campaign of more fully dealing

As a supporter of such a Government I can appeal with confidence for the support of the Electors of West Peterborough, knowing that by helping to give, as you will do, through my election, a renewal of the trust the Liberal Government has discharged with such evident and gratifying results, they will be conferring a great and lasting good upon this riding, the country at large, and securing a continuation of the great blessings of prosperity and good government we now enjoy.

Again soliciting your support, your votes, and influence, in this contest,

I have the honor to be,
gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
J. H. McCLELLAN

Lindsay Hospital.

Dear Sir,—A former citizen of Lindsay, Mr. James Ross, of Montreal, has offered to build and equip an hospital for Lindsay, providing the county will endow it. To help in this good work a committee of ladies have published a special edition of the Lindsay "Watchman Warder."

The issue we think is a very good and interesting one, and has found a very ready sale at 10c. per copy. It is non-political and undenominational.

We are sending them to all towns and villages in the county and to some half dozen towns outside. We would like to include Peterboro.

Our issue was 5,000 and 300 of these we are sending to Mrs. Frank Matthews who has very kindly consented to accept them and do her best to dispose of them.

We feel that she will not be able to do so without the help of the press, hence my letter.

Are we asking too much when we ask that you will through your valuable columns acquaint the public with the scheme, giving your opinion of the edition (which I will send with this letter) which will I feel confident give them a desire to possess a copy for themselves!

They will (through Mrs. Matthews) be for sale at your book stores.

Trusting that this may meet with your favor, I remain, very sincerely yours,

E. L. STEWART,
Pres. Ladies' Com.

The Winter Band Concerts.

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—The Times might suggest that in view of the busy season for the business men of this town being now on, and the difficulty in getting good men to devote the necessary time to getting up the proposed complimentary concert, that it be abandoned for the present, and a regular programme of weekly or semi-monthly concerts be arranged for the fall and winter months, at which a small admission fee—say ten cents for adults and five cents for children, be made. All citizens will unite and make these concerts a success.

The general public, I know, would hail with delight such opportunities to hear good music and at the same time support a worthy institution.

I hope Mr. Fousette, who has always taken such interest in our band, and who is the leading spirit in the proposed complimentary concert, will fall in with this idea. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am,

MERCHANT.

"Better the Feet Slip Than the Tongue."

Slips of any kind are to be deplored, but there is one slip Nature never forgives. It is the carelessness of ignoring the signal that the body is in danger of wreck. It may be that the kidneys or the stomach or the head gives the warning sign. But remember, the blood feeds every organ of the body.

Make no slip, but first tone up the system through the blood, and health will surely follow. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best preparation man has devised to make pure, life-giving blood. It never disappoints.

Swellings—"I had a swelling on my chest. It caused me great pain and many sleepless nights. Physicians advised an operation but my daughter urged that I take Hood's Sarsaparilla instead. I did so and after using six bottles, the swelling went away and I have not had any more pains." Mrs. J. W. Crosswhite, 432 Front St., Belleville, Ont.

Erysipelas—"I would strongly urge the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla for erysipelas or any scrofulous disease. I have received great benefit from Hood's Sarsaparilla for the former complaint. It is an excellent blood purifier." Mrs. H. D. Wise, Church Street, Cornwallis, Nova Scotia.

ATTACK of ROYAL CANADIANS at Paardeberg

The present is a time when war pictures are in greater demand than ever. The conduct of the British soldiers on the battlefield has won the plaudits of admiring nations. We have at great expense published four large, beautiful pictures size 20x24, on heavy, superfine calendered paper. A picture that will commend itself and send a thrill to the heart of every true Canadian is the one called Attack of Royal Canadians at Paardeberg, there are literally hundreds of figures on this picture, the mountains or kopjes stretching out into the distance are swarming with men, while here and there a prostrate figure speaks only too well of the Boer rifleman. It was on this battlefield the gallant Major Arnold met death unflinchingly. Indeed, it is only too true that many of those gallant hearts that beat so high when the cheering thousands bade them Godspeed as they sailed from Canada's shores now lie still forever in lonely graves on the other side of the world under African skies. To every Canadian heart, to every Canadian home, the deeds of their brave soldier boys speak with an irresistible thrill of patriotism and pride. Gordon Highlanders at the Battle of Belmont, Charging the Boer Guns at Elandslaagte and the Charge of Gen. French's Cavalry on the Retreating Gen. Cronje's Army. These are all stirring pictures and cannot fail to commend themselves to anyone who will examine them. They are RED HOT SELLERS! Agents coin money. Big profits. Enormous success. One agent sold 63 in one day. Sample and terms 25 cts (none free); four for 50 cts; $1.75 per dozen; 25 for $3.25; 50 for $6.00; 100 for $11.00 Write to day for a dozen and make money. CANADA BUSINESS COLLEGE
Chatham, Ont.

Is doing more for its pupils than any other business school in Canada, or perhaps, than any other in the continent. How can we do this? First.

First: By giving them a practical, not a theoretical, preparation for business life.

Second: The business public has learned that there is this vast difference between the graduates of this school and those of other colleges, hence the strong demand for our graduates, which has enabled 220 to be placed in good positions between Sept., '99, and July, '00 a period of ten months.

The good work still goes on, and 73 have been placed between July 1st and Sept. 1st of this year.

MINERS STILL IDLE DESPITE INCREASE

Notice Offering Ten Per Cent. More in Lackawana and Wyoming Valleys.

IT CANNOT LAST MORE THAN A WEEK LONGER

Operators Express the Opinion That the Strike Will be Over in This Time—No Further Concessions.

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 6.—In compliance with the agreement of the individual coal operators association covering the Lackawana and Wyoming Valleys to give an increase in wages to their striking mine employees, the following notice, signed by each operator in the association, and posted for himself at the mines controlled by him, was issued this morning,—

"This company makes the following announcement to its mine employees,—

"It will adjust its rate of wages so as to pay to its mine employees on and after October 1 and until further notice a net increase of ten per cent. on the wages heretofore received.

"Note.—It is understood in the foregoing that the powder will be sold to miners for $1.50 per keg, and that the difference between this rate and the old rate of $2.75 shall be taken into account in figuring the net advance of the price noted above for this class of work."

This is identical in form with the notice posted in the Hazelton region. This notice was put up at no less than sixty mine openings during the morning, but nobody went to work. Inquiry at the offices of several of the operators revealed the belief that the strike could not continue much longer, probably not over another week, as by that time the miners and laborers would thoroughly understand the situation, and realize just what the increase means. It was also learned that the rate applied to every condition of earnings that held before the strike was declared, and this meant that the allowances for "dead" work and hard places would stand.

It is figured out that the only inequalities which may arise will be the case where one miner is able to get out more coal with a keg of powder than another, but the latter's allowance will adjust even this condition.

NO FURTHER CONCESSIONS.

New York, Oct. 6.—The Evening Post says,—"President J. Rogers Maxwell, of the Jersey Central, and the president of another coal-carrying railway who declined to be quoted for publication, made the definite announcement to-day that no further concessions would be granted to the striking miners, and that if they did not accept the 10 per cent. offer the strike would be fought out. It is supposed that this decision was reached at a joint meeting of coal railway presidents and operators which was held in this city last evening."

ICE FOR MARK HANNA.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—Senator Marcus A. Hanna was the target for a ten-pound chunk of ice last night at the 21st ward Republican meeting. The missle was dropped through an apperture in the tent directly over the speakers' stand. It did not miss Senator Hanna's head over two or three inches, and had it struck him would have knocked him down and probably fractured his skull. The police who surrounded the speakers' stand, were astounded for a moment, and then made a rush for the street. Senator Hanna retained his composure, remarking to those about him that the ice trust was in evidence in a new role.

The police found the place where the ice had been placed on the sidewalk, but could get no trace of the person who had thrown it. Senator Hanna left the tent escorted and protected by a double row of police.

As he rolled away in his carriage there were cries of "How would you like to be the ice man, Mark?"

WEATHER NOTES.

Probs—To-day, cooler.

A storm now developing in the western States promises to cause a gale over the Lake Region during the day and consequently mariners are advised to take precautions. The weather is cold and showery in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, and a marked change will soon be experienced in Ontario. The temperature has been as low as four degrees at Calgary.

SHOT BY ASSASSIN.

Unknown Enemy of Adam Goodling Kills Him and Escapes.

Mifflintown, Pa., Oct. 6.—While sitting in an open window Tuesday night at his home at Oriental, Juniata county, Adam Goodling was shot through the mouth by an unknown assassin and instantly killed.

On Sunday Mr. Goodling was heard to remark that he had but two enemies in the world, of one of whom he was terribly in fear. The entire community thereabouts has been thrown into a state of excitement and are requesting the services of an experienced detective to ferret out the assassin.

HIS CHERISHED PLAN.

Chamberlain's Imperial Zollverin May be Put in Force.

London, Oct. 6.—A political associate of Mr. Chamberlain tells me that the Colonial Secretary hopes to use the overwhelming personal triumph gained at the polls to again endeavor to solve the Imperial zollverin project in co-operation with Canada and Australia, and to complete the commercial unity of the Empire.

It would, Mr. Chamberlain believes, be the crowning achievement of his career. The Times says the question with its important international bearings will likely occupy the attention of the new Imperial Parliament.

FIGHT WITH ASHANTIS.

British Repulsed, But Returned and Routed the Natives.

London, Oct. 6.—A despatch to the Morning Post from Kumassi reports that heavy fighting took place last Sunday between Colonel Willcocks' column and the Ashantis at Abu-Asu.

"After heavy firing," says the despatch, "The British column made a determined attempt to charge the Ashanti positions but was obliged to retire and to resume the rifle duel, while awaiting reinforcements. Eventually after hard work Colonel Willcocks captured the positions and occupied the village of Isansu without opposition. Subsequently the British carried three other villages at the point of the bayonet and burned them. Seventy Ashantis were killed.

"The British losses were Major Melliss and Captain Luard severely wounded, three officers slightly wounded, three men killed and 28 others were wounded."

"A flying column of 800 men with two guns was sent Monday in pursuit of the enemy."

THE FIGHT IN TORONTO.

Both Parties Will Nominate Their Candidates Within the Next Fortnight.

Toronto, Oct. 6.—Conservative candidates in West Toronto, Centre Toronto, and East Toronto will be selected at conventions to be held on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, 15th, 16th and 17th of October. The West Toronto convention will be held on Monday, 15th; Mr. E. F. Clarke, M. P., and Mr. E. B. Osler, M.P., will undoubtedly be the unanimous choice of the convention. Mr. Osler will be back from British Columbia in time for the convention.

The Centre Toronto and East Toronto conventions will be held on the two following days. There is still some doubt as to who will be the Conservative candidates in these two constituencies.

In East Toronto, Mr. John Ross Robertson, M.P., may be induced to reconsider his decision to retire. Failing him, Mr. A. E. Kemp is probably the next choice for the nomination.

On the Liberal side the names of ex-Ald. Wm. Burns and Dr. James Spence are mentioned as probable candidates in West Toronto. In Centre Toronto the prospective candidates are Mr. L. V. McBrady and Mr. Hartley Dewart, County Crown Attorney.

CHINESD FLEETS READY FOR ACTION

RUSSIANS TROOPS REPULSED

They Attack 14,000 Rebels and are Forced to Retire.

Tien Tsin, Saturday, Oct. 6. Li Hung Chang, whose visit to Pekin apparently had been postponed indefinitely, left this morning for the Chinese capital. The five Belgian engineers and fifteen missionaries who had been kept prisoners for many weeks at Pao Ting Fu, but were recently released under orders from Li Hung Chang, who directed that they have safe escort to Pekin, refused to start, fearing treachery on the part of the Chinese escort.

London, Oct. 7 The Standard has the following from Tien Tsin, dated Friday, Oct. 5—A German force came in collision with 8,000 Chinese described as Boxers a few miles south of Tien Tsin this morning. The Germans were checked and compelled to retire on Tien Tsin. There is reason to believe that the Chinese were not Boxers but were Li Hung Chang's veterans who had been ordered to wait near here in view of the possibility that the foreigners would bar his progress.

London, Oct. 6.—The Daily Chronicle publishes the following statement by its Washington correspondent—

"The United States Government has proposed to the powers to insist that Prince Tuan be beheaded, that the Emperor be induced to return to Pekin to form a Government of progressives, under the support of European bayonets and that the Empress Dowager be deposed.

The Daily Chronicle admits that it finds considerable difficulty in believing this report.

ABANDONDED WEST RIVER TRADE.

New York, Oct. 6.—Owing to restrictive regulations and unfavorable treatment, says a Herald despatch from Hong Kong, British shipping companies have abandoned the West River trade and sold their vessels for the Yang Tse, leaving foreigners in the river ports dependent on Chinese launches in the event of a rising. Two roughly constructed beach boats, which were landing stores at Kong, have received hurried orders to proceed to Canton.

TO SUCCEED TUAN.

Shanghai, Oct. 4.—It is learned here that the Imperial offices of which Prince Tuan was recently deprived have been given to two Manchus—Kwang Chong and Shan Lam. The offices formerly held by Prince Chwang, who was recently degraded by order of the court, are now filled by Swai Ta Pu and Ko Lu. The tendency of recent appointments has been to promote liberal men, replacing anti-foreigners and Conservatives.

TRADE RESUMED IN PEKIN.

Pekin, Oct. 1, via Tien Tsin, Oct. 4, and Shanghai, Oct. 5.—A contingent of 6,000 Germans is expected to arrive here from Tien Tsin. It is reported that Field Marshal Count Von Waldersee will remain at Tien Tsin pending the completion of the railroad, which the Germans are to assist in repairing.

General Chaffee is to return here on Wednesday to participate in the review of the allied troops.

The rehabilitation of the city is progressing best in the district governed by the Americans. The marshals report that the houses in the American section are again fully occupied, the shops are doing a fine business, and many people are immigrating from the other districts.

RUSSIANS REPULSED.

Moscow, Oct. 6.—Col. Artamonoff, on a reconnoitering expedition, discovered in a strong position south of Showang-Chung Pu a body of 14,000 rebels with 30 guns. The Russians advanced under a strong rifle fire, but had to retire. An attack on the place has been decided upon.

General Orloff has defeated several bodies of rebels along the Hunchum road, and has occupied three small towns.

The Chinese squadron is rapidly being placed on a war footing. Twenty vessels, including 13 battleships, are at Fu-Chow, and 22 torpedo gunboats and 14 supply boats and coast defenders are at Canton.

The Chinese Legation confirms the report of Prince Tuan's disgrace, and announces that he will shortly be tried.

GREAT MARCHING BY THE CANADIANS

Not a Man Fell Out, Despite two Weeks of Continuous Movement.

REGIMENTAL RECORDS HAVE BEEN ALL LOST

General Hart Congratulates the Battalion on the Good Work it has Done and on the Conduct of the Men

New York, Oct. 7. Lord Strathcona, the Lord High Commissioner of the Dominion of Canada, arrived on the S.S. Etruria to-day.

Cape Town, Oct. 7. The City of London Volunteers sailed for England to-day, their departure being attended by a scene of tremendous enthusiasm. Sir Alfrid Milner, in the course of an address thanking them for their services to the Empire, told them that a still greater reception awaited them at home.

Lydenburg, Tuesday, Oct. 2. Gen. Buller's force has been pursuing the Boers through Pilgrim's Rest and and Krugersport. He is now near Brigstadt, and is still marching northward. The Boers nowhere have made a stand.

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—Four reports have been received from South Africa by mail. Col. Otter's report for the week ending August 25th shows the parade state—Present in South Africa, 805; effective, 424; command, 37; convalescent, 75; sick at rest camps and line of communication, 266. A statement is given showing the number of men by companies who completed the march with the western coluumn, Aug 2nd to 23rd; Staff, 5; A. Company, 56; B. Company, 46; C. Company, 60; D. Company, 38; E. Company, 59; F. Company, 40; H. Company, 60; G. Company being on duty with the armored train; total, 267.

The diary of Col. Otter takes the regiment from Tootefontein, Aug. 18, to Krugersdorp by the 22nd, from which place they took train to Pretoria, leaving General Hart's Brigade. At Pretoria orders were given to occupy Silverton and Eastefabrieken, two stations on the Delagoa Bay railway, six and twelve miles respectively from Pretoria. Major Pelletier took B F and H companies to Silverton, and Col. Otter, A, B C and D to the other station, Col. Buchan being still in command of the convalescent camp at Elandsfontein, and G company being on the armored train between Pretoria and Kroonstad.

GREAT MARCHING.

Col. Otter points out that the battalion had just completed 1,000 miles of straight marching since its arrival, and that during the last two weeks not a man had fallen out, although the average was seventeen miles a day. "General Hart on our leaving Krugersdorp," writes Col. Otter, "took occasion to express his gratification with the conduct of the battalion, and wished it very good fortune. This expression from an officer of General Hart's stamp I consider a great compliment. Capt. MacDonnell had just rejoined after being a prisoner with the Boers for about ten weeks.

JAS. KENDRY IS THE CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATE

His Nomination at the Convention on Saturday Was Perfectly Unanimous

MANY TOWNSHIP DELEGATES WERE PRESENT

An Atmosphere of Sublime Confidence Permeated the Meeting—Speeches by Mr. Garvin, Mr. Hampden Burnham and the Candidate.

West Peterborough Conservatives met in convention at the Opera House Saturday afternoon, when a large gathering of the party's delegates and adherents from all parts of the riding were present. The meeting was marked by its perfect unanimity in its choice of a candidate, and its appreciation of the satisfactory manner in which the riding had been represented at Ottawa the past four years by its present sitting member. There was but one name proposed, a standing vote taken, and with three rousing cheers Jas. Kendry, M.P. was declared duly elected to contest West Peterborough with Mr. McClellan, the Reform candidate.

An atmosphere of sublime confidence permeated the whole meeting; the name of "McClellan" was synonymous for "political defeat;" the Laurier Government was estimated as a thing of the past, a stealthy purloiner of Conservative methods and policy, upon which the revenge of an outraged electorate is bound to descend with a mighty thud on the day when the Sons of Canada are given an opportunity to give vent to their pent up feelings of discontent and disgust at the polls. Sir Richard Cartwright was dubbed as a "putter-up and knocker-down of men of straw," one in whom his own party had no confidence, owing to his being a pronounced protectionist, while J. R. Stratton was credited with being the king of prevaricators in the matter of dollars and cents, one to whom a misrepresentation to the tune of $40,000,000 in the increase of Canadian exports is but a trifle, to be thrown with unblushing persistency at the heads of an intelligent audience from a Grit platform.

At 3.30 o'clock, T. Evans Bradburn was voted into the chair, and amongst others who took seats on the platform were, Messrs. Harry LeBrun, Harry Phelan, Major Miller, Jos. Jones, G. W. Fitzgerald, Paul Costello, John Green, J. W. Garvin, Wm. Cluxton, W. H. Moore, L. M. Hayes and Hampden Burnham; while seated on the floor of the house were R. M. Dennistoun, A. P. Poussette, Jos. Forster, Warden of the County Council; Geo. Bennett and a large number of West Peterborough's most influential representatives.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

T. E. Bradburn was re-elected President, H. LeBrun, first vice-president for town; Major Miller, second vice-president for town; John Green, third vice-president for town; G. W. Fitzgerald, vice-president for Smith; Mr. O'Connor, vice-president for Ennismore; Robert Fisher, vice-president for South Monaghan; Geo. Bennett, vice-president for North Monaghan; F. D. Mackay, editor of the Review, was elected secretary-treasurer, with Chas. Bradburn as his assistant.

TWO RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions expressive of gratitude to, and confidence in, the present member, Mr. Jas. Kendry, and supreme reliance in the Conservative leaders and their policy were adopted unanimously—

Moved by Hampden Burnham, seconded by H. LeBrun, and resolved,—That the Liberal Conservative Association of West Peterborough here assembled, desire to record their admiration of the continued vigour their leader Sir Charles Tupper, has shown in the conduct of the political campaign just opened, and their cordial approval of the great measures for the advancement and welfare of the Country which he is so powerfully and eloquently advocating and which they confidently believe will bear good fruit and at the polls result in driving from power a weak, profligate and corrupt Government which has been in control of public affairs for the past four years.

The Liberal Conservative Association of West Peterborough rejoices in the prosperity that in common with other countries the world over, Canada is enjoying a prosperity that, instead of being attributable in any measure to the Liberal rule of the past four years, comes to Canada in such good measure because of the splendid national development that has been possible in this Dominion for so many years under the National Policy of a Liberal Conservative Government, a development which placed Canada in a position commercially and industrially to take advantage of a wave of prosperity and trade expansion when it came.

We desire, also, to express our admiration and gratitude to those noble sons of the Dominion who have so courageously represented this Colony in the war in South Africa, now happily nearing a successful issue for the cause of the Empire. The part that these heroic Canadians have taken in this war has accomplished much for the Dominion in the Motherland, and will result in drawing closer those ties which unite the Mother and her colonies, ties which the Liberal Conservative party and its leaders have striven and will always strive to preserve and strengthen.

And the Liberal Conservatives of West Peterborough believe that Canadian interests are safer in the hands of the men who, in the face of the opposition of members of the present administration, inaugurated our great national systems of tariff, railways, waterways, etc., laid Canada's national foundations broad and deep, and who can be entrusted with the task of working out a truly great national policy with greater safety than can the men who repudiated principles and policy and disregarded promises and pledges when they gained office, and have made a four years' record of extravagance, mismanagement and scandal.

Moved by George Fitzgerald, seconded by Paul Costello, and resolved,—That, whereas we are now on the eve of the dissolution of the present Parliament, the West Peterborough Liberal Conservatives in convention assembled, desire to place on record their appreciation of the faithful services rendered this riding by its representative in the Dominion House of Commons, James Kendry, Esquire, during the Parliamentary term now about to close; always approachable and ever alert to the interests of the constituents, he has been a faithful representative of the riding at Ottawa, where, though this was his first term, he has made himself known and felt, having gained not only the esteem of all members of the House, irrespective of party, but having won for himself a position among the men whose opinion is respected and given weight in the Councils of the people; among his constituents we feel safe in saying he has known no party, always as ready to listen to and lend himself to the assistance of a political opponent as a political friend; thereby proving himself a gentleman of sufficient breadth of view to be an ideal representative; as Mayor of the Town of Peterborough for several years, as an old citizen with large interests in the riding and as the head of one of Canada's large industrial concerns he was thoroughly in touch with all classes of the community, and as their representative in Parliament has ever sought to advance their interests by supporting and advocating those measures which would best promote the prosperity and well-being of the people as a whole; all the personal sacrifices, which, as a busy man he was called upon to make, were ungrudgingly made, and he has never neglected the trust he received from the West Riding of Peterborough; we therefore desire to express our appreciation of his services, our confidence in him and our approval of his course as our representative.

HAMPDEN BURNHAM.

in presenting his resolution gave a very clever speech, in the course of which he asked where the country would have been if the Liberals had inaugurated either their commercial union, unrestricted reciprocity or free trade policies. They did not appear to have much faith themselves in any of their several policies advocated on the public platform and on the floor of the House. Even their old war knight of blue ruin, Sir Richard Cartwright, who claimed that prosperity could not possibly come to Canada until the adoption of free trade, now admitted the country's present trade expansion—but it is not due to free trade by any means. Then, Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself, hitherto a pronounced free trader, publicly stated the other day that it would be utterly impossible to establish free trade for fifty years to come. So these gentlemen do not really believe in what they themselves advocate. The speaker then went on to show that the closer union with the Mother Country existing to-day is due to the Conservatives having in past years paved the way to that end, while the present prosperous condition of Canada has come in common with a similar condition in other countries the world over, and the National Policy of the Conservatives placed Canada in a position commercially and industrially to take advantage of a wave of prosperity and trade expansion when it came. In conclusion, he characterized the Government's scheme for a bridge at Quebec as a piece of extravagance, and introduced for the purpose of buying votes, and vigorously condemned them for their neglect to improve the waterway from Montreal to the sea. Still, he said, the Liberals have some good qualities, one of which is, that though they seem utterly incapable of introducing useful and profitable measures of their own, they are very good at stealing them from their opponents. Mr. Burnham resumed his seat amid prolonged applause.

J. W. GARVIN

here took the platform, and gave a very able address, in the course of which he remarked that he had never known a greater unanimity in the Conservative ranks of West Peterborough than is apparent to-day, and briefly alluded to the late Reform meeting, at which, he said, Sir Richard Cartwright and Hon. J. R. Stratton had amused themselves by putting up men of straw and knocking them down again. He did not seem to have a very high opinion of Mr. McClellan as a candidate for Parliamentary honors, and wondered if he (McClellan) were not a man of straw himself. He called Sir Richard an out-and-out Protectionist; who had not sufficient manliness to stand by his own convictions for fear of his colleagues; and which colleagues exhibited a lack of confidence in their knight by not giving him the portfolio of finance on their acquiring the reigns of government four years ago. The speaker also went after Hon. J. R. Stratton, hot-foot about his last speech in the Opera House, and comparing the hon. gentleman's statement of the increase of exports with the blue book's reports, claimed him to have made a small mistake (wilfully or otherwise) of somewhere about $40,000,000 in his figures in the Government's favor. In conclusion, he corrected Sir Richard in his reference to the papers calling Hugh John Macdonald "the man who speaks the truth;" what the papers really say of him he argued is that he is "the man who keeps his word," meaning thereby that he is a man who keeps his word with the electors by redeeming pledges made to them.

THE CANDIDATE.

On motion of J. W. Garvin, seconded by Joseph Jones, Mr. Jas. Kendry was unanimously nominated, by a standing vote, to be the party's candidate.

MR. KENDRY EXPLAINS

Why the Auburn Mills are Running Night and Day

The candidate was received with wild enthusiasm. It had not been his intention to run again for the Dominion House, he said, but after the unanimity of the vote and the flattering resolutions passed, he would accept the nomination, firm in his conviction of having many warm friends in West Peterborough who would return him by a handsome majority. He was sure of a stronger support in Ennismore, Smith and the two Monaghans than at the last election, and thought he was more entitled to the seat than a comparative stranger, having identified himself with some of Peterborough's biggest industries and in many ways assisted in building up the town. "In the House," he continued, "I have always supported all good measures that came along, irrespective of party. During the last eighteen years the Liberals have had five policies—Revenue Tariff, Commercial Union, Unrestricted Reciprocity, Free Trade, and to-day NO POLICY AT ALL—but they have, during their term of office, been really working under the old National Policy of the Conservatives. It is true they have put some commodities on the 'free list,' articles that scarcely ever come into the country, such as wooden legs." (Laughter.)

The speaker then turned his attention to the accusation of Hon. J. R. Stratton, that while he (Kendry) had stated on the floor of the House that should the Liberal's policy be put in force every woolen mill in the country would be closed down, when as a matter of fact the Auburn Mills have been working night and day under that policy. This is not true, he thundered, and I reiterate here what I previously asserted. The Government did not put in force their promised policy; they have not carried out one of their pledges they gave four years ago, and have to-day nothing but the good old N.P. to work on. The Auburn Mills, it is true, have been running night and day the last three or four years, but why is it—the Government gave a preference to English woolen goods, and we had to invest some $20,000 in introducing a new business, which we are obliged to run at night in order to keep the woolen business going. By their preference they give 33 1-3 per cent. off to men in England with whom we have to compete,—to mills enjoying the cheapest of labor—and we have never had to work harder in our lives to make less money, the shareholders not having received one cent in dividends during that time. That preference has reduced wages; we cannot afford to pay as much as before and hold our own; and even now we expend in our mills $2 to every $1 paid in an English concern of the same size. The speaker then went on to show that in the States a strong protective tariff has secured for that country a greater prosperity the last four years than in ten years previously, in consequence of which they pay higher wages than we can, and have taken from us all the skilled labor from our border towns; and should the elections be deferred another six months the Liberals will be the means of closing down half the mills in Canada. He next explained that the new business embarked in at Auburn was the manufacture of Beaver cloth, in which they had been so phenomenally successful as to drive out of this market nearly every mill in England. In conclusion, the candidate alluded in glowing terms to our Canadian contingents for South Africa, and while giving the Government their full share of credit in the matter, he accused some members of not having exerted themselves as consistent with that loyalty and patriotism naturally looked for from the greatest colony in the Empire. He felt confident of being supported by many Reformers throughout the riding, and awaited the results of the campaign with perfect confidence in being returned by a larger majority than ever given any candidate in this riding.

The convention closed with three cheers for the Queen and the candidate, Jas. Kendry, M.P.

THE TWO POLITICAL PARTIES.

An estimate of the strength of parties in the House of Commons at the close of the late season, vacancies being counted according to their former representation, shows as follows—

	Con.	Lib.
Ontario	42	52
Quebec	14	51
New Brunswick	9	6
Nova Scotia	5	12
P. E. Island	2	3
N. W. Territories	1	3
British Columbia	2	4
Manitoba	2	5
	77	136

The present Liberal majority is thus 59. To convert it into a Conservative majority will require a change of at least thirty seats, or 15 per cent. of all the seats. That looks like a pretty big change, but the Conservatives accomplished a greater task than that in 1878, when they changed a Liberal majority of 68, a total turn over of 64 seats.

WORSE THAN THE DISEASE.

Quite an extensive belief has long prevailed that politics in the United States and Canada have taken on some of the characteristics of a disease. In fact that it was not only this, but that the disease was infectious and epidemic.

As yet, however, the doctors have not classified it in a scientific way, although there is a prospect that its official recognition may shortly take place. A patriotic resident of Yonkers, N.Y., who long held the position of Alderman there and who was lately defeated for re-election, is likely to bring about this change in the medical text-books.

It seems his defeat has so worked upon his nerves that he has been compelled to take to his bed and his physician says there is no hope of a complete cure for him unless he gets another office. Thus along with having to recognise the fact that a new ailment has been discovered, the case is further complicated by the troubles being of that serious kind where the remedy may be worse than the disease.

TWO NATIONS.

The sending by Lord Roberts of a congratulatory despatch to the King of Portugal on the occasion of the latter's birthday, and the review at Komatipoort in honor of the same event, draws attention to the long friendship that has existed between Portugal and Britain, a friendship that has remained for no apparent reason, for hundreds of years. It does not appear on the surface as if there was anything much in such an alliance for England. Portugal is a no-account power, unable to pay her own way, while Great Britain is a mighty empire, whose flag is supreme on land and sea, and the friendship between the two countries, therefore, seems somewhat incongruous, and but ill that Great Britain's friendship is of the kind that the boa constrictor feels towards with the European nation for the heifer. Portugal would scarcely make one decent mouthful for the British lion, but instead of taking that mouthful, Britain has more than once landed troops to rescue Portugal from the invader, notably toward the close of the Seven Years' War, when France and Spain endeavored to force the little kingdom into an alliance against England, and in the Napoleonic wars at a latter stage of the world's history.

Portugal does not seem to have gone out of her way to help England during the recent South African unpleasantness, though she allowed Carrington's troops to pass through her territory, but she may for all that have rendered other services which, while not particularly conspicuous, may have been none the less valuable.

Anyway, England has long been Portugal's friend, and the Portuguese lamb has been lying down for some centuries with the British lion without suffering the fate that usually fails to lambkins who take such chances.

HISTORICAL NOTES.

Diplomacy is a sharp game, but the United States in withdrawing its troops from China first, is apt to come out ahead.

* * *

It would appear the Phillipine war is all over, at least in the sense of covering all the islands in the group.

The full name of the Empress Dowager of China is Tszchi Toanyu Kangi Chaoyu Cheng Shoking Chonkion Chungsik. But then, in the days of their sweet intimacy Li Hung Chang possibly dodged the issue by calling her "pet."

LO AND HIS BUFFALO HORNS.

How the Red Man Utilizes a Product of the Slaughter House.

The Montana Indian is something of a schemer himself. He comes to town and sometimes walks all over the place without saying a word to any one. Sometimes he brings in a few sets of polished mounted cow's horns, which he sells for a dollar or two a set. He never frequents saloons. He looks into clothing store windows, but never bucks the slot machines in cigar stores. He frowns as he passes a restaurant, but smiles while walking through the sweetscented alleys back of cheap boarding houses.

In a horse trade he takes the prize, if there's one to be taken, for he was never known to get the worst of such a bargain. The reason of this, however, may lie in the fact that he begins the negotiations with nothing to lose and everything to win. However, he has the reputation of a schemer.

Where his schemes shine brightest is in the scale of polished "buffalo" horns. He lives out near one of the slaughter houses on the south side, and there he secures his "buffalo" horns, all sizes, curves and consistencies. He picks out a set of ox horns of symmetrical proportions, scrapes the scales off and boils the horns in a solution of glycerine, wood ashes and water. This treatment softens the horns, so that a case-knife will easily remove all the exterior accumulation. Then fine sandpaper is used to give the first polish, followed by a thorough rubbing with a flannel cloth slightly saturated with oil. A varnish or shellac is then applied, and the horns are in condition for mounting. Then the work is turned over to the squaw, who does the really artistic work. Red flannel and braid, beads sometimes, and a strip here and there of buckskin, a few brass-headed tacks and the mounted "buffalo" horns are ready for the market.

Mr. Buck comes to town and the tenderfoot asks him where he "ketchum buffalo horns."

"In Yellowstone Park," grunts the big buck.

"How much?" asks the intending purchaser.

"Two dolls."

"Too muchee."

"No, no; cheap; three dolls, ugh."

The tenderfoot inspects the work and satisfies himself that they are really the horns of an almost extinct species of the majestic Western animal, and he hands over the coin and walks away proudly with his prize.

The Indian moves off down the street, turns the first corner and disappears up an alley.

Lost His Scalp Forty-four Years Ago.

"There is an old fellow living near Grenada, in my State," said a Memphis man at one of the hotels, "who was scalped by the Indians back in '56. I saw him recently when I was down in his neighborhood looking after the title of some farm property, and was greatly interested in his story. He is now about 70, tough and gnarled as a tree, and the mark of his horrifying adventure consists of a curiously ridged and indented scar, about four inches across on the top of his head.

"He says he was one of a party of emigrants who had taken what was then known as the 'Fremont overland trail,' for California, and while passing through southern Kansas he and two other young men left the main party to ride after some antelopes. They were intercepted by Indians and his two companions killed. He himself was shot in the back and fell off his horse senseless. The firing was heard by the other emigrants, and a rescue party drove the savages away. But, meanwhile, they had scalped this young man, and when picked up he was at first supposed to be dead. He was carried back and the next day turned over to some eastbound travelers, who took him to St. Louis. He told me it was over a year before the wound began to heal, but, of course his memory may be at fault as to particulars. The wonderful part of it is that he recovered at all in those days, when skin grafting was practically unknown. He used to hide the scar with a toupee, or patch wig, but at present he is entirely bald and wears a tight-fitting cap.

"I dare say he is the only man in the world who ever survived such an ordeal. His forehead, by the way, is curiously wrinkled in vertical lines, and his eyebrows are raised out of the natural position. That was what first attracted my attention to him. He says it was caused by the healing of the wound."

A Country Lass,

Health in her beaming eyes, health in her glowing cheek, health in her merry laugh. Yet country air and country hours can't save her from the common experience of women—an experience which dulls the eye, pales the cheek, and turns the laugh to a sigh. Womanly ills come to almost all. But for these ills there is help and healing in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It regulates the periods, stops unhealthy drains, cures inflammation, ulceration and female weakness. It makes weak women strong, sick women well.

"Miss Ella Sapp, of Jamestown, Guilford Co., N. C., writes: "I had suffered three years or more at monthly periods. It seemed as though I would die with pain in my back and stomach. I could not stand without fainting; had given up all hope of ever being cured, when one of my friends insisted upon my trying Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. With but little faith I tried it, and before I had taken half a bottle I felt better—had better appetite and slept better. Now I am happy to say I am entirely cured, and all done in two months' time, when all other medicines had failed to do any good at all."

The poor horses, as if scenting danger, pawed the ground in fear, uttering low whinnies.

"Hold those horses, Vatal; I say!" cried Heath Hampton, with a muttered imprecation; the poor beasts started down the road at a sharp gallop.

"I am trying my best, sir, but—"

"Out of the way!" cried Hampton, frantically, and in another instant he had leaped into the seat beside the dwarf, and grasped the reins in his firm white hands with such a powerful wrench that it brought the trembling horses quiveringly back on their haunches, to a dead standstill panting and covered with foam.

At that instant the sound of wheels dashing along at a rapid pace over the rocky road smote upon their ears.

Heath Hampton pulled his hat further down over his face, while the terrible smile on his cruelly handsome face deepened as he called, out in a low, steady voice:

"Swerve suddenly to the right, remember."

CHAPTER VI.

The Heiress.

"No spirit so gay, but recalls the hour
When it learned what all must know
That, enshrined in every human heart
Lies the mystery of woe."

In the spacious parlors of Lorrimer Place, the guests were already beginning to assemble; this was to be a gala night; a festive occasion long to be remembered the whole country around.

Loraine was seated in her boudoir, while Katy, her maid, was putting the finishing touches to her exquisite toilet— and a most beautiful bride she made.

The long mirror reflected a tall, graceful, willowy figure, draped in shimmering white satin and rich old lace. Diamonds and pearls gleamed on her snowy breast and in the meshes of her golden hair.

The long, sweeping veil, like a misty cloud, and the coronet of orange blossoms became her fair beauty exceedingly. Never had Loraine's beauty shone out so beautifully as on this, her wedding night.

A minister from New York had arrived to perform the ceremony. The merry laughter of the throng of guests floated up to Loraine where she sat.

"There!" cried Katy, taking a step or two back to admire her work; "you are just simply perfect. I shall never forget you, Miss Loraine, as you look to-night; but a slight touch of rouge on your cheeks wouldn't come amiss— you are just the least trifle too pale—you look like a marble statue."

"I hope Ulmont will share in your enthusiasm," replied Loraine smilingly; "I believe I do look a little pale; to tell the truth, I am feeling just a little nervous; it is time Ulmont was here; and he will be sure to want to see me before we go down to the parlors."

"He will be in raptures when he does see you, Miss."

"I hope so, Katy," replied Loraine, gently. "If I please him, I am content."

The little ormolu clock on the mantel chimed the hour of seven. Loraine started, with a little cry of surprise.

"I did not dream it was half so late," she said. "Ulmont should be here by this time— he is probably here, enjoying his last bachelor cigar out on the lawn."

Time does not linger long with the present, and the moments flew with quick, winged feet.

Loraine sat idly on a divan, tapping her little slippered foot on the thick velvet carpet, expecting each moment a summons from her lover. But the moments dragged themselves slowly by, yet no summons came.

She glanced up nervously at the clock; it wanted a quarter of eight, and yet there was no message for her.

Joyous mirth below was at its height; she could hear the rippling music mingled with the sound of fresh young voices.

Her face flushed and paled. Suddenly the memory of a story she had once read, of a bridegroom who came not, came slowly back to her on this her wedding night.

"What if anything were to happen?" she asked herself.

"Katy, slip downstairs and see if Mr. Ulvesford has yet arrived."

Katy hastened to do her bidding, muttering to herself:

"I wouldn't give much for a man who was not prompt on his wedding night."

Downstairs she went, searching vigorously everywhere, but Ulmont Ulvesford was nowhere to be found. She came slowly back with a troubled face, and reported her non-success.

Loraine Lorrimer was growing extremely nervous; twice her mother had anxiously come to see what was the cause of the delay; but Loraine had begged her to go down among the guests.

"Ulmont must be here very soon," she said; "leave me alone, mamma."

A gentle knock sounded on the door, and to Loraine's glad, "Come in," the minister entered.

She started back; she had been so sure it was Ulmont.

"My dear," he said gently, "our friends are getting quite impatient; I have been making inquiries for Mr. Ulvesford, but he has not yet arrived."

"Oh, he must come soon," sobbed Loraine, her heart fluttering strangely, while a nameless dread and strange- foreboding crept over her.

Silently the minister seated himself on the divan beside her, taking her small, white hand, with perhaps some such thought in his mind as had crossed the maid's, yet he gave no expression in words to his thoughts.

"Ulmont should certainly be here by this time," said Loraine, striving to speak calmly.

"Patience, my dear, patience," replied the minister, patting gently the little hand that now lay nervously in her lap; "although I do not wonder you should be a little nervous on your wedding night; it is but natural. Still," continued he, glancing up at the clock, "it is yet early— I will go below, for I expect he has already arrived."

Saying which, he arose, and with a reassuring smile left the room.

"Katy, Katy!" she whispered, "see, it grows late; do you think anything could have happened him?"

Loraine's delight was as rapturous as a child's as she culled the Alpine roses from the edge of the frowning glaciers.

Loraine never forgot that first day in Switzerland, or the surprise which awaited her before it had ended.

Ulmont had gone to visit the monastery of St. Bernard. Loraine had remained behind, being fatigued with the day's ramble.

"You will not be lonely, my darling," questioned Ulmont, encircling the slender waist with his arm, and drawing the golden head to his shoulder. "If I thought you would have one lonely moment, I could enjoy nothing. Your sweet face would rise between me and aught else."

He took the rosy face between his hands, kissing the proud, rosebud mouth.

"Lonely, oh, no," she replied, with a blithe little laugh; "I shall have too much to think of for that. I shall draw this couch before the window, and watch the bright stars, thinking how happy we are, Ulmont. I have been thinking, too, of so many little plans for the future; some of them, perhaps, very foolish ones. I will tell you them when they are quite perfected, but not now, Ulmont."

"Very well, dear, I shall try to bear very patiently being shut out from these wonderful plans, but remember, my sweet, deep thinking is hurtful to youth and beauty; leave that to those who are older, more careworn, and weary."

Below, they could hear the voices of the tourists, who were quite ready for the evening jaunt, in the hallway below, awaiting Ulmont's coming.

"One moment more," said Ulmont, smilingly; "I should like one of those roses you are wearing, Loraine; it will seem to me a part of your own sweet self."

As Loraine handed to him the the coveted bud, which she wore on her breast, the leaves fell in a crimson shower upon the floor at his feet; nothing but the stem remained.

Loraine dropped it with a startled cry. Ulmont saw, even in the shaded lamplight, how pale her face had grown.

He caught the white hands in his own, clasping them together round his neck.

"Never mind, Loraine," he said, laughingly; "no wonder the rose preferred total extinction to repose on any other resting place than that from which it had been displaced. I fear I too am very much like that rose, Loraine."

She laughed a sweet, low, happy laugh.

"I wonder if every husband is as clever a lover as you are, Ulmont," she said.

"If they are not, they certainly ought to be."

"Then Shakespeare never would have written: 'Men are April when they woo, but December when they wed,'" she replied archly.

"Your skill shall never change, love," said Ulmont, tenderly, filling out the sentence that he read in the limpid blue eyes upraised to his own.

Loraine's face flushed to the exquisite hue of a blush- rose; her beautiful eyes were filled with the sweetest lovelight, and her scarlet mouth was curved in the sweetest of smiles; she was so happy, her heart was as light and free as a bird's.

Life was so full and rich — the world was so fair; if that kind of a dream could last earth would be heaven.

Loraine stood at the window watching her husband's form in the moonlight until it had disappeared.

"I beg madam's pardon," said a tidy, white- capped maid, "I have spoken twice, yet madam did not heed me. I was to place this letter in your hands, and return for your answer."

She placed a small, white envelope in Loraine's hand, courtesied, and was gone.

"I wonder from whom it can possibly be?" thought Loraine wonderingly, glancing at the signature. "Heath Hampton," she cried aloud in her surprise.

She was amazed at finding him in Switzerland.

"You will forgive me, Loraine — Mrs. Ulvesford," he wrote, "but when I heard you were stopping here I could not pass Savoy without seeing you. The sight of American faces, and especially old friends, too, are really a treat in Switzerland. As I expect to leave Savoy to-morrow, if agreeable, I should like to call. I sincerely trust you will grant me at least a few moments."

At that moment the maid reappeared.

"Tell the gentleman I will await him on the portico," she said.

As Loraine stepped out on the portico, which ran, according to the Swiss custom, the entire length of the building, accessible from the ground floor by a flight of steps from either end, a gentleman who had evidently awaited her with no little impatience, stepped gracefully forward, extending his hands.

Tall, stately, self- possessed, she went forward to greet him.

"Loraine, I beg your pardon, Mrs. Ulvesford, I should say," bowing low over the slender, white hand, "need I tell you how pleased I am to see you?"

The proud blue eyes held none other than a courteous, formal greeting for him.

"How you have altered, Loraine; you left us a few weeks ago a bright, merry school- girl, now I find you—a queen!"

Loraine merely bowed at the pretty compliment.

"I am sorry my husband is not here," she said, "he will be sorry to have missed seeing you if you leave Savoy to-morrow morning."

The smile on his handsome face darkened.

Had Loraine been more worldly wise she would have known Ulmont's absence was what he desired above all things.

"You seem to have forgotten the time, Loraine," he said, half- laughingly, half- bitterly, still persisting in calling her by the old name, "when we found the moments passed quite quickly and happily without a third party."

"Of course that is all different now, Mr. Hampton," she said looking up surprisedly.

"Most certainly it is, as you say, different now, Loraine."

He was perfectly calm and unembarrassed; while Loraine looked away over the moonlit hills, murmuring something about childish folly.

They talked of home, and Loraine told him how happy she would be when she reached America.

Loraine's face flushed to the exquisite hue of a blush-rose; her beautiful eyes were filled with the sweetest lovelight, and her scarlet mouth was curved in the sweetest of smiles; she was so happy, her heart was as light and free as a bird's.

Life was so full and rich — the world was so fair; if that kind of a dream could last earth would be heaven.

Loraine stood at the window watching her husband's form in the moonlight until it had disappeared.

"I beg madam's pardon," said a tidy, white-capped maid, "I have spoken twice, yet madam did not heed me. I was to place this letter in your hands, and return for your answer."

She placed a small, white envelope in Loraine's hand, courtesied, and was gone.

"I wonder from whom it can possibly be?" thought Loraine wonderingly, glancing at the signature. "Heath Hampton," she cried aloud in her surprise.

She was amazed at finding him in Switzerland.

"You will forgive me, Loraine — Mrs. Ulvesford," he wrote, "but when I heard you were stopping here I could not pass Savoy without seeing you. The sight of American faces, and especially old friends, too, are really a treat in Switzerland. As I expect to leave Savoy to-morrow, if agreeable, I should like to call. I sincerely trust you will grant me at least a few moments."

At that moment the maid reappeared.

"Tell the gentleman I will await him on the portico," she said.

As Loraine stepped out on the portico, which ran, according to the Swiss custom, the entire length of the building, accessible from the ground floor by a flight of steps from either end, a gentleman who had evidently awaited her with no little impatience, stepped gracefully forward, extending his hands.

Tall, stately, self-possessed, she went forward to greet him.

"Loraine, I beg your pardon, Mrs. Ulvesford, I should say," bowing low over the slender, white hand, "need I tell you how pleased I am to see you?"

The proud blue eyes held none other than a courteous, formal greeting for him.

"How you have altered, Loraine; you left us a few weeks ago a bright, merry school-girl, now I find you— a queen!"

Loraine merely bowed at the pretty compliment.

"I am sorry my husband is not here," she said, "he will be sorry to have missed seeing you if you leave Savoy to-morrow morning."

The smile on his handsome face darkened.

Had Loraine been more worldly wise she would have known Ulmont's absence was what he desired above all things.

"You seem to have forgotten the time, Loraine," he said, half-laughingly, half-bitterly, still persisting in calling her by the old name, "when we found the moments passed quite quickly and happily without a third party."

"Of course that is all different now, Mr. Hampton," she said looking up surprisedly.

"Most certainly it is, as you say, different now, Loraine."

He was perfectly calm and unembarrassed; while Loraine looked away over the moonlit hills, murmuring something about childish folly.

They talked of home, and Loraine told him how happy she would be when she reached America.

How are your Nerves?

If they are weak and you feel nervous and easily "flustrated," can't sleep, and rise in the morning unrefreshed, your blood is poor. Strong nerves depend upon rich, nourishing blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the nerves strong by enriching and vitalizing the blood. It gives sweet, refreshing sleep and completely cures nervous troubles. Begin taking it to-day.

Nausea, indigestion are cured by Hood's Pills.

A GERM CATECHISM.

The Manner in Which Powley's Liquified Ozone Kills Disease.

Q. What is disease?

A. Disease is an unnatural condition of the body or organs of the body.

Q. What causes disease?

A. Germs cause disease.

Q. How are germs formed?

A. Germs are formed from decaying vegetable or animal matter.

Q. In what way do germs cause disease?

A. The germs enter the body and form a chemical combination with the animal cells. A chemical combination is peculiar to each disease. Thus a certain germ forms cholera, another consumption, another typhoid fever, another kidney disease, another indigestion and so on.

Q. How can we cure disease?

A. What is required is an antiseptic; something that will kill the germs and restore the diseased portion of the body to health.

Q. What will do this?

A. Powley's Liquified Ozone is the only preparation which will accomplish this.

Q. What is Powley's Liquified Ozone?

A. It is liquified oxygen; nature's cure for disease. It treats disease under a new system. It is simply infallible in its treatment. It has been demonstrated that no germ can live in oxygen or ozone. Powley's Liquified Ozone kills microbes instantly, and in this way cures such terrible diseases as consumption, impure blood, eczema, typhoid fever, tumors, Bright's disease of the kidneys, liver troubles, female weaknesses, etc.

Stop old-fashioned medicine methods. Powley's Liquified Ozone is liquified Oxygen. It kills germs of every description. Testimonials prove this. Send for pamphlet on general troubles and female diseases. Powley's Liquified Ozone is sold in two sizes, large size $1.00, small size 52 cents, at all druggists, or by mail from the Ozone Co., of Toronto, Limited, 48 Colborne street, Toronto. WATCH COFFEE.

And Watch it Carefully.

Any brain worker that depends on thought for his success in life, uses up daily, by brain work, a varying amount of the delicate particles of phosphate of potash and albumen of which the brain and nerve centres are composed.

The fine, microscopic particles of phosphate of potash are found in quantities in the pores of the skin after the brain has been used actively. This must be replaced from food, or brain fag and nervous prostration sets in.

This breaking down of the little cells each day, from brain work alone, is a natural process, and the cells can readily be built from the right sort of food, if the system is not interfered with by drugs, but if an increased amount of cells are broken down by the use of coffee, trouble then begins.

Frequently it first shows in dyspepsia, lack of power of the bowels to operate properly, or palpitation of the heart or some other lack of vitality and healthy vigor. There is but one thing for a sensible man or woman to do,—quit coffee absolutely. "Hard to do," you say. Take up Postum Food Coffee, use it regularly, have it well made, so it tastes good. You will find a well-defined, unmistakable change in your health, and there is a reason for it.

You have become free from the breaking down force of coffee, and on the other hand, you are taking a powerful, nourishing liquid food which quickly rebuilds the new cells. These are facts,—profound facts, ready for any one to prove to their own satisfaction by actual use. Postum Food Coffee is made at the famous pure food factories of the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., and is used by brain workers all over the world. Don't call it a "substitute" for coffee, leave out the coffee proposition altogether. Postum is a liquid food and a true food drink.

57th Band Benefit Concert.

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—Although 117 personal invitations were sent out for a meeting to organize for the above object and although the press took up the subject very cordially only four gentlemen appeared to show their appreciation of the band's services. I received many expressions of good-will, both written and verbal, but whether the fault lay in the convener or in that general apathy which pervades this town of ours, one is forced to the conclusion that there is no such general interest in the matter as would justify my proceeding further with it. I consider it anything but creditable to our leading citizens, whom I specially asked to co-operate with me that they allowed so-called "business engagements," to interfere with their attendance at a meeting of which they had such ample notice. Yours, etc.,

PROGRESS OF THE WORK

The Lakefield Cement Works Progressing Satisfactorily.

Mr. J. M. Kilbourn and those associated with him in the construction of the Lakefield Cement Works, are making substantial progress.

The railway to the marl bed is fully graded and all culverts in. The ties are on the ground. The rails are contracted for to be delivered this week.

The old mills at Young's Point have been cleared away. The river bed below the dam cleared off. The necessary piers and coffer dams placed for the construction of the concrete flumes has been let. Material for the foundation of the power house is on the ground.

The pole line between Lakefield and Young's Point has been laid out, poles contracted for and many of them delivered. The complete electric plant and waterwheel plant have been contracted for, and are in course of construction. The former is being built by the Canadian General Electric Company, and the latter by the Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Company.

The foundations for the main buildings have been taken out, the switches and sidings for the track at Lakefield have been located and are about graded. The timber for the ramp for coal and clay has been secured. The siding, 1,000 feet long, in the clay end at Lily Lake is now ready for the rails.

The steam derricks for handling marl and clay have been contracted for and are in process of construction. The special plant for the manufacture of cement has also been purchased, and is being constructed.

The time limits in all the contracts contemplates the works being in operation in January next, although it is hardly to be expected that works of such magnitude can be completed without some little setback which may delay matters a short time.

Address to the Electors

To the Free and Independent Electors of West Peterborough—

Gentlemen.—Having accepted the unanimous nomination of the Liberals of this Riding, as a candidate for its representation in the House of Commons I hereby respectfully solicit your support in securing my return at the coming general elections.

The grounds upon which I base my appeal are not so much nor chiefly by any means, my personal fitness for the position of your representation though as a citizen of Peterborough and interested in its progress in common with that of the country, I can and do promise, if elected, an intelligent support of such a public policy and such measures as will best conduce to the promotion of all the interests of Canada, the developement of her great resources and the general betterment of the civil moral and material condition of the public; and my best abilities and most assiduous attention shall be devoted to the faithful discharge of my representative duties.

The strongest ground, however, of my appeal consists in the fact that I am a firm supporter of the Liberal Government led by Sir Wilfred Laurier, which is entitled to the renewed confidence of the people, both on the ground of its policy and the splendid record established by the application of that policy. The Liberal party appealed to the country in 1896 upon a clearly defined policy and the promised results followed.

The Liberal party promised a reduction of a high tariff that hampered our industrial and agricultural interests and was hostile to the Mother Country.

The tariff was materially reduced and outwise improved and in such a way as to help instead of hinder the manufacturer and farmer, with the consequence that never before in the history of the country hav eour industries or our farmers enjoyed such great prosperity, our mechanics and working men such constant employment and high wages, nor our commerical and all other interests so flourished.

Our domestic and foreign trade have also greatly increased. The loyal gift of a trade preference, represented by a tariff reduction on British goods of 33 1-3 per cent., and our despatch of the Canadian Contingent, have resulted in a kindlier feeling towards Canada and greatly increased trade with the Mother Country.

With a largely reduced rate of tariff, our revenue has greatly expanded so that the Government was warranted in practicing true economy (reducing our postal rate one third, giving Imperial penny postage,) and premitting of the completion of great public works, deepening our cnals, so long trifled with, pushing the work on the Trent Valley Canal which is now urged and will be urged to completion by the Liberal Government, and the application of a vigorous policy of general development and improvement of our transportation facilities, resulting and to result in easier access to the British market and bette rprices for all our products.

I cannot obviously here, enter into details of how, in other ways the Liberal Government has implemented its promises and applied its policy, but, with these and other public questions. I shall have an opportunity during the campaign of more fully dealing

As a supporter of such a Government I can appeal with confidence for the support of the Electors of West Peterborough, knowing that by helping to give, as you will do, through my election, a renewal of the trust the Liberal Government has discharged with such evident and gratifying results, they will be conferring a great and lasting good upon this riding, the country at large, and securing a continuation of the great blessings of prosperity and good government we now enjoy.

Again soliciting your support, your votes, and influence, in this contest,

I have the honor to be,
gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
J. H. McCLELLAN

'A Cheerful Look Makes a Dish a Feast."

"Cheerful looks" depend just as much upon physical well-being as upon natural disposition and temperament. If the blood is disordered, the brain is starved, and no "dish is a feast," for the reason that the vitalising elements do not reach the proper spot.

A step in the right direction is to purify the body by the use of a natural remedy. Hood's Sarsaparilla is Nature's remedy. It acts upon the blood, and whether the seat of the disorder is brain, stomach, liver or kidneys, the purifying process of this medicine is equally sure and successful. It never disappoints.

Back Ache—"My mother had severe pains in her side and back. She was obliged to give up work. A friend persuaded her to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon she was able to do her work, free from pain and had a good appetite." MAGGIE MORGAN, Nasonworth, N. B.

Nerve Food—"My wife was stricken with nervous prostration. She suffered from headaches. She became weak, low-spirited and her appetite was poor. I am glad to state that Hood's Sarsaparilla has completely cured her of all her ailments." G. BELLAMY, 321 Hannah St., Hamilton, Ont.

ATTACK of ROYAL CANADIANS at Paardeberg

The present is a time when war pictures are in greater demand than ever. The conduct of the British soldiers on the battlefield has won the plaudits of admiring nations. We have at great expense published four large, beautiful pictures, size 20x24, on heavy, superfine calendered paper. A picture that will commend itself and send a thrill to the heart of every true Canadian is the one called Attack of Royal Canadians at Paardeberg, there are literally hundreds of figures on this picture, the mountains or kopjes stretching out into the distance are swarming with men, while here and there a prostrate figure speaks only too well of the Boer rifleman. It was on this battlefield the gallant Major Arnold met death unflinchingly. Indeed, it is only too true that many of those gallant hearts that beat so high when the cheering thousands bade them Godspeed as they sailed from Canada's shores now lie still forever in lonely graves on the other side of the world under African skies. To every Canadian heart, to every Canadian home, the deeds of their brave soldier boys speak with an irresistible thrill of patriotism and pride. Gordon Highlanders at the Battle of Belmont, Charging the Boer Guns at Elandslaagte and the Charge of Gen. French's Cavalry on the Retreating Gen. Cronje's Army. These are all stirring pictures and cannot fail to commend themselves to anyone who will examine them. They are RED HOT SELLERS! Agents coin money. Big profits. Enormous success. One agent sold 68 in one day. Sample and terms 25 cts (none free); four for 80 cts; $1.75 per dozen; 25 for $3.25; 50 for $6.00; 100 for $11.00. Write to-day for a dozen and make money. —THE—
CANADA BUSINESS COLLEGE
Chatham, Ont.

Is doing more for its pupils than any other business school in Canada, or perhaps, than any other in the continent. How can we do this? First.

First: By giving them a practical, not a theoretical, preparation for business life.

Second: The business public has learned that there is this vast difference between the graduates of this school and those of other colleges, hence the strong demand for our graduates, which has enabled 2-0 to be placed in good positions between Sept., '99, and July, '00 a period of ten months.

The good work still goes on, and 72 have been placed between July 1st and Sept. 1st of this year.

We will give you half of the list this issue and the other half next. Here is the list:

Have you noticed that this is the only school in Canada that publishes a list of pupils placed. Some other schools make great claims to be doing wonders in this direction but never publish the list so that the public can be assured of the correctness of the claim.

RESULTS are the test to apply in deciding as to which school shall be worthy of your patronage.

We allow railway fare to students from a distance, provided it does not exceed $8. Good board for ladies at $2 per week and for gentlemen $2.50.

GEN. BULLER IS FIGHTING

He is Pursuing 4,000 Boers With 26 Guns to the North

DE WET IS NOW NEAR WEPENER

Raids may Shortly be Expected upon the Line South of Bloemfontein

London, Oct. 8.—Gen. Buller, to whom most of the difficult struggles in South Africa have been confided, is still hammering away at the Boers in approved Tugela fashion. He is now pursuing four thousand Boers into the wilds north of Lydenburg, where he will doubtless ere long bring them to bay, the ammunition for the 26 guns in their possession being almost exhausted. There are yet possibilities of another battle before the Boers are definitely broken up into guerilla bands. If Gen. De Wet, as is reported, has reappeared so far south as Wepener, trouble is in store for the garrison of Bloemfontein, who are menaced by the audacious leader. Raids may be expected upon the line of communication south of Bloemfontein, and it is to be hoped that in directing one of them De Wet may meet his fate in pursuance of the adage that the pitcher that goes often to the well gets broken. Isolated operations against guerillas are reported from several quarters, showing that the Boers have not yet lost heart.

BULLER PURSUES BOERS.

Lydenburg, Oct. 2.—General Buller's force has been pursuing the Boers through Pilgrim's Rest and Krugerspost. He is now near Ohrigstadt, and is still marching northward. The Boers now here have made a stand.

London, Oct. 7.—It is estimated, according to the Pietermartisburg correspondent of the London Daily Mail, that from 4,000 to 5,000 Boers have retreated from Pilfrim's Rest northwest of Lydenburg, with four long Toms and twenty-two other guns. The correspondent understands that their long Tom ammunition is almost exhausted.

DE WET IS OUT AGAIN

Aliwal North, Cape Colony, Oct. 8.—Gen De Wet is reported to be a few miles south of Wepener, in Orange River Colony, about 70 miles north of Aliwal North. The Boers near here are in a state of great excitement. All the outpost camps have been called in and preparations are being made to defend the town. A detachment of Cape police engaged in reconnoitering at Rouxville, somewhat less than half way between Aliwal North and wepener, rode out of one end of the town as the Boers galloped in at the other end. Two mounted Australians were captured. Some of the Rouxville merchants have destroyed their stocks to prevent them from falling into the hands of the Boers.

BURGHERS SURRENDERING DAILY

London, Oct. 6.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts, under date of yesterday.

"Methuen arrived at Rustenbury yesterday. He had two engagements with Commandant Lemmer's force on Sept. 25. His casualties were one severely and two slightly wounded. Seven Boers were killed and twenty-four made prisoners.

Clements is sending twenty-four prisoners from Magallesburg. The total number of Boer prisoners is now 16,000. The burghers are surrendering daily.

Kelly-Kenny reports that he had an engagement lasting three hours at Bultfontein yesterday with a strong force of Boers. His casualties were five officers wounded and one officer missing. The Boers lost heavily.

Commandant Muller has surrendered to Clery, and Commandant Dirksen and others are on their way to Pretoria to surrender.

BOERS TOOK 53 PRISONERS.

Durban, Oct. 7.—Details of the disaster to the British convoy near De Jagers drift on October 1 show that the earlier reports underestimated its extent. The Boers numbered 450, and were commanded by General Christian Botha. The British force, comprising the Durban Volunteers, was completely surprised. The British had outspanned when the attack commenced, and the native ox drivers were shot down. The British casualties were one officer killed and six wounded. The Boers took 53 prisoners, who were subsequently released. The Boers captured one Hotchkiss-gun and set fire to 24 waggons. They carried off the supplies, together with the oxen and mules, leaving one mule waggon for the transportation of the British wounded.

London, Oct. 8.—Out of 30,000 officers and men wounded in South Africa 29,000 have actually returned to duty. Such a quick recovery of such a large percentage of wounded rather breaks down Baron Bloch's theory that a modern war is impossible owing to its slaughter, though it is true 7,000 British soldiers have found graves in South Africa.

London is already in a state of expectancy, awaiting the return of the City Imperial Volunteers from South Africa, and as soon as the elections are over the whole country is likely to give itself up to a period of jubilant anticipation pending the arrival of Lord Roberts, whose return home will be marked by celebrations such as Great Britain has not seen for many a year.

CANADIAN CASUALTIES.

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—The following cable was received here to-day.

"Cape Town, Oct. 6.—370, Seymour, Lord Strathcona's corps, severely wounded, Krugersdorp, Oct. 1. (Signed) Milner."

Lord E. Seymour is a son of the Marquis of Herttord, who enlisted in the West with the Strathcona Horse. The Marquis of Hertford was in Ottawa seeing his son go to South Africa.

A cable from Cape Town reprots the despatch of 2,129, M. O. Kelly, C.M.R.

INCUBATOR FOR HUMANS

Professor McCloskie Ridicules Idea of Western Scientists

Princetown, N.J., Oct. 8.—George McCloskie, professor of biology in Princeton University, ridicules the statement of Chicago scientists that artificial reproduction of human beings is possible. He said—

"In the present state of science such a thing is absolutely impossible. It has been done in the case of starfish and lower plants, but the time is far in the future when it will be possible among men."

Not withstanding this, it is said that the artificial reproduct of human kind is an accomplished fact, a healthier and finer race of men is assured.

BOY TIED TO A STAKE

Companyons Set His Clothes on Fire While Playing Indian

Trenton, N. J., October 8.—Eddie McBride, 10 years old, died to-day as the result of burns received yesterday while playing Indian with companions of his own age. McBride was tied to a stake and his clothing was saturated with gasoline, then set on fire.

The boy offered no resistance until the lighted match was applied. He then broke loose and ran away screaming. His cries attracted the attention of some men, who rolled him on the ground and extinguished the flames. The boy was taken to his home, where death resulted. The police are investigating.

IS THIS A MURDER ?

Dead Bodies of Two Manitoba Farmers Found in a Well

THEY WERE BOTH BROUGHT OUT

By a Man From New Mexico, who Disappeared When he Found Detectives Working

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 7.—At Boissevain to-day the bodies of Jacob Smith and Charles Daw, two farmers, who have been missing since July 31, were discovered in an old well on Daw's farm, where they had been covered over with earth, stones and brush. A few days before they disappeared, a young man named Walter Gordon arrived from New Mexico and bought both Daw's farm and Smith's stock, stating that he paid $5,000 to Daw and some $700 to Smith. Both men disappeared several days afterwards, when it was stated that they had gone to Brandon Fair. Not returning for several weeks inquiry was begun, and has since been going on. The man Gordon also disappeared on Sunday last, when he found detectives were working on the case.

D J. Mullins was struck by a street car at London, Saturday. He had a narrow escape from death.

Athens, Ont., had a disastrous fire Saturday night. For a time the town was threatened with total destruction.

THE POLITICAL FIELD.

Some Big Guns Now Beginning to Boom in Earnest.

DR. FORD IN THE EAST.

Prominent Conservatives Being Asked to Supply Election Funds.

The Conservatives of East Peterborough Recognize the Truth of the Statement, Which Appeared in the Times—Mr. Lang to be the Liberal Candidate.

The election campaign is now on in earnest. Mr. McClellan has opened permanent committee rooms on Water street and has began the fight in earnest. He is arranging to hold meetings throughout the Riding. These meetings will be addressed by Messrs. R. R. Hall, R. F. McWilliams, Daniel O'Connell, E. B. Stone, F. D. Kerr, the candidate and others. Hon. Mr. Stratton has also promised to take a few meetings.

Mr. Kendry has not as yet made a move, but will no doubt follow suit very soon. Mr. Kendry's meetings will probably be addressed by Mr. A. P. Poussette, Q.C., Geo. W. Hatton, John Green, J. W. Garvin, and others.

The Conservatives in East Peterborough are badly rattled. Instead of of holding a convention three months ago, and selecting a candidate, they called it at the last minute, and failed to advertise the meeting. The result was that there were few present, and another meeting had to be called. Instead of holding it the present week, they called it for Wednesday of next week—two weeks from the first meeting. If the voting is to take place on Oct. 30th, as is generally supposed, this will leave the candidate 13 days in which to meet the electors, and air his views on the political questions of the day. Of course voting may not take place so soon, but there is every reason to believe that it will be on or about the above date. A prominent Conservative of Norwood told The Times that Dr. Ford, of Norwood, would be the choice, and he was prepared to accept provided sufficient funds were forthcoming to pay the expenses of the campaign. Funds are now being collected.

Sir Wilfred Laurier and his colleagues have mapped out for themselves some big work for the next thirty days. When the Premier appears in Massey Hall, Toronto, on October 16th, several Ministers will be beside him, among them Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance. The next evening Sir Wilfred, accompanied by Hon. David Mills and Sir Richard Cartwright, will speak at Stratford. Their next three nights will be spent in western towns yet to be decided upon. While the Prime Minister is filling Western Ontario with his eloquence, Hon. W. S. Fielding and Hon. William Mulock will hold a series of meetings in the province. Hon. Wm. Patterson, whose stumping ability has won for him the name of being the best vote getter in Canada, has every night booked until October 21. Hon. J. Isreal Tarte was more than anxious to appear before a few Ontario audiences, but apparently he has been overruled by those who can see no market in this province for opinions of the Monet-Bourassa style. It is now announced that Mr. Tarte cannot make it convenient to come into Ontario for a couple of weeks at least. The probability is that he will not come at all.

Mr. Kendry will hold a big political meeting in the Opera House here at an early date—as soon as he can secure a few good speakers. It was expected that Sir Charles Tupper and Hon. Hugh Joohn would have been available, but this is out of the question. Hon. Mr. Foster also has his work cut out for him in Nova Scotia, so that we are not likely to hear any of the great guns of the party at all.

There may be a labour candidate to add to the complexity of the political situation in Ottawa. Dry goods clerks, bartenders, teamsters and horseshoers are organising, and new unions of carpenters and butchers have been formed. It is suggested that the labour men can give one vote to their candidate and at the same time keep in touch with their party by giving the other vote to the party candidate. The same scheme may be adopted in West Toronto and Hamilton, where the double vote obtains.

Leonard Burnett, M.P., had a struggle for the Liberal nomination in South Ontario. Mayor Fowke, of Oshawa, went to the convention with a numerous following, and when the ballots were counted it was found that Mr. Burnett had only a few votes to the good. The nomination was made unanimous, but there are differences among the Liberals of the riding, and the success of the party candidate is by no means assured.

Lady Minto closed her Winnipeg visit Saturday.

The Crown, in addition to the published statement of Herbert in the Sifton murder case, has a detailed statement which will not be made known until the trial.

Fourteen labourers, at work on the militia stores building at Ottawa, are on strike against a reduction of 15 cents a day in wages. They were getting $1.65 for ten hours.

DUNSMUIA S MINERS OUT.

They Came to Take the Place at the Coal Mines—They Are Now at Nanaimo.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 6—(Special) Forty Scotch miners, imported by Premier Dunsmuir, from Scotland, to take the place of Chinamen at the Union Coal Miners, struck work on Thursday and started to walk to Nanaimo, a distance of sixty miles. They arrived here to-day. They declared they could not make decent wages, and had been misled about the conditions, etc. They came here expecting that the Nanaimo Miners' Union would keep them until the dispute was settled. But this is very doubtful. The company earnestly advises the men to return to work but they are a stubborn lot and say they will not mine at wages they have been offered. Many of them are quite destitute, and if they are not backed by the Miners' Union may be in a bad plight. The probabilities are that there will be a likely time before the trouble is settled.

The Sloan and Smith factions will probably clash to-night at Smith's meeting in the opera house at Nanaimo.

MIKADO TO VISIT EUROPE

The Austrian Court Making Preparations for the Emperor and Empress of Japan will LEAVE THE FLOWERY KINGDOM

Early Next Year—This is the First Time Japanese Rulers Have Come Abroad

Vienna, Oct. 8.—Preparations are already being made here at the Imperial Court in view of the approaching visit of the ruler of Japan and his consort, who are due here in the early part of next year, probably toward the beginning of February.

It will be the first occasion of any Mikado leaving Japan since the foundation of the dynasty, nearly 3000 years ago, and the most elaborate festivities are being organized in his honor.

Thirty years ago the Mikado was regarded by his subjects as invested with so many divine attributes that it was death to any of his subjects to dare raise their eyes to gaze upon him when he passed through the streets of his capital. To-day printed notices are posted up everywhere in Yokio calling upon the people to get out of his way and to bare their heads in token of respect when he drives out. In spite of this wane of his divinity to remains a most interesting figure as a monarch, who in the short space of a quarter of a century has transformed his Empire from a barbarous Oriental state into a most progressive and up-to-date power.

In this he has been vastly helped by his celever consort, the Empress, who for thirty-five years has been his most sensible, enlightened and trusted counsellor. Indeed, the influence which she has exercised has in its weight been equivalent to that of the widowed Empress of China, while instead of its being reactionery it has invariably been progressive.

The Empress, now a woman of over 50, who dresses mostly in European fashion, but sometimes in old Japanese grab, is childless, and the Crown Prince of Japan, who is to become regent of the Emirpe during his father's absence, is the ofspring of one of the wives of the Mikado, who, like most Oriental monarchs, has in addition to his chief wife and consort an enormous harem.

It is realized here that the entertainment of the Emperor and Empress of Japan will be no easy matter. For while is one sense of the word they are Orientals, like, for instance, the Shah and the Sultan, yet in other respects they may justly lay claim to the consideration and honors accorded to European sovereigns.

After leaving Vienna they will visit in turn the courts of Berlin and Rome, as well as Paris and London, returning to Japan via the United States and Canada.

MINERS TO MEET ON FRIDAY NEXT

They Will Hold a Big Convention at Scranton to Discuss Offer

Shenandoah, Pa., Oct. 8.—President Mitchell this morning issued a call for a convention of mine workers of the three districts comprising the anthracite field to meet in Scranton on Friday next.

The text of the convention call is—

"Temporary Headquarters, United Mine Workers, Hazelton, Pa., Oct. 8

"To all mine workers and mine employees of the anthracite region—

"Brethern—In view of the fact that the mine operators have posted notices offering an advance in wages formerly paid, and believing it to be our plain duty to consult your wishes as to our future action, we deem it advisable to ask you to select delegates to represent you in convention.

"You are therefore notified that a convention will be held at Scranton, Pa., beginning Friday, October 12, at 10 a.m.

"The basis of representation will be one vote for each 100 persons on strike, or, if desired, one delegate may represent as many as 500 mine workers; but no delegate will be allowed to cast more than five votes."

MR. MITCHELL'S STATEMENT.

Hazelton, Pa., Oct. 8.—President Jno. M. Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers in an address at a mine workers' mass meeting at Shenandoah yesterday said—

"I wish to announce for the first time that in a few days a convention will be called. Every mine will be required to send delegates. If you believe a net advance of ten per cent. in your wages is enough, then your votes will decide the question. If you prefer that the strike shall go on, Mitchell will be with you. In this strike we must all win together or go down together."

Mitchell was the center of the greatest demonstration ever held in Shenandoah. More than five thousand striking mine workers marched through the streets and up to Soldiers' Monument park, Locust mountain, where they held a mass meeting and listened to Mitchell's speech. They heartily cheered their leader.

AN ARMED CAMP.

Hazelton, Pa., Oct. 8.—In anticipation of marching by the strikers this morning, every one of the dozen or more collieries in this district still in operation in a more or less crippled condition, was virtually an armed camp during the night. But the expected did not happen, and the peace of the community remains undisturbed.

The inclement weather probably had much to do with the peaceful condition of affairs. It rained hard during the night, and a heavy mist hangs over the entire region to-day.

ORGANIZERS ABANDON HOPE.

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 8.—There is no change in the strike situation in the Lykens Valley.

The Williamstown colliery is working fully time, with nearly 1,300 men and boys on the rolls. The oranizers of the Mine Workers' Union have abandoned hope of organizing a union at Williamstown, and have left town. The employees of this colliery have been working steadily for many years, and they have refused to have anything to do with the union or the strike. Both collieries are controlled by the Pennsylvania Railroad company.

IT IS A STARTLING CRIME INDEED

One of the Plotters Becomes the Victim—Marie Defenbach Lends her aid to Defraud Insurance Companies and is Killed

Chicago, Oct. 8.—The Tribune says—The prosecuting authorities of Cook County laid hands on what they regard as one of the startling crimes of the country's history. Charges of conspiracy, back of which are alleged insinuations of murder, are lodged against three men, two of whom are already in custody. These men will have to answer allegations of a carefully laid plot to swindle an insurance company and two insurance societies—a plot—which it is said, progressed with the growth of fear into the actual death by poison, it is thought, of the insured person.

According to the theory on which the prosecution will proceed, the dead person, a young woman of Chicago, was originally one of the quartette of conspirators. She had expected that her death was to be feigned and that another dead body was to play the passive role of her corpse; instead of that, real death came to her.

WHO SHE WAS.

The person whose death adds a phase to what would have been a simple insurance swindle, was Marie Defanbach, 25 years old, and the three persons arrested upon bench warrants issued by Judge Gibbons, are Dr. August M. Unger, Frank H. Smiley and F. Wayland Brown, the latter is assistant manager of a detective agency. He was arrested to-day on his return from Virginia. A third person, for whom a warrant has been issued, is not yet under arrest.

The alleged conspiracy has been investigated with searching care by a private detective agency, by the Chicago attorney and detectives of one of the insurance companies, and by the State Attorney himself. Yesterday it was decided to cause the immediate arrest of the suspects.

Last April Miss Defenbach applied to a New York insurance company for a $10,000 policy. This was refused, but later one for $5,000 was taken out.

$5,000 IN A CANADIAN ORDER.

On or about August 10 last, she also secured insurance in a Canadian order to the amount of $5,000. At the same date she took out a policy in an American benefit order for $2,000.

Two weeks afterward she was dead, leaving a will which directed that a part of these insurance policies should be paid to Frank H. Smiley, her "affianced husband" and that her body be cremated.

Her death was attended by the most horrible agony. The attending physician refused to issue a certificate of death, but the coroner's jury later and after the body had been embalmed, found a verdict of death from dysentery. The next day the body was cremated.

Without much delay proceedings were begun to recover the value of the insurance policies she had left.

This was resisted by the insurance companies, with the result that the fraud was discovered.

NEW YORK LIFE INTERESTED.

New York, Oct. 8.—Lawyer George W. Hubbell, attorney for the New York Life Insurance Company, said to-day that the company had issued a policy for $5,000 to Marie Defenbach a short time ago. They had been notified of the death of Miss Defenbach and an investigation was being made, but they had not resisted paying the amount of the policy, as no claim had as yet been made for the money. "However," he added, "I am without information and am not prepared to discuss the matter in detail."

Quiet Restored at San Chun and Missions Near There are Safe

Pekin, Oct. 8.

Gen Yamaguchi will retain 10,000 Japanese troops, 2,000 of them at Pekin and the others at Taku and along the line of communication. 8,000 Germans will pass the winter in Pekin, and 1,500 Russians. The number of British troops who will be retained has not yet been decided. Sir Alfred Gazelee will probably keep a brigade. The allies are storing supplies for six months. Count Von Waldersee's headquarters will be the building in the Imperial pleasure ground outside the Purple City.

Pekin, Thursday Oct. 4, via Tien Tsin, Oct. 7 and Shanghai, Oct. 8.—The American troops will not participate in the expedition to Pao Ting Fu. Gen. Chaffee has the assurance of Li Hung Chang that if the allies desire Pao Ting Fu the Chinese will readily surrender that city. Li Hung Chang has given the same assurance to the other generals. The Americans believe that revenge and military display are the only objects of the expedition, and they hold that it will retard the restoration of peace. The Russians are understood to have practically abandoned the railroad and to have stopped its reconstruction. Gen. Chaffee favors the return of the railroad to its owners and its reconstruction and operation on a joint international basis. The first reinforcements of German troops have arrived here.

Washington, Oct. 8.—The Chinese Minister has advised Secretary Hay of the receipt of a despatch from the Southern Viceroys stating that the Imperial Court is en route from Tai Yuen to Singan, where the Imperial establishment will be set up.

The Minister is also advised officially that Viceroy Yu of the Province just vacated by the court has been impeached for his anti-foreign tendencies.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 2.—Admiral Alexeiff, in reporting the occupation of Shan Hai Kuan on the Gulf of Liao Tung, says—

In accordance with an agreement of the Admirals, the forts have been divided among the different nations. The town has not been occupied, but the gates are guarded by artillery. The forts are nearly intact, and the whole route from Pong Ken to Shan Hai Kuan is now occupied by the Russians. After the occupation of Shan Hai Kuan the Americans refused to participate further in the operations. Part of the Russian force is advancing northwards."

Hong Kong, Oct. 8.—The town of Shan Chun is quiet this morning, and the stores have been re-opened. The rebels who attacked Sai Wan, near San Chun, Saturday are believed to belong to the force of Triads which is proceeding westward, levying blackmail and recruiting. The missions in the Hinterland are safe.

40 PEOPLE KILLED, MANY OTHERS SERIOUSLY INJURED

St. Petersburg, Oct. 8.

Five thousand pilgrims assembled at the St. Nikander monastry in the Porkhoff district for a religious festival. During the night one of the upper floors collapsed and many of those sleeping there fell upon those below. A panic was caused by a false alarm of fire, and four men and thirty-six women were crushed to death, many others being seriously injured.

LORD SALISBURY HAS WON 325 SEATS.

Nearly Five Hundred Members of the Imperial Parliament Have Now Been Elected.

London, Oct. 8.—There is polling to-day in twenty-one constituencies.

The elections results announced this morning leave the party gains unchanged. The Right Hon. Charles H. Hemphill, Liberal, formerly Solicitor-General for Ireland, retains his seat for North Tyrone by a reduced majority.

The total number of members of Parliament up to three p.m. to-day was 487, as follows.

Ministerialists	325

THE SUBMARINE TERROR.

Considerable interest attaches to the experiments being made by various nations with submarine boats. Great Britain has so far apparently ignored the possibilities of submarine warfare and has continued along more conservative lines, adding ships to her navy. Other countries, however, in despair at ever overtaking England in the matter of war ships, have been directing their energies toward the developments of submarine craft, with the belief that once they master submarine navigation, Great Britain's huge fleet will cease to be formidable, and will in fact become as much a source of weakness to Britain as of strength. The French have been particularly persistent in their experiments with submarine boats claim to have accomplished considerable with the Gustave Zede and a couple of similar submergible boats. The French experiments and the success which has attended them are doubtless partly responsible for starting the U.S. government experimenting along the same lines. A series of these experiments have just been completed at Newport, where the submarine boat Holland is credited with having in mimic warfare easily outwitted and torpedoed the flagship of a blockading fleet. The blockading vessels were the battleships Kearsarge, Indiana and Texas, and the converted yachts Scorpion and Eagle, while the torpedo flotilla which opposed the blockading squadron consisted of five boats and the Holland. The honors of the fight rested almost entirely with the torpedo boats which are said unofficially to have succeeded in torpedoing every vessel of the blockading squadron.

The mimic battle was fought in absolute darkness. That the fleet failed to show any lights was taken as evidence the ships were afraid to disclose their location, knowing the submarine boat was out and realizing that their only safety from her attack lay in escaping her notice.

This proved to be true, for even without lights she succeeded in picking up the most important battleship in the fleet, the Kearsarge, and what made the circumstances more significant was that it was generally understood before the mimic battle that the Kearsarge would be especially selected by the Holland for attack, not withstanding which fact and the extra vigilance of the battleship's officers the submarine boat easily demonstrated her value, in mimic warfare at least. Moving practically submerged, at a speed of about six miles an hour, she easily picked up the Kearsarge as she lay several miles to the eastward of the mouth of the harbor.

She was close on the Kearsarge before any of the battleship's officers had any knowledge of her presence. The big craft succumbed without a struggle.

It was an unparalleled victory for the Holland.

It is safe to surmise that Great Britain is not an idle spectator of these trials of submarine boats, and when she thinks the submarine destroyers have been perfected sufficiently to be formidable steps will doubtless be taken to ensure the retention of the supremacy on the ocean, which is Britain's chief strength, and to which the development of the submarine boat is apparently such a menace.

A Big Luminous Tree.

Every one has heard of luminous plants and shrubs, but comparatively few people are aware of the existence in Nevada of a luminous tree of large proportions. The Indians have always entertained a wholesome dread of this tree, and have a number of legends connected with it, some of which are clearly founded on the Biblical story of Moses and the burning bush. As a result of their superstition the tree has come to be known as the "witch tree," and is quite a source of interest among people for miles around. It is a valuable landmark at night, as it can be seen half a mile away, and the phosphorous substance which exudes from it is so powerful that it is possible to read a few words of print held close to it. Several botanists and tree scientists have made journeys to inspect and report on the tree, but we have never seen a really intelligent explanation of what seems to be quite a unique phenomenon.

Sleeping to Death.

One of the most curious and fatal diseases on record is termed "the sleeping sickness of West Africa." The malady has never been known to attack anyone except negroes. As the disease progresses the victim sleeps constantly and finally dies from starvation. The first symptoms are shown when the victim gradually gives way to a feeling of listlessness, which becomes at last a profound and lethargic sleep, the first noticeable signs of which are a visible and persistent drooping of the eyelids in the daytime and while at work. In spite of all efforts to arouse him, the patient lapses into slumber. The periods of sleep increase in number and the intervals between them lessen. Soon the negro appears to be always asleep. Death occurs at the end of from six to twelve months. —New York Sun.

An Appropriate Text.

A little girl who lives up town went to church last Sunday. She is a bright little maiden and, considering her tender age, only six, she is decidedly intelligent. Her mother has been suffering from the grip and didn't accompany her, and as her father was away from home she went alone.

Whether it was the loneliness of the big pew or whether the church was poorly heated, mamma wasn't quite sure, but, anyway, the little maid came home and declared she was very chilly.

"My toes got so cold while I was sitting there, mamma," she declared. "And so did my fingers and my nose. I don't believe there was hardly a speck of fire in the furnace."

"That was too bad," said mamma; "did the other people seem to suffer, too?"

"Oh, yes, they did," cried the little maid. "They just shivered!"

Then mamma thought she would divert the little maid's attention.

"What was the text, dear?" she asked; "can you remember it?"

"I should think I could," was the quick answer: "I can 'member every word of it."

"Well, what was it?"

The little maid put her head on one side and screwing up her face, shrilly intoned:

" 'Many are cold, but few are frozen!' "

And mamma had to admit that it seemed remarkably appropriate.

Willing to Concede.

At a convival party, recently, a gentleman who had returned from a lengthened tour in the East, was relating some of the wonderful things he had seen on his travels. The yarns he spun were decidedly "steep," but the guests politely accepted his statements as true. Encouraged by the reception accorded to his tallest stories he ventured to state that he had seen at the foot of the Himalayas a tiger forty-three feet long, from the tip of the nose to the tip of the tail. This was too much, and everybody kept silence, until a gentleman from Oban dryly remarked:

"Oh, yes, the works of Nature are very wonderful and very large whatever. Just last week I saw a skate brought ashore at Oban, which covered a quarter of an acre of ground."

Nobody spoke, and amid the silence the Eastern traveler left the room. The host, perceiving that something was amiss, rose and followed him.

"Is there anything wrong?" he asked.

"I have been insulted," said the traveler. "That Scotch gentleman has dealt a blow at my veracity, and I cannot return until he apologizes."

Anxious that harmony should prevail among his guests, the host returned to the room, and explaining matters to the company, asked the Highlander to make an apology, if merely for form's sake.

"Weel," said he, "I'll no just apologise, but tell him to come back and take a few feet off the teegur, and we'll see what can be done wi' the skate."

He Could Wait.

A boy was sitting lazily in the stern of a boat dangling his feet in the water, when a man from the dock called sharply to him:

"What are you doin' there?"

"Nothin'," responded the boy.

"Do you get any pay for it?"

"No," and he drew one foot out of the water, ready to run if necessary.

"Why don't you go to work?"

"Will you get me a job?"

"Yes."

"Steady?"

"Yes."

"Pay anything?"

"Well, no," hesitated the man—"not the first week."

"How about the second?"

"Then I will."

"All right; I'll come round the second week. This is good enough for me now," and the boy put his foot back into the water, and winked at the man on the dock.

DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

"I have been thinking of writing to you for some time," writes Mrs. W. D. Benson, of Maxton, Robeson Co., N. C., "to let you know what a wonderful thing Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery did for my little boy. He was taken with indigestion when he was a year and a half old, and he was under the doctor's treatment for five long years. We spent all we made for doctor's bills, and it did no good. He could not eat anything only a little milk and cracker, and sometimes even this would make him sick, and he got very weak; could not sit up all day, and I gave up all hope of his ever getting any better. Looking over one of your books I noticed Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery recommended for indigestion. We bought some and gave to our boy. Two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cured him. He is well as can be, and can eat anything that he wants and it does not hurt him. He has not been sick a day since, and it has been three years since he took your medicine. I pray that God will always bless you and your medicine."

FOR DISEASES OF THE STOMACH, BLOOD, NERVES AND LUNGS.

Incorrigible.

A poor little street Arab was brought into a hospital by the police. He had been run over by an omnibus and was badly injured. The chaplain was sent for, as it was thought improbable that the boy would live many hours. With little tact the chaplain began the interview thus: "My boy, the doctors think you are very much hurt. Have you been a good little boy?"

Boy (much bored)—You git aout!

Chaplain (shocked)—But I am afraid you are not a good little boy, and you know you may perhaps be going to die.

Boy (anxious to end the interview)—Well, tain't none o' your business any-'ow. Wot's me death got to do with you? 'Ave you got a pal in the corfin line?

It is pleasant to be able to relate that the boy finally recovered.

Now and then the doctor is believed to be almost omniscient. A patient in a military hospital was constantly getting into hot water because he smuggled food into the wards. One morning his medical officer was about to examine his throat with a laryngoscope. Seeing the little mirror all ready for use the man's chum whispered an anxious warning from the adjoining bed. "I say, Bill, you'd best 'ave a care. 'E moight 'appen to see wot yer 'ad for supper lawst noight."—Cornhill Magazine.

Love Won - and - Lost.

- A NOVEL.

Their conversation was the exchange of thought of old friends.

Loraine spoke of their travels, and of the people whom they had met.

Heath Hampton always referred to himself as being the loneliest of men.

"I cannot understand why that should be so," she replied.

"I shall never care to look upon a woman's face again," he said, with a deep sigh, "or care for their friendship; I love the memory of the old ones best, Loraine."

Deep in her heart Loraine was wishing her husband would return; the conversation was growing exceedingly irksome.

"I have thought so much of the old ones," he continued; "I have found home fearfully dull, I sought what little comfort I could find abroad."

"I sincerely hope you will find the comfort you seek, Mr. Hampton," she replied, with the artless simplicity of a child.

"I have found it now for the first time in many weeks," he said.

Loraine was certainly blind not to have read the meaning in those dark, reckless, flashing, eager eyes, bent so steadily upon her face, so deaf that she could not hear it in the modulation of his low, intense voice.

"I am pleased you think so well of Switzerland," she said simply.

"It is not that," he answered, quite impatient that she did not understand him more fully. "I shall always like the Savoy, for the pleasant associations of this one evening, Loraine."

She looked at him in wonder.

"Loraine," he said, sorrowfully and respectfully, drawing his chair closer to where she sat. "You must not chide me for what I am going to say, the words have trembled upon my lips for months, I must speak, if I am never permitted to look upon your face again. Can you tell why I left America, why home had lost all charms for me, and why I came to Savoy?"

"I cannot even guess," she replied.

"I was ever haunted by a beautiful face— a face that was dearer to me than my very life, one whom I would have died to have called my wife. You cannot imagine such a depth of love; words cannot explain it!"

"I can, and do fully understand such a love, Mr. Hampton; such is my love for Ulmont; I never could find words to fully express it."

It was well the shadow of night fell between them. Loraine Ulvesford would have started back in horror had she beheld the terrible expression on the darkly-handsome face turned from her, or could have probed the terrible resolve that lay brooding in his heart.

The one answer Loraine had spoken, forged the last link in the fatal chain of his thoughts.

Had she breathed those words standing near a cliff, in his bitter anger, maddened at the thought of the wealth that might have been his had she but married him, he could not have answered for what he might have done.

"Your husband possesses a jewel in you, Loraine; one whose rare purity is a blessing to the sex."

As he spoke he quickly grasped both her small white hands that lay idly in her lap.

At that opportune moment Ulmont Ulvesford, with light, buoyant tread, sprang lightly up the steps, appearing suddenly before them.

As he glanced at the dark, handsome face of Heath Hampton, bowing low over Loraine's hands, he turned white to the very lips.

CHAPTER IX.

Jealousy.

Ulmont's amazement was scarcely exceeded by his annoyance upon recognizing Heath Hampton, whom he had left in Boston, bending over his wife's hand in far-off Switzerland, in that lover-like fashion; it reminded him too forcibly of the days when neither of them had been quite sure as to which was the favored one in Loraine's eyes.

A sudden, keen, quick pang of jealousy leaped into his heart; that torch which, once lighted, causes many a conflagration in hitherto peaceful homes.

Ulmont had quite forgotten the old unhappy forebodings that had enfolded him.

Heath Hampton's face, dark, flashing and brilliant, filled him with a strange sense of pain.

He had thought he had Loraine all to himself.

He found himself wondering if it was merely a chance accident that brought Heath Hampton just then to Switzerland.

Ulmont knew, although they had been rivals, as his countryman he must greet him at least courteously, if not cordially.

The Ulvesfords were a deep-loving race, self-willed and exacting.

"I could never accept half a heart," Ulmont had often said. "I must have the whole, or I relinquish all. One whom I love must give not even one thought to another."

"My dear boy, you are surprised to see me in Switzerland, I imagine," Hampton said, with a warm, hearty hand-shake, "but I assure you not more so than I myself at being here. I heard you were in Savoy, and I promised myself the pleasure of calling."

It was only accidental then.

Ulmont felt relieved.

Heath Hampton possessed the happy faculty of making himself exceedingly agreeable to men as well as the fair sex, and before the evening wore away Ulmont was seriously pondering if he did not do him an injustice by harboring the suspicion which for a brief time had disturbed him.

Loraine had excused herself and retired to her own room, leaving them alone together to chat over old times as they puffed their Havanas, and by the time Heath Hampton parted from Ulmont it was agreed he should stay the following week at Savoy, making one of their party and returning home to America.

A deep, meaning smile hovered for an instant about Heath Hampton's mouth.

"Capital," he muttered, under his breath, meanwhile inwardly wondering at Ulmont's trustfulness, who little dreamed that the serpent, who had slowly but surely gained an entrance into this peaceful Eden, would turn upon the hand that had given it shelter.

"So, so!" muttered Hampton that night, as he slowly retraced his steps to his lodgings. "I had not expected such an easy victory— the leaven works well; Loraine shall reach America and so shall I; but mark me, I have sworn by the fortune he swept from my grasp, the green vales of Switzerland shall be Ulmont Ulvesford's tomb, and those icy towers his monument!"

Meanwhile Ulmont was wondering, as he entered the room where she sat, what she would say when he told her Heath Hampton had decided to remain in Savoy, accompanying them on their homeward trip to America.

An exclamation of surprise and dismay broke from Loraine's lips, which she instantly repressed. No matter what her own secret feelings were on the subject, she believed she had no right to raise an objection if her husband really desired his presence. While Ulmont, as he watched Loraine's face narrowly, was thinking:

"How foolish I was, after all, to ever imagine my Loraine cared for Heath Hampton."

The week that followed was the most eventful one that had ever come to the gay, careless life of Ulmont Ulvesford; a week which brought the bitterest of bitter fruits, which were to be deep sown in his heart.

There were strange whisperings among the tourists, who watched with darkening brows the assiduous attention the dark-browed stranger paid the beautiful, stately, fair-haired wife.

Was the young husband mad, they asked themselves, to permit it? Why was he so blind?

Every one, even the most exacting, could see that the fair young wife, in action, thought and word, was as pure as the white lilies that lay on the tranquil bosom of the stream down in the smiling valley.

She was utterly innocent and ignorant of the world of sin, or the flowery paths that led to its horrible brink.

One friend, more daring than the rest, who had a fair young bride of his own, whom he quite idolized, ventured to remonstrate with Ulmont in a mild way.

"I have heard Mr. Hampton was quite attached to your wife at one time, Mr. Ulvesford," he said carelessly.

"That was all nonsense," laughed Ulmont, good-humoredly; "he had quite a fancy for my wife at one time, I believe. We have often laughed over our wine about it since."

"There are many men whose first love is the one grand, supreme passion of their lives," remarked Wylmer Lee, gravely.

"How seriously you are inclined to treat such trifling matters," said Ulmont thoughtfully, lighting his cigar, and waving the curling rings of smoke away with his hand.

"Contemplation makes me serious," remarked his fellow traveler; "I have seen much of life in my time. Why do you know," he continued energetically, "I would as soon think of a sleek tiger creeping stealthily into the fold where my lambs were treasured, as to see an old lover holding my wife's hand, or gazing into her eyes with poisonous adulation upon his lips."

"A man's wife should be held above all reproach, all censure; she whom he trusts with his life's happiness, can guard his honor," responded Ulmont, proudly; but even though he spoke confidently, a thousand doubts and fears were busy with his imagination.

He did not care to admit, even to himself, he had not acted wisely in permitting his wife's old lover to join their party.

Had not the past proven conclusively which one of them Loraine had loved?

"Pshaw!" he said to himself. "How absurd of me to indulge in such ridiculous fancies!"

Still, the arrow had pierced his heart; he was a prey to conflicting emotions.

There is nothing that rends the heart, that destroys all hope, that ruins a life by arousing the keenest sorrow so quickly as the pangs of jealousy, the worst disease which can afflict the human race.

Ulmont would have died before he would have doubted, for an instant, the beautiful, peerless Loraine; still, he realized he had made a mistake in playing with fire that had once burned with a passionate flame.

How could he tell that love for his beautiful Loraine did not still slumber in Heath Hampton's heart?

He remembered vividly how the Count de Risnar, a personal friend of Hampton's, had engaged him so often for hours at a time in his subtle, graceful way, while Heath Hampton invariably talked with Loraine.

On Ulmont's previous visit to France he had met the Count de Risnar; once they had differed slightly in opinion on some trifling matter; those who heard the debate were unanimously in favor of Ulmont's theory the count had submitted with the courtly grace of his race, but then and there he had registered a bitter vow of vengeance against the young American.

He would humble him yet, in the very dust at his feet. He meant to keep his word; he was shrewd and far-seeing.

When he learned Heath Hampton had once been the lover of Loraine Ulvesford, he saw a way to work out that revenge.

He well knew the cruelest blow he could inflict upon Ulmont's haughty heart, was through his beautiful young bride.

Still, with all his suave manners and subtle arts, the count owned to himself he was not more cunning than Heath Hampton.

This was the link that bound these two so closely.

Strange thoughts had found lodgment in Ulmont's breast since that conversation with Wylmer Lee.

Could it be his imagination only that his friends dropped their voices to almost a whisper when he came unexpectedly among them, or ceased speaking altogether?

Of what were they talking? Was it possible they, too, thought — but, pshaw! Why give himself unnecessary annoyance?

It was a lovely day preceding their departure for America. Ulmont never forgot that terrible day; it stood out clear and distinct upon his mind for many a year afterward.

That morning he had gone with Loraine to see the sun rise for the last time on the Alps.

The first golden rays were peeping above the huge, icy pillars, lighting them up with a thousand arrowy sparkles; a waterfall struck by its rays, fell in fiery orange foam down the red and blue sparkling walls of a beautiful glacier, losing itself in the still bluer mist of the double dome below, that seemed to spread out like transparent, purple glass, gradually

Died in Toronto.

Mr. T. E. Boddy, the popular uptown agent of the C.P.R., received the sad intelligence yesterday of the death of his mother, which took place early yesterday morning, at the residence of Mr. Boddy's sister, Toronto. Mr. Boddy left for Toronto yesterday. The deceased lady was 87 years of age, and had nearly always lived with her son here. She had been on a visit to her daughter when the death messenger came.

Good Fishing

The Trent Valley Canal is a good place to fish in. Since the dam between Peterborough and Lakefield has been constructed large bodies of water has accumulated at these points, which furnish fine ponds for bass and maskinonge. Last week Mr. Herb Kendry pulled out a large number of bass at Auburn, and further up even better catches have been made. On Thursday a fishing party at the second lock caught fourteen bass in a couple of hours.

Heavy Wood Shipment

Large quantities of wood are being brought to Lakefield by the steamers, where it is being shipped to Peterborough by train. The Rathburn Company is having nearly 2,000 cords shipped here, mostly four foot hardwood. The steamers on the Stony Lake waters have more than they can do for the balance of the season. Next season, when the Canal is completed to Smith street, the necessity for shipping by rail will be avoided.

Two Years Abed.—"For eight years I suffered as no one ever did with rheumatism; for two years I lay in bed; could not so much as feed myself. A friend recommended South American Rheumatic Cure. After three doses I could sit up. To-day I am as strong as ever I was."—Mrs. John Cook, 287 Clinton street, Toronto.—8

Eight Days in Open Sea

Seattle, Wash., October 6.—Eight days at sea in an open boat, with plenty of food but not a drop of freshwater, was the painful experience of Samuel Dutton and John Bauer, two Alaska miners, who started out from Nome September 15 to round the cape on a prospecting trip. They were caught in the great storm, were blown out to sea and left in a helpless condition until they were rescued by the steamer Centennial, which has arrived here with the unfortunate miners aboard.

The Bobcaygeon Railway

That a railway will soon be constructed from Lindsay to Bobcaygeon, there is every reason to believe. Peterborough is apathetic, and when it is too late she will discover that the back country trade is a big thing. From the Bobcaygeon Independent we learn that work was commenced on Tuesday, on the Pontypool and Bobcaygeon Railway. Mr. Jennings, of Toronto, has charge of the engineering, and under his directions, Messrs. McDougall and McFarlane, assisted by Mr. Morgan Johns, commenced a survey of the line at the head of the island. Soundings of the river were made, and the party is now on its way towards Lindsay. Work is to be commenced as soon as the plans are fyled.

DO YOU KNOW

THAT WEAKENED NERVES PRODUCE DISEASE AND SUFFERING?

Paine's Celery Compound

The Only True Nerve Medicine And Nerve Food

IT BUILDS UP AND KEEPS IN PERFECT CONDITION THE GREAT NERVOUS SYSTEM.

When the marvellous complexity, delicacy and power of the mysterious nerve system is fully realized, we are not surprised at the sweeping assertion of Dr. Laning, Professor of Clinical Medicine in Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago, that "all diseases are due to lesions of the nervous system," or, in other words, disease results from a weakened or disturbed nervous system.

It was the life work of that great physician, Dr. Phelps, to give suffering men and women a medicine that would act directly on the nervous system. Dr. Phelps succeeded nobly and well. He placed Paine's Celery Compound before some of the ablest physicians that ever assembled in Dartmouth Medical College. It met with their full approval, and they at once prescribed it in their practice, and found it a life saver when other means failed.

To-day tens of thousands sound the praises of Paine's Celery Compound. In every city, town and village of this continent, people are found who owe their life and good health to Paine's Celery Compound, nature's nerve medicine and nerve food.

If you are sleepless, irritable, despondent, morose, or have flushes, chills, coldness of hands and feet, deficient tone in the stomach and intestines, bear in mind your nervous system needs attention and repairing. No other medicine but Paine's Celery Compound can do the good work for you, and make you what you should be, vigorous, strong and happy.

Delays are dangerous. The little aches and pains of to-day may to-morrow develop into agonies and miseries. One bottle of the wonderful compound will work a mighty and happy change.

MISTAKE IN BOUNDARY SURVEY

Course of Needle Deflected by the Metal in Mount Baker

New Whatcom, Wash., Oct. 8.—In the present dispute of the international boundary line location near Mount Baker, it is stated on good authority that a peculiar phenomenon transpired during the survey at that point. When the line was being run along in the early days the course of the needle was deflected, it was supposed afterward, by the metal in Mount Baker, and the survey was inaccurate. This made the line several miles out of the way before the mistake was rectified and the advantage was given to the Canadian side of the line.

When the mistake was found out it was rectified, but may not have been sufficiently marked the second time. The boundary is the forty-ninth parallel, and it is simply a problem of locating this parallel.

Vancouver, B. C., October 6—Colonel L. Edwin Dubley, the American Counsul at Vancouver, has been appealed to by American mine owners on the disputed territory in Mount Baker district at the international boundary regarding the seizure of the pack train in the disputed territory by United States collectors of customs.

The pack train was on the road to mines owned by Mr. Lane of San Francisco, claimed to be in Canadian territory by the Candian government surveyor, who has just delimited the boundary. Mr. Lane has registered his mines in Westminister, B.C., as well as in Sumas, N. W. T. According to Canadian Surveyor Deane, the United States has been in quiet possession of territory a mile and a half wide and many miles long that they have no right to.

Address to the Electors

To the Free and Independent Electors of West Peterborough—

Gentlemen,—Having accepted the unanimous nomination of the Liberals of this Riding, as a candidate for its representation in the House of Commons I hereby respectfully solicit your support in securing my return at the coming general elections.

The grounds upon which I base my appeal are not so much nor chiefly by any means, my personal fitness for the position of your representation though as a citizen of Peterborough and interested in its progress in common with that of the country, I can and do premise, if elected, an intelligent support of such a public policy and such measures as will best conduce to the promotion of all the interests of Canada, the developement of her great resources and the general betterment of the civil moral and material condition of the public; and my best abilities and most assiduous attention shall be devoted to the faithful discharge of my representative duties.

The strongest ground, however, of my appeal consists in the fact that I am a firm supporter of the Liberal Government led by Sir Wilfred Laurier, which is entitled to the renewed confidence of the people, both on the ground of its policy and the splendid record established by the application of that policy. The Liberal party appealed to the country in 1896 upon a clearly defined policy and the promised results followed.

The Liberal party promised a reduction of a high tariff that hampered our industrial and agricultural interests and was hostile to the Mother Country.

The tariff was materially reduced and outwise improved and in such a way as to help instead of hinder the manufacturer and farmer, with the consequence that never before in the history of the country hav eour industries or our farmers enjoyed such great prosperity, our mechanics and working men such constant employment and high wages, nor our commerical and all other interests so flourished.

Our domestic and foreign trade have also greatly increased. The loyal gift of a trade preference, represented by a tariff reduction on British goods of 33 1-3 per cent., and our despatch of the Canadian Contingent, have resulted in a kindlier feeling towards Canada and greatly increased trade with the Mother Country.

With a largely reduced rate of tariff, our revenue has greatly expanded so that the Government was warranted in practicing true economy (reducing our postal rate one third, giving Imperial penny postage,) and premitting of the completion of great public works, deepening our canals, so long trifled with, pushing the work on the Trent Valley Canal which is now urged and will be urged to completion by the Liberal Government, and the application of a vigorous policy of general development and improvement of our transportation facilities, resulting and to result in easier access to the British market and better prices for all our products.

I cannot obviously here, enter into details of how, in other ways the Liberal Government has implemented its promises and applied its policy, but with these and other public questions, I shall have an opportunity during the campaign of more fully dealing

As a supporter of such a Government I can appeal with confidence for the support of the Electors of West Peterborough, knowing that by helping to give, as you will do, through my election, a renewal of the trust the Liberal Government has discharged with such evident and gratifying results, they will be conferring a great and lasting good upon this riding, the country at large, and securing a continuation of the great blessings of prosperity and good government we now enjoy.

Again soliciting your support, your votes, and influence, in this contest,

I have the honor to be,
gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
J. H. McCLELLAN

ATTACK of ROYAL CANADIANS at Paardeberg

The present is a time when war pictures are in greater demand than ever. The conduct of the British soldiers on the battlefield has won the plaudits of admiring nations. We have at great expense published four large, beautiful pictures size 20x24, on heavy, superfine calendered paper. A picture that will commend itself and send a thrill to the heart of every true Canadian is the one called Attack of Royal Canadians at Paardeberg, there are literally hundreds of figures on this picture, the mountains or kopjes stretching out into the distance are swarming with men, while here and there a prostrate figure speaks only too well of the Boer rifleman. It was on this battlefield the gallant Major Arnold met death unflinchingly. Indeed, it is only too true that many of those gallant hearts that beat so high when the cheering thousands bade them Godspeed as they sailed from Canada's shores now lie still forever in lonely graves on the other side of the world under African skies. To every Canadian heart, to every Canadian home, the deeds of their brave soldier boys speak with an irresistible thrill of patriotism and pride. Gordon Highlanders at the Battle of Belmont, Charging the Boer Guns at Elandslaagte and the Charge of Gen. French's Cavalry on the Retreating Gen. Cronje's Army. These are all stirring pictures and cannot fail to commend themselves to anyone who will examine them. They are RED HOT SELLERS! Agents coin money. Big profits. Enormous success. One agent sold 68 in one day. Sample and terms 25 cts (none free); four for 80 cts; $1.75 per dozen; 25 for $3.25; 50 for $6.00; 100 for $11.00. Write to day for a dozen and make money. CANADA BUSINESS COLLEGE
Chatham, Ont.

Is doing more for its pupils than any other business school in Canada, or perhaps, than any other in the continent. How can we do this? First.

First: By giving them a practical, not a theoretical, preparation for business life.

Second: The business public has learned that there is this vast difference between the graduates of this school and those of other colleges, hence the strong demand for our graduates, which has enabled 2?0 to be placed in good positions between Sept., '99, and July, '00 a period of ten months.

The good work still goes on, and 73 have been placed between July 1st and Sept. 1st of this year.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT DISSOLVED ELECTIONS ON NOVEMBER 7TH

The Laurier Government at Last Announces the Date of the Elections.

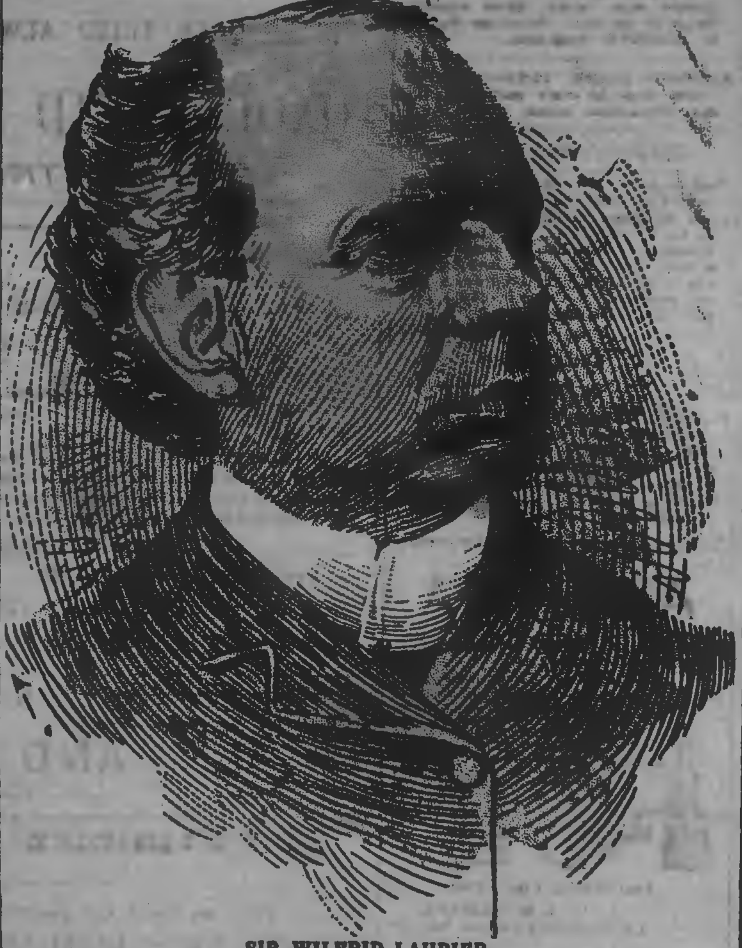
FOUR WEEKS' FIGHT.

The Campaign Now in Full Swing.

A BITTER CONTEST.

To Be One of the Hottest Ever Experienced in Canada."

Grits and Tories Alike Are Full of Determination.



SIR WILFRID LAURIER

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—The proclamation dissolving Parliament is issued today in a special of the Canada Gazette. The dates for the elections are—Nomination, Wednesday, October 31; polling, November 7. The writs are made returnable on December 5th. This allows the shortest space of time to elapse between dissolution and nomination on record. In 1891, the next shortest period, the time allowed was 28 days, this year there are only 22 days. It is stated that everything is ready and that the Government have not taken the final plunge into the unknown until they have the whole of their preparations well in hand and their own men well primed. It is stated that the step was finally decided at Monday's council and that his Excellency's consent having been obtained, Mr. Justice Taschereau, the Deputy Governor, signed the order. This being so, it is probably the first time that a Deputy Governor has ever signed an Order-in-Council for the dissolution of Parliament. After the Council Sir Wilfrid Laurier left for Quebec to commence stumping and he will be accompanied as far as Montreal by Hon. Wm. Mulock. The writs will be sent out by to-day's mail, having all been prepared in advance and held in readiness. The work of registration in cities and county towns in those provinces where there is manhood suffrage, will therefore have to be commenced at once. With this object Boards of Registration will immediately commence work. In Ottawa both sides are ready with sufficient claims to keep the Board busy twenty-four hours a day for the whole of the four days during which they are supposed to sit. House to house canvass has been made and every means used to secure the registration of all who are entitled to vote. Those Ministers who have seats in the Commons are scattering to their various constituencies, or to stump the country in aid of weaker members of the party. Sir Richard Cartwright is here temporarily, and Hon. James Sutherland has made Ottawa his headquarters for a time. Hon. R. W. Scott and Hon. David Mills, who have seats in the Senate, will hold the Ottawa end of the Government business down for their colleagues whilst the short, sharp struggle endures. As the contest is to be the shortest on record, also every report indicates that it will be by far the sharpest and hardest that has been fought for many years.

The choice of a Wednesday as the day of polling attracts some attention, as it is only the second time in twenty-five years that this day has been selected for the purpose, all the other elections having taken place on a Tuesday. Though the writs are returnable on December 5th there is nothing to necessitate the meeting of the new House of Parliament until July 18th, 1901, the anniversary of prorogation this year. The issue of the proclamation or even oft he writs does not actually kill the old Parliament, which in case of absolute emergency might be called to assemble on any date up to that set for the return of the writs of the coming election.

Sir Richard Cartwright left for Kingston this morning, and Hon. James Sutherland leaves for Woodstock to-morrow.

FEELING AT MONTREAL.

Montreal, Oct. 9.—The announcement of the dissolution of Parliament was received here with satisfaction by both political parties and the general public. The Liberals claim to have organization in and around the district of Montreal perfect, and say they expect to gain a few seats. The Conservatives are equally confident, and express themselves satisfied with prospects. They also claim to have perfect organization.

WEATHER NOTES.

Probs. Light to moderate variable winds, fine and cool. To-day.

Rain has fallen heavily in uQebec and the Maritime Provinces; elsewhere the weather has been fine. The indications are low for a spell of fine weather, generally with higher temperature in the Territories and Manitoba and a gradual rise after to-day in Ontario.

British Elections Slow

Twenty-One Constituencies Only Were Busy Yesterday

London, Oct. 9.—The elections are dragging on, the returns from the counties being belated. Captain J. Sinclair, who was Lord Aberdeen's secretary in Canada, has been re-elected in Forfarshire after a strenuous fight. He is one of the few officers of the British army who is a sincere Radical.

The Right Hon. H. C. Hemphill has again carried North Tyrone by a narrow majority, and retains the distinction of being the only Liberal representative in Ireland.

The other contests are chiefly remarkable for the steadiness of the voting on each side, when the general result of the election is no longer in doubt.

Among the brides of the week is Lady Constance Osborne, who has been helping her bridegroom in the Lancashire contest for Parliament.

YESTERDAL'S POLLING.

Polling took place in twenty-one constituencies yesterday, but only five of the results have yet been declared, and of these two have been gains for the Liberal party. The divisions in which the changes occurred had, however, been Radical until 1895, when the ywere captured by the Unionists.

Perhaps one of the most notable features of the results was the exceedingly narrow majority by which Mr. H. T. Anstruther, one of the Government whips, retained his seat for St. Andrew's in Scotland.

The returns now show a net Unionist gain of five seats; 327 supporters and 165 opponents of the Ministry having been elected.

THE NEXT ADMINISTRATION.

Rumours of Government reconstruction are rife just now. According to the Daily Telegraph, all the members of the Cabinet have, as a formality, placed their resignations in Lord Salisbury's hands in order to facilitate any reconstruction that may be in contemplation.

Mr. Chamberlain is continuing his electoral campaign in the Midlands, and last night he vigorously repudiated the Opposition theory of his individual responsibility for the war in Africa.

DAVIS AND THE BOERS.

FUND TO ELECT BRYAN SECURED FROM OOM PAUL KRUGER.

Friend of Kruger Tells of a Confidence Game He Says Davis Worked a Conspiracy in Which a Number of Americans are Concerned.

London, Oct. 9.—Douglas Story, the close personal friend of President Kruger, President Steyn, General Joubert, and other Transvaal leaders, who did excellent service in the early part of the war as the correspondent of the Daily Mail with the Boer forces, has a remarkable story over his own signature in this morning's Mail. It bears the caption—"Boer Gold for America; a true history of a Sordid Intrigue."

The article charges Web Davis with having led the Boers to believe that he could by his oratory so arouse the people of the United States that intervention would result. Davis is alleged to have been paid $125,000.

The story goes on to say that "the South African war was born in a Hollander intrigue, was maintained by a variety of continental intrigues, and will be buried in an American intrigue."

HISTORY A SORDID TALE.

"The history of these intrigues is a sordid and commonplace narrative of a few men gambling with human lives and nations to secure for themselves a paltry money profit. One of the most sordid, and in its details the most commonplace, of these conspiracies is that whereby the Boer statesman hoped to secure the election of Bryan to the United States Presidency, and so purchase his active interference on behalf of the Transvaal in the settlement negotiations with Great Britain.

"Mean and paltry as are the innermost workings of this intrigue, its effects are far-reaching and of the gravest import to the destinies of Great Britain and the United States.

PART TAKEN BY AMERICANS

"At the commencement of the war the United States was represented at Cape Town by Colonel Stowe, a prudent, honourable American gentleman; at Pretoria by Charles E. Macrum, a man of slight education and no social standing, and at Lourenzo Marquez by Hollis, a little man who had been in trouble with the authorities for the ill-treatment of natives on the east coast and who was in no sense persona grata with the leading American citizens at the Portuguese port. To assist him in his work at Pretoria Macrum had as his Vice Consul a Hollander named Van Aemeringen, who became a neutralized American citizen."

UNDER INFLUENCE.

After charging that Hollis worked up a good business for himself and a coterie by shipping contraband goods to the Boers, and how it was made profitable for Macrum to defy his government's definite instructions, Story continues—

"Some little time before the outbreak of hostilities there arrived in Pretoria an American named Easton, nominally a representative of a New York paper, and until recently the private secretary of Webster Davis. Easton's travelling expenses to Pretoria were defrayed by Davis, and he was in reality the avant-courier of that gentleman. After many long consultations with Secretary of State Reits and Attorney-General Smutz, Macrum and Easton decided on a course of action. On Nov. 7 Macrum cabled to Secretary of State Hay demanding permission to visit America. Secretary Hay refused, but the course of events and a number of further cables from Macrum showed it was not desirable that he be kept at Pretoria. Accordingly he was replaced by Secretary Hay's own son. No better selection could have been made. Consul Hay and Vice-Consul Coolidge worked night and day on behalf of the prisoners of war, the refugees, and those few British residents who had received orders to proceed upon commando. Both gentlemen spent large sums of their private means for the relief of the sufferers of the war.

MACRUM LEAVES PRETORIA.

"Meanwhile Macrum, with £15,000, a Boer honorarium in his pocket, and Easton left Pretoria for the United States, passing Davis en route.

"That now famous American envoy reached Pretoria on Jan. 24, and passed under the chaperonage of Hollis, the Acting Consul, in the Boer capital. He speedily attained a remarkable popularity.

DAVIS UNDER FALSE COLORS.

"To assist his dignity he was freely introduced as the United States Secretary of State, and the rumor was assiduously circulated that McKinley owed his success in the last Presidential election wholly to Davis' electioneering. In him was recognized the saviour of the Boers, and he daily received a secret audience in the executive chamber at the government buildings. At those councils there were always present Schalk, Burger, Walmarans, the peace envoy, and Attorney General Smuts.

"The result of these conferences was that Davis received from the Boer government a handsome douceur in return for which he was to set the United States afire with enthusiasm for the Boers. On Feb. 5 Davis returned to Pretoria and in a few days left for the United States richer by a fortnight's experience in South African politics and £25,000 ($125,000) in Transvaal gold."

Story gives brief and accurate explanation of Macrum's experiences with the Washington government upon his return, and then concludes—

"The theory upon which the Boers founded their faith was that in the United States there was a large, bitter anti-English public, composed of Germans and Irishmen. All of these were, by assumption, pro-Boer. If Davis, with his fine oratorical gifts and happy ignorance of South Africa, could arouse them with false enthusiasm, Bryan's election would be a certainty, and in his intervention in behalf of the Boers an assumed corallary.

WAIT FOR ELECTION OF BRYAN.

"And so to-day such Boers as are still fighting remain in the field to await the announcement of the result of the polls on Nov. 6 next.

"Kruger has lost faith in Davis and is over the border.

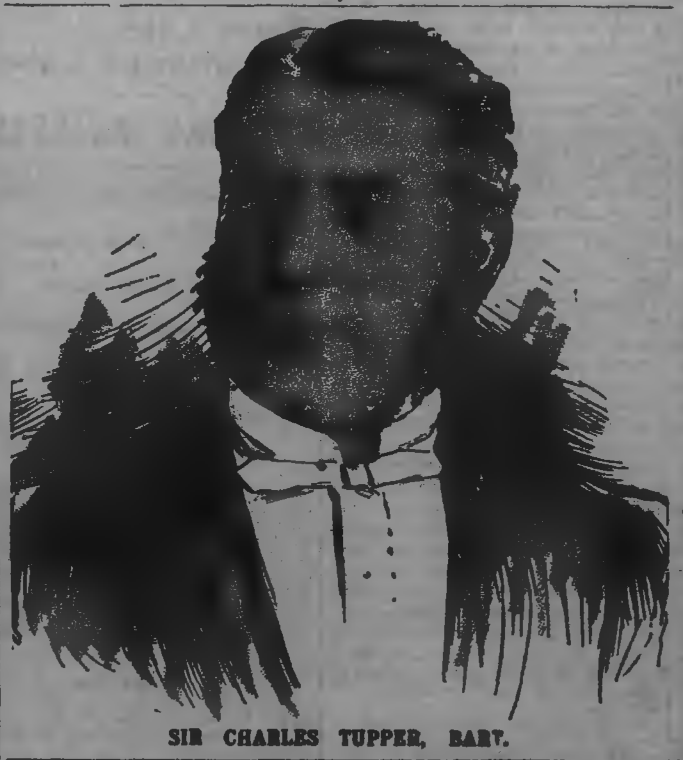
"The Boers, however, did not rest content with these heavy disbursements. They dispatched Montagu White, recently the Consul of the South African republic, to London with some £200,000 ($1,000,000) to expend on pro-Boer meetings in the United States. That money has been widely circulated in America."

The Steamer Oceanic Nearly on the Rocks

The Big White Star Liner Narrowly Escapes Wreck—No Panic on Board

New York, Oct. 9.—The Evening World has a copyrighted despatch from Queenstown, which says.

The Giant White Star Liner Oceanic, which arrived here to-day, had a narrow escape from shipwreck off the coast of Ireland. While approaching the coast at 4 a.m. and trying to pick up the Fastnet light, breakers were suddenly seen crashing on the rocks ahead and the vessel touched bottom. Captain Cameron immediately reversed his engines; the watertight compartments were closed; the life boats were cleared away, and the crew were at quarters at once. The big ship got back into deep water without being injured. There was no panic.



SIR CHARLES TUPPER, BART.

Confessed the Insurance Fraud

Detective Agency used to Cloak Grave Crimes in Chicago

Chicago, Oct. 9.—Frank M. Smiley, the detective of the Mooney & Boland Agency, who was one of the men arrested yesterday in connection with the Insurance frauds, which ended with the death of Marie Defenbach, Aug. 25th, has made a full written confession of his part in the crime.

The confession, if true, implicates with him Dr. August Unger and Frank Wayland Brown, assistant manager of the Mooney & Boland Agency, the other two men were under arrest.

Smiley will turn States evidence, and States Attorney Deneen expects that all three men will be convicted of conspiracy to defraud the New York Life Insurance Company, and the two benevolent orders, the Canadian Order of Foresters, and the Knights and Ladies of Security, but it is very doubtful whether any charge of murder can even formally be made on the evidence available.

At least one other man connected with the Mooney & Boland Agency, is now under surveillance for suspicious actions at the time of Miss Defenbach's heath, and it is not improbable that several other conspirators may yet be connected with the crime.

WAS IT MISS DEFENBACH?

The Canadian benefit society mentioned in a Chicago despatch as having issued a $5,000 policy on the life of Miss Mary Defenbach, whose suspicious death has aroused a wide enquiry and three arrests, is the Independent Order of Foresters. Assistant Supreme Chief Ranger Harper, speaking of the matter, said that there was some doubt as to whether Miss Defenbach and not a substitute, had actually died. Dr. Schroeder, the court physician in Chicago, tended Miss Defenbach, or the substitute, for dysentery. She died at midnight and the body was taken to the undertaker to be embalmed. After the embalming process traces of poison were not readily discernible.

The I.O.F. made special enquiries after receiving Miss Defenbach's application, but she was reported as a good risk.

THREE HEROES RECEIVE THE VICTORIA CROSS

Greatly Coveted Decoration was Conferred for Gallantry in Africa

RUDYARD KIPLING RECOMMENDS A SOLDIER

Plucky Garrison Relieved by General Settle with 7000 Men—British Government Will Give Pensions

Cape Town, Oct. 9.

Mr. Cecil Rhodes will re-enter politics to-morrow, when he will preside over the deliberations of the Congress of the South African League.

London, Oct. 9.—The much-coveted distinction of the Victoria Cross has, the London Gazette, states, been bestowed upon Captain William Engleson Gordon, of the Gordon Highlanders, Private C. Ward, 2nd Battalion King's Own (Yorkshire Light Infantry), and Corporal J. Shaul, of the Highland Light Infantry.

BOERS OCCUPY WEPENER.

Cape Town, Oct. 9.—The Boers now occupy Wepener, as well as Rouxville and Ficksburg in Orange River Colony, and the British are attempting to surround them.

MONEY FOR DISABLED ONES.

London, Oct. 9.—The Government has at last resolved to make adequate provision for the men wrecked in fighting their country's battles. All permanently disabled soldiers will have pensions of not less than 1s. 6d per day, and most will be given more, rising to 3s. 6d, for the higher non-commissioned officers.

Mr. Wyndham announced in his speech on Tuesday night at Dover, that the Government had now ordered modern guns for coast defences to the extent of £5,807,000, making with pervious orders seven millions in all.

SCHWEIZER RENEKE SAVED.

Vryburg, Oct. 8.—General Settle, with a force of 7,000 men, has relieved the garrison of Schweizer Reneke, after an engagement in which the Boers suffered heavy loss. The Boer commandant was captured. Schweizer Reneke—thirty-six miles southeast of Vryburg, on the Harts river—was held by a tiny British garrison, which was surrounded by the Boers early in September. On September 17th, Lord Roberts reported that the defenders had strongly entrenched themselves, and having sufficient food, were in no danger of surrender so long as the provisions lasted. A relieving force was, however, being organized, comprising Paget's Horse, Cape Mount Rifles, and Diamond Field Horse and Scouts.

KIPLING AND THE SOLDIERS.

London, Aug. 9.—At a meeting of the Chichester Town Council, the mayor read a letter he had received from Mr. Rudyard Kipling recommending Lance-Corporal George Harris, of the 1st Essex Regiment, as a candidate for the post of school attendance officer for the city.

Mr. Kipling stated that he came down in the hospital train with Corporal Harris from Modder to Capetown after the battle of Paardeberg, where Harris was severely wounded in the right arm. The corporal had now taught himself to write very well with his left hand, and the post of attendance officer of the schools was one which with his regimental training he ling added. "My excuse for intruding is the placing and well-being of men who have suffered wounds and mutilation for their country."

The council elected a local tradesman formerly a councillor, to the post, he receiving ten votes to six recorded for Corporal Harris. The salary is a guinea per week.

TO RAISE HALF A MILLION.

Capetown, Oct. 8.—The Cape House of Assembly to-day passed a second reading of a bill to raise a loan of £500,000 to ensure the immediate payment of half the losses sustained by private persons through the war.

The Situation is More Gloomy

Correspondent of the Times Accuses Von Waldersee of Partiality

Pekin, Oct. 8.

The Pao Ting Fu expedition is waiting for the Germans, who are not ready to start. It is reported that there are 12,000 Chinese Imperial troops at Pao Ting Fu. Gen. Chaffee has returned here.

Pekin, Sunday Oct. 7, via Tien Tsin, Oct. 8, and Shanghai Oct. 9.—A response to the German demands has been transmitted to Li Hung Chang. This says that Ying Nien, President of the censorate, Kang Yi, Assistant Grand Secretary and President of Civil Board, and Chao Shu Ch Jao, President of the Board of Punishment, will be decapitated and that Prince Chwang, Duke Tsai Lan and Prince Yek Will be sentenced to light imprisonment and that Prince Tuan will be banished to the Imperial military post rides on the Siberian frontier, as further punishment for aiding the Boxers.

Pekin, Oct. 7, via Tien Tsin, Oct. 8, and Shanghai, Oct. 10.—Trustworthy Chinese reports say that the Dowager Empress is seriously ill at Tai Yuan Fu province of Shan Si, and that the free hand of the Emperor in affairs of State of late is regarded as confirmatory of these reports.

London, Oct. 9.—The Chinese troubles are no nearer settlement than they were a week ago. While the powers are hesitating as to the best course to adopt, the Imperial Government is establishing itself three hundred miles from Pekin so as to be perfectly secure against capture by foreign troops. Nothing of any value has yet been done towards punishing the bloodthirsty ruffians who have been guilty of so many murders. The allies have made up their minds to remain in China during the winter. Whatever happens in the next few months it is not likely that war with the Chinese will be resumed until next year, by which time the Orientals will be again in a position to offer effectual resistance. Upon the authority of Dr. Morrison, the correspondent of the Times, the allied generals are already intriguing for the benefit of their respective nations. Count Von Waldersee is accused of having placed in the hands of the French, Russians, and Germans the coal cupply of North China, effectually discriminating against the British, Americans, and the Japanese, upon whose naval movements this step is bound to have some effect. The centering of the coal supply in the hands of the nations mentioned also leads to the suspicion that the three continental powers may be approaching an agreement which would bring a triple alliance into effect in the far East and might easily cause a second triple alliance of Britain, America and Japan to counteract it. In the meantime Lord Salisbury is remaining outwardly passive, though there is little doubt that he is pulling many strings and evolving a policy that may surprise the world when he sees fit to announce it.

WALDERSEE SHOWS PARTIALITY.

London, Oct. 9.—The Shanghai correspondent of the Times, wiring October 7, says—

"[illegible] reported that French troops hold Lu Ko Chiao, on the Lu Han railway. The Russians and Germans hold the Pei Tang forts and have also taken Tong Shan and the Kai Ping mines, thus monopolizing the coal supply in North China.

"It was expected that Count Von Waldersee would maintain an even balance between the powers, whereas the actual result of the operations places all the strategic positions in the hands of other nations. A strong feeling prevails that the situation is daily becoming more gloomy."

FATSHAN IN AN UPROAR.

New York, Oct. 9.—The district of Fatshan is in an uproar, says a Herald despatch from Hong Kong. Anti-foreign placards are being liberally posted. A plot has been discovered to destroy all the missions.

FRANCE HAS A MERRY FEELING.

Paris, Oct. 9.—The officials of the French Foreign Office are elated over the reception which France's note has secured in Europe, and they are very hopeful and sanguine as to its results.

It is semi-officially announced to-day that the news received here from China is more reassuring than the English despatches make out; that an agreement between the powers will be arrived at on the basis of M. Delcasse's note; that the reported arrival of Li Hung Chang at Pekin has been confirmed, and that confirmation has also been received of the degradation of Prince Tuan.

RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT.

"There is no principle in the theory of responsible government more vital to its right working than that parties shall take their stand on the prominent questions of the day, and mount to office or resign it, through the success or failure of principles to which they are attached. This is the great safeguard for the public against clap-trap professions, and when strictly enforced it makes men seriously consider ere they commit themselves on leading questions. If a public man can hold one set of principles out of office, another set in office, responsible government is a farce."—Hon. George Brown.

ENGLAND MIGHT STARVE IN WAR TIME.

One reason why many Englishmen are disposed to favor a policy of mutual Imperial Preferential Trade that would encourage the growth of food products in the colonies is the fact that under the present system of importing food supplies from foreign countries it would be very easy for a combination of powers to starve Britain into submission in a few months. The report of the Yerburgh Committee on National Wheat Stores which was published several years ago stated that after harvest home in Britain the supply of wheat in the country was only sufficient to last fourteen weeks, and that after the first of March there never was more than six weeks' store of food on hand. The committee insisted that national wheat granaries were absolutely indispensable to the defence of the United Kingdom in time of war, and recommended the purchase by the Government of 8,000,000 quarters of wheat to be stored in magazines and renewed once in three years. Leading British newspapers in discussing the question at the time pointed out that even this reserved stock of food would serve for only fourteen weeks' supply, and suggested that a royal commission should be appointed to make an exhaustive enquiry into the national food supply in time of war.

The report was published while the Spanish-American war was in progress, and some of the British newspapers commenting on it pointed out that even if Great Britain were at peace with all the world a blockade of American ports by any power with which the United States happened to be at war would seriously embarass British consumers.

The imports of wheat represent only a small part of the food supplies which the United Kingdom gets from foreign countries and even in war time the British people would not be content to live on bread alone. They would want meat, cheese, butter, eggs and fruit, which could not be preserved in magazines in sufficient quantities to ensure a supply through a long war except at enormous expense.

The true solution of the problem is for the British Government to adopt a policy that will make the United Kingdom as independent of foreign countries as the United States is. It would be an easy matter for the British fleet to keep up safe communication between Canada and the United Kingdom. This country, with proper encouragement, could easily produce all the food the Mother Country requires except tropical products, which would not be essential in war time, and absolutely everything that the United Kingdom required in peace or in war, could be produced within the bounds of the British Empire in which every variety of soil and climate may be found. Inter-Imperial Preferential Trade would in a few years make the British Empire absolutely independent of the rest of the world.

Address to the Electors

To the Free and Independent Electors of West Peterborough—

Gentlemen.—Having accepted the unanimous nomination of the Liberals of this Riding, as a candidate for its representation in the House of Commons I hereby respectfully solicit your support in securing my return at the coming general elections.

The grounds upon which I base my appeal are not so much nor chiefly by any means, my personal fitness for the position of your representation though as a citizen of Peterborough and interested in its progress in common with that of the country, I can and do promise, if elected, an intelligent support of such a public policy and such measures as will best conduce to the promotion of all the interests of Canada, the developement of her great resources and the general betterment of the civil moral and material condition of the public; and my best abilities and most assiduous attention shall be devoted to the faithful discharge of my representative duties.

The strongest ground, however, of my appeal consists in the fact that I am a firm supporter of the Liberal Government led by Sir Wilfred Laurier, which is entitled to the renewed confidence of the people, both on the ground of its policy and the splendid record established by the application of that policy. The Liberal party appealed to the country in 1896 upon a clearly defined policy and the promised results followed.

The Liberal party promised a reduction of a high tariff that hampered our industrial and agricultural interests and was hostile to the Mother Country.

The tariff was materially reduced and outwise improved and in such a way as to help instead of hinder the manufacturer and farmer, with the consequence that never before in the history of the country hav eour industries or our farmers enjoyed such great prosperity, our mechanics and working men such constant employment and high wages, nor our commerical and all other interests so flourished.

Our domestic and foreign trade have also greatly increased. The loyal gift of a trade preference, represented by a tariff reduction on British goods of 33 1-3 per cent., and our despatch of the Canadian Contingent, have resulted in a kindlier feeling towards Canada and greatly increased trade with the Mother Country.

With a largely reduced rate of tariff, our revenue has greatly expanded so that the Government was warranted in practicing true economy (reducing our postal rate one third, giving Imperial penny postage,) and premitting of the completion of great public works, deepening our canals, so long trifled with, pushing the work on the Trent Valley Canal which is now urged and will be urged to completion by the Liberal Government, and the application of a vigorous policy of general development and improvement of our transportation facilities, resulting and to result in easier access to the British market and bette rprices for all our products.

I cannot obviously here, enter into details of how, in other ways the Liberal Government has implemented its promises and applied its policy, but with these and other public questions. I shall have an opportunity during the campaign of more fully dealing.

As a supporter of such a Government I can appeal with confidence for the support of the Electors of West Peterborough, knowing that by helping to give, as you will do, through my election, a renewal of the trust the Liberal Government has discharged with such evident and gratifying results, they will be conferring a great and lasting good upon this riding, the country at large, and securing a continuation of the great blessings of prosperity and good government we now enjoy.

Again soliciting your support, your votes, and influence, in this contest,

I have the honor to be,
gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
J. H. McCLELLAN

Women Wonder Why

They are doomed to so much suffering. But are they doomed? Is not the suffering the result of conditions which under skillful treatment might be entirely cured? Thousands of women who had been great sufferers, have learned that suffering was unnecessary after using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It heals diseases of the delicate womanly organs and banishes the headache, backache and other aches which are the consequence of these diseases.

"Favorite Prescription" is absolutely a temperance medicine in the strictest meaning of the term. It contains no alcohol and is free from opium, cocaine and all other narcotics.

"I wrote you for advice February 4th, 1896," writes Mrs. Lona Halstead, of Claremore, Cherokee Nat., Ind. Ty. "I was racking with pain from the back of my head down to my heels. Had hemorrhage for weeks at a time, and was unable to sit up for ten minutes at a time. You answered my letter, advised me to use your valuable medicines, viz., Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and 'Pleasant Pellets,' also gave advice about injections, baths and diet. To my surprise, in four months from the time I began your treatment I was a well woman and have not had the backache since, and now I can sit in sixteen hours a day at hard work."

Plans and specifications of the work can be seen on and after the 10th day of October, 1900, at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the Engineer's Office at Sault Ste. Marie. Printed forms of tender can also be obtained at the places mentioned.

In the case of firms there must be attached to the tender the actual signatures of the full name, the nature of the occupation and residence of each member of the same, and further an accepted bank cheque for the sum of $7,500, must accompany the tender. This accepted bank cheque must be endorsed over to the Minister of Railways and Canals, and will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work at the rates and on the terms stated in the offer submitted.

The accepted bank cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective parties whose tenders are not accepted.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Contractors are specially notified that the conditions requiring the work to be wholly completed by the 1st day of October, A.D., 1903, will be rigidly enforced, and all penalties for delay exacted.

Loraine's hands were clasped within his own; they were trembling slightly, and her face was very pale.

"I wish you had not brought me to this spot on the edge of the precipice, Ulmont," she whispered.

"Why, my love?" he asked, wonderingly. "This is the grandest and most sublime spot on the Alps."

"If I tell you why, you will not laugh at me, my husband?"

For answer he drew the golden head closer to his breast, kissing the rosy mouth.

"Certainly not, my sweet."

"I saw this very spot in my dreams last night," she answered slowly. "I thought you were standing on this very spot; others were around you, their dark faces between you and the sunlight. Your face was white, and you called out suddenly: "Loraine, my wife, where are you?' As I ran to you with outstretched hands, a woman's face came between us, a proud, beautiful, foreign face, with scornful lips and flashing eyes. As I turned from her in wonder, the beautiful face had vanished, the cold pillars of ice seemed to close over you, my husband, and I saw, standing there, only Heath Hampton, while beside him, a cruel smile on his lips, stood a dark-browed stranger.

CHAPTER X.

A Duel In The Alps.

All the day that followed, Heath Hampton hovered like a persistent shadow around Loraine, who was quite annoyed at his attention.

"Why," she asked herself, sorrowfully, "did Ulmont, her husband, seem to prefer the society of the Frenchman to her own, leaving her to spend the lonely hours as best she might in the society of Heath Hampton?"

The scenery from Loraine's window was sublime; yet, as she stood there in her royal, azure-tinted robe, the breeze toying with the soft lace that encircled her throat, and loosened her golden hair in which a spray of blossoms clung, she was not thinking of the beautiful sights upon which her eye rested; she had pushed aside her books, the very sunlight and the flowers tired her; she was glad, she told herself, she was to start for America on the morrow.

Loraine was waiting for her husband; she had no heart, no thought away from him, and the hours seemed dull and long which parted them.

Again she took up her book, but the story had no power to charm her.

She laid her fair young cheek on the crimson cover, with the question on her red lips:

"Why does Ulmont not come to me?"

Ah! it was well for Loraine Ulvesford she did not know why.

In another part of the building, where the tourists smoked their cigars, watching the sun-covered crags above and the crags beneath, Heath Hampton sat with a party of friends, including Dr Risnar.

Ulmont came among the group quite unnoticed, so engrossed were they in the recital of some story from the reminiscence of Hampton's exploits.

"Ah, yes, gentlemen," continued Hampton, buoyantly, "at that time I stood in high favor with the peerless beauty."

There were the fumes of wine on his breath and a reckless glance in his eye.

De Risnar, alone of the group, had noticed Ulmont's approach.

"It is a thousand pities you did not marry her then, but I suppose there is a double charm about her now that she is beyond your reach, eh, Hampton?" remarked some loquacious bystander.

A low, sardonic laugh broke from Heath Hampton's lips, a laugh that froze the blood in Ulmont's heart as he heard it.

"Loraine will always be the most charming girl in the world in my eyes; let us drink, gentlemen," he cried, "to the fair beauty of Loraine!"

A gentleman sitting a little apart from the rest, and who would hear no more, sprang to his feet, but he was too late; a strong arm forced him back, as a face white as death flashed past him, crying out:

"Sit down, Wylmer; thank God, I am here to protect my wife's fair name!"

The next instant Heath Hampton had received a stinging blow in the face that sent him reeling into De Risnar's arms.

"Now, coward that you are," cried Ulmont, white to the very lips, "apologize this instant for taking my wife's name thus wantonly upon your base lips, or your life shall pay the forfeit!"

"Never," cried Heath Hampton, recklessly, his cheeks flushed, and a baleful light gleaming in his eyes. "I repeat it. Let us drink to the peerless Loraine!"

"Ulvesford, for heaven's sake come away," cried Wylmer Lee, holding him back by main force, but he might as well have spoken to the winds.

Heath Hampton by this time had recovered himself, and hastily taking his glove from his pocket, his eyes flashing with a glaring, triumphant gleam, he flung it in Ulmont's face.

"I accept your challenge," said Ulmont, in a clear, ringing voice, having regained his composure; "and," he continued briefly, "this duel must be fought at once!"

"That suits me perfectly," answered Hampton.

"I will meet you in fifteen minutes at any place you may choose to name; is the time too short?" asked Ulmont, haughtily. "Say an hour from now in the old abbey above the village."

Ulmont bowed haughtily, while Hampton concluded:

"Our seconds will attend the rest."

Again Ulmont bowed coldly.

"Wylmer," he said, turning to Lee, who stood near him, "I am in need of a friend to-night— can I rely upon you?"

Wylmer Lee pressed his hand warmly— that one hearty clasp without words was enough. Ulmont Ulvesford knew that he would stand by him in life— or in death, if need be.

This was the ultimatum Wylmer Lee had long foreseen.

* * *

The dark sky was star- set, and a full moon had arisen, bathing the snow- covered grounds and ruins upon the extreme heights with a silvery radiance, giving the picturesque spot, upon which an awful tragedy was soon to be enacted, a quiet, peaceful look.

It was a lonely romantic spot, high up on the summit of the Alps. No sound could be heard save the whistling of the wind through the branches of the trees, and through the ivy-grown walls and deserted halls of the once grand old abbey, that had fallen into ruin.

The spot chosen for the duel was a clearing in the midst of the ruins.

On one side were high, perpendicular, icy crags; on the other a steep, slippery descent; its only canopy, the starry heaven and the meeting branches of the dark pine trees.

A memory, which Ulmont instantly suppressed, sprang to his lips.

"Heaven— can it be an ill omen?" he muttered, thoughtfully. "This is the exact spot Loraine saw in her dream!"

Wylmer Lee touched him on the arm.

"They are coming, Ulvesford," he said.

Another moment Heath Hampton De Risnar, and a small, wiry individual, enveloped in a dark cloak, and carrying a black leather case, appeared, who was introduced to Ulmont as the surgeon.

Few words passed between them. Proud, cold, defiant, and bitter, they stepped forth, swords in hand, out into the moonlight.

A silence, still as death, lasted for a second only. Then the combatants had crossed swords and the terrible work began; both felt the strength of his opponent's arm.

Heath Hampton was sure this would be a victory easily won. Only one thought rushed madly through Ulmont Ulvesford's brain— his wife, his beautiful Loraine, and his mother.

The thought gave renewed strength to his arm; one instant only he pressed his hand to his feverish brow; another instant and a terrible imprecation burst from Heath Hampton's lips, as his arm dropped heavily to his side. It was a never- to- be- forgotten scene by those who witnessed it. His sword fell to the icy ground with a dull clang.

"You have won the game this time, Ulvesford," he cried, hoarsely, bitterly, and still defiantly; "but mark me, there is still a future."

"There is also a present," responded Ulmont, sternly.

Seeing further satisfaction was at an end, as he was not one of those who would pursue a worsted foe, nor trample a fallen enemy, Ulmont turned on his heel, and followed by Wylmer Lee, left the spot, leaving the surgeon and the count with Heath Hampton and the solemn hush of the night.

A half hour later Ulmont entered the room where Loraine still sat, her white hands clasping the book which lay in her lap.

"Truant, how late you are," she said, playfully; "where were you?"

"I was unexpectedly detained," he replied.

"Thank you, dear, for your very lucid explanation; I know all about it now," she said, sweetly, with a pretty arched smile.

"I have certainly explained all worth knowing," he said. Loraine was sure she noticed a forced calmness in his voice.

She turned on the light and looked at her husband. She saw his face was colorless, with a hard, fixed expression about the mouth.

"What is the matter, Ulmont, my husband?" she cried, springing to his side, speechless with terror; "has anything happened? How white and ill you look!"

He sat down on the sofa, drawing her toward him, with a deep sigh, as replied:

"Nothing out of the usual order of events has happened, Loraine; everything is as it should be."

He did not care to tell her the truth— just then; not until he knew more of Heath Hampton's condition.

They sat for a few moments in silence; then Ulmont turned and looked upon his beautiful young wife in her artless, peerless beauty. She wore a soft, shining, violet silk; and just where she sat the lights from the colored lamps fell full upon her; one great dash of purple lay at her feet, a bar of crimson quivered on her breast, and on the beautiful head there shone a glow of gold; her lovely face was pale with wonder, yet it seemed like a fair, tender flower among the mystical lights.

"Loraine," said Ulmont, with a brave attempt at raillery, "if anything were to happen to me, would it change your love for me?"

For answer she led him to the window.

"Do you see that pale, serene moon," she said, "struggling athwart those fleecy clouds? The broad glare of day may hide it from our sight, and the dark clouds of night may for a while envelop it, yet we feel sure that calm, patient moon will struggle silently through all, and resume her constant vigil over the slumbering earth. My love shall be just as constant, Ulmont. Nothing could change my love for you; I have often thought I could never die and leave you, husband!"

As Ulmont looked down upon her he noticed all the dainty bloom had vanished from both cheek and lip, like a delicate blossom in a sudden frost.

"My sweet Loraine," he whispered, reverently, bending his head and caressing her white brow.

"Look, Ulmont!" she cried, in an awful whisper, holding his hand full up to the light; "oh, Ulmont — my husband— see! there is blood upon it."

CHAPTER XI.

Marks of Blood.

For a moment the husband and wife stood facing each other in ominous silence.

"Will you tell me how this came upon your hand, Ulmont?" she asked.

For one brief instant the impulse seized him to tell her all. He could not endure the glance of horror such a recital would bring to these blue eyes; Loraine, so pure and artless; what could he tell her what he had done for her sake?

He glanced down at the hand which the two dark spots defaced, quite at a loss how to account for them. His quick, keen perception soon showed him a loophole.

"I have been on a ramble to the old abbey ruins," he replied, carelessly; "I may have touched one of the jagged rocks in passing, but I really have no recollection of doing so; in fact, I had not noticed my hand until you called my attention to it."

Loraine took her handkerchief from her pocket—a small, delicate, flimsy affair of lace and perfume.

"Let me bind it up for you, dear," she said, earnestly.

Ulmont looked at the tiny bit of lace with an amused smile.

LOCATION OF OUR MINES

THE COLORADO COPPER MINING COMPANY is fortunate in being the possessor of five splendid showing properties in the great Salida copper belt, the principal copper producing region of this portion of the Rockies. All of our claims have been more or less developed and it is our purpose to put them on a paying basis at once.

Our company owns, clear of incumbrance, the following claims: The Salida Extension, the Salida Extension No. 2, which property adjoins the great Salida mine, which has been a big producer for upwards of seventeen years; the Copper King of Colorado, which immediately adjoins the above; the Copper Queen of Salida, a very promising property, only a few miles from the depot in Salida. This claim occupies an imposing position on a mountain just north of the city; and last, but by no means least, the [illegible], located two miles east of Salida, at Cleora Station, on the main trunk line of the great Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, also on the Arkansas river, which in length is one of America's greatest streams.

IN IT TEN YEARS.

An Unconscious Slave to Coffee.

"I had not the slightest idea that coffee was the cause of my continued sickness for the last ten years, until I quit its use and took up Postum Food Coffee. I never had a natural movement of the bowels during a number of years, because of chronic constipation, and I was constantly under the influence of medicine.

"Very frequently, just after breakfast a dizziness would come on, which would force me to lie down and remain absolutely quiet until relief came. I was also the victim of severe headaches, and miserable all the time. Two years ago last October it suddenly occurred to me that it was possible coffee was the real cause of my trouble.

"I therefore procured a package of Postum Food Coffee and began its use in place of coffee. At first trial I did not like it, and found some difficulty in sticking to my resolution, but I persevered and soon discovered that I had not made it properly. When it is boiled long enough, it has a delicious Java coffee taste and a beautiful deep, rich brown color, altogether it makes a charming beverage.

"I soon grew very fond of it; in fact, I liked it better than I did the old coffee. A very little change in my health occurred and this gradually increased, until in about two months, I discovered a marked change began to manifest itself. The bowels resumed their natural functions and the old dizzy feeling disappeared entirely, also the headaches.

"This complete change in health fixed my mind permanently and forever, never, under any circumstances, to go back to a drug that has held me a slave for ten long years. A curious thing about all this is that people do not realise the cause of their troubles. They go on year after year, just as I had, in drugging themselves with something that holds them in a condition of sickness and they don't seem to wake up to understand what it is that is the cause of the trouble. If such people could bring themselves to leave off coffee and use Postum Food Coffee, the trial would tell its own tale. Please omit my name." Name and address will be given by Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.

For Adoption.

The Children's Aid Society have the following children for adoption—William, aged 11; Louisa, 8; Louis, 4; Ethel 18 months. J. H. Burnham, Secretary.

Thorough Sportsmen

The Toronto Telegram of last evening has the following—Rollie McWilliams, the eminent young barrister who looks after the interests of Peterborough's football club, thinks his team will again win the Ontario and Canadian championships. There is nothing to it, Peterborough has a cracking fine team this season. It looks very much as if they would land the much-coveted trophies. Lionel King, M.D., musical doctor, who is at present in town, says that he does not see how the team can lose, and he should know, for he picked them to win last year.

For an aggregation of thorough sportsmen in every sense of the word the Peterborough Football Club can not be beaten.

MR. H. CALCUTT'S GENEROSITY

He Again Presents Prizes to the Pupils of Ashburnham Public School

Mr. Calcutt has more than once now shown his practical interest in the welfare of Ashburnham Public School, and he has again made a very generous offer. He offers four cash prizes in penmanship to the pupils—one prize for each room. The writing will be judged by some disinterested outsider, and the prize-winners will be announced, and the prizes awarded at the annual school concert next January. The pupils and teachers of the school appreciate Mr. Calcutt's thoughtfulness.

SHOT IN THE EYE

A Very Serious Accident to a Young Lad in the South End

A young lad named Scott Wilson, son of Mr. R. A. Wilson, a toolmaker in the Electric Works, met with a serious mishap on Monday evening. He was playing near his home, and was shot in the eye with the contents of an ordinary air rifle, known as a Filbert rifle, in the hands of a couple of neighbor boys. The injured child, who is only seven years of age, was taken to Dr. McCollough, who treated him, and extracted the shot, which was the size of a pea.

Two boys, who were armed with these dangerous toys, and whose names are Shambo and Timms, are summoned to appear at the Police Court this morning. It is an offence under the provisions of the criminal code for boys under 16 to have in their possession fire arms or guns of any description. Young Wilson was taken to Toronto, where he will be placed under the care of a specialist. He is likely to lose the sight of the injured eye.

CATHOLIC ASSOCIATION

Election of Officers and Directors Last Evening

The members of the Catholic Literary Association met in their rooms Monday evening for the purpose of electing officers and directors for the coming year. The President of the Society, Mr. John Hanrahan, occupied the chair, and the elections resulted as follows.—

President—Mr. Frank McPerson.
Vice-President—Mr. John McCabe.
Rec.-Secretary—Mr. Jas. O'Brien.
Finance Secretary—Mr. Fred Durocher.
Treasurer—Ald. John Corkery.
Directors—Messrs. F. McPherson, T. Hanrahan, W. Grady, J. McCabe, F. Durocher, J. O'Brien, E. Dillon, W. Lynch, W. Crowley, D. McCabe, J. O'Connell, G. Lynch, E. Jones, T. J. Begley, A. J. Gough, J. Carroll, J. Simons, J. Corbery, J. Fitzsimmons, J. B. Bryson, T. B. McGrath.

At the conclusion of the election the newly elected officers briefly thanked the members present for the honour conferred on them in their election to office.

Mr. T. B. McGrath in a neat speech, moved a resolution of thanks to the retiring President, Mr. J. Hanrahan, who leaves for the States this week, for the splendid services he has rendered the C. L. A. since becoming identified with it. The resolution was seconded by Mr. E. Dillon and carried unanimously. The newly-elected president and Mr. T. J. Begley also spoke in high terms of the valuable assistance rendered the Society by Mr. Hanrahan.

A resolution was also introduced by Mr. T. J. Begley and J. McCabe extending the thanks of the Society to Rev. F. J. O'Sullivan as Spiritual Adviser and expressing the Society's regret at his departure from town.

"Thought it meant death sure."—Mrs. James McKim, of Dunnville, Ont., says of her almost miraculous cure from heart disease by Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart: "Until I began taking this remedy I despaired of my life. I had heart failure and extreme prostration. One dose gave me quick relief and one bottle cured me. The sufferings of years were dispelled like magic."—3

GIRL PUTS POISON IN CHEESE.

Her Employer, a Druggist Discovers Strychnine in Time.

Ottumwa, Iowa, Oct. 9—Emerald Hamilton, a 17-year-old girl of this city, has been adjudged guilty of attempting to poison the family of W. L. Sargent, a prominent druggist of this city, and was sent to the reform school at Mitchellville to-day. The girl had been in the employ of the Sargents, and yesterday was accused of larceny and discharged. In the evening some time before supper she contrived to put fifteen grains of strychnine in a jar of clubhouse cheese. The family partook of the cheese for supper, but Mr. Sargent, being a druggist, quickly detected the drug and warned the other members of the family not to eat any more of it.

Hastily preparing an emetic, he gave it to his father, which action saved his life. The girl confessed her guilt, but showed no repentance for the deed.

BOER REFUGEES IN CROWDS.

They Are Now in Europe, but Long to Come to America.

Paris, Oct. 9.—Boer refugees continue arriving in increasing numbers at Marseilles. Two German ships brought over 1200 this week, and two French ships 950, including women and children.

These people belong to the well-to-do class. They are transported to Holland across France and Belgium by special trains. They say that thousands of destitute Boers are now at Lorenzo Marques trying to obtain passage.

Asked whether any colonists contemplated going to the United States a prominent Johannesburg merchant answered that 100 sturdy families would gladly make America their home if they could possibly get there.

"Welcome, Evil, If Thou Comest Alone."

One evil that cannot come alone is impure blood. If this is allowed, it is attended by kindred ailments galore. This condition means that every vein and artery of the body, instead of carrying to the organs a health-giving flow of life, is laden with a slow and impure fluid that is harming instead of healing.

It is unfortunate when there is "bad blood" inside of you. Hood's Sarsaparilla will not make enemies friends, but it will make "bad blood" good blood, and blood should be of the best quality. Hood's never disappoints.

Erysipelas—"Had a severe attack of erysipelas, suffering from dizziness and nervousness so that I could not rest at night. Tried Hood's Sarsaparilla with good results, and now recommend it to others." M. CHALMERS, Toronto, Ont.

Strength Builder—"Myself, wife and children have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla and it strengthened us. It relieved me of a lame back." DAVID MCGEOGH, caretaker, Colt Institute, Galt, Ont.

Rheumatism—"I was badly afflicted with sciatic rheumatism. Consulted doctors without relief. Was persuaded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and five bottles gave me relief and enabled me to go to work." WILLIAM R. ROACH, Margaretville, N. S.

ATTACK of ROYAL CANADIANS at Paardeberg

The present is a time when war pictures are in greater demand than ever. The conduct of the British soldiers on the battlefield has won the plaudits of admiring nations. We have at great expense published four large, beautiful pictures size 20x24, on heavy, superfine calendered paper. A picture that will commend itself and send a thrill to the heart of every true Canadian is the one called Attack of Royal Canadians at Paardeberg, there are literally hundreds of figures on this picture, the mountains or kopjes stretching out into the distance are swarming with men, while here and there a prostrate figure speaks only too well of the Boer rifleman. It was on this battlefield the gallant Major Arnold met death unflinchingly. Indeed, it is only too true that many of those gallant hearts that beat so high when the cheering thousands bade them Godspeed as they sailed from Canada's shores now lie still forever in lonely graves on the other side of the world under African skies. To every Canadian heart, to every Canadian home, the deeds of their brave soldier boys speak with an irresistible thrill of patriotism and pride. Gordon Highlanders at the Battle of Belmont, Charging the Boer Guns at Elandslaagte and the Charge of Gen. French's Cavalry on the Retreating Gen. Cronje's Army. These are all stirring pictures and cannot fail to commend themselves to anyone who will examine them. They are RAPID SELLERS! Agents coin money. Big profits. Enormous success. One agent sold 68 in one day. Sample and terms 25 cts (some free); four for 80 cts; $1.75 per dozen; 25 for $3.50; 50 for $6.00; 100 for $11.00. Write to-day for a dozen and make money. CANADA BUSINESS COLLEGE

Chatham, Ont.

Is doing more for its pupils than any other business school in Canada, or perhaps, than any other in the continent. How can we do this? First.

First: By giving them a practical, not a theoretical, preparation for business life.

Second: The business public has learned that there is this vast difference between the graduates of this school and those of other colleges, hence the strong demand for our graduates, which has enabled 240 to be placed in good positions between Sept., '99, and July, '00 a period of ten months.

The good work still goes on, and 72 have been placed between July 1st and Sept. 1st of this year.

RESULTS are the test to apply in deciding as to which school shall be worthy of your patronage.

Engineer Who Defended Pekin Says They Understand the Situation

THEY MAKE AN INADEQUTE OFFER

China Promises the Heads of Three Officials The Imprisonment of Three More and Banishment of Tuan

Tien Tsin, Oct. 8 via Shanghai, Oct. 10.—The American marines from Pekin have arrived at Taku, where they will be joined tomorrow by the Tien Tsin batallion and sail on the Indiana for Cavite.

Hong Kong, Oct. 10.

It is said that the authorities here have received information that a general rising in the Southern provinces has been planned for the month of November. The whereabout of the rebels in the Hinterland is not known but it is believed to be ten miles north of the boarders. A detachment of 10,000 Chinese troops took up a position near Sang Ching yesterday, and 1,000 more arrived there to-day.

Hong Kong, Oct. 10.

One thousand more troops from India have been requisitioned for Hong Kong. The Sixteenth Bengal Lancers and the Hong Kong regiment have been recalled from the north to Hong Kong. The present indications are that there will be a Boxer rising similar to that which has occurred in North China.

Tien Tsin, Oct. 9.

A military order has been issued to the German troops to occupy the railroad from Yan Tsun to Pekin. The rest of the road will be occupied by the Russians, and the harbor of Ching Wan Tao has been allotted to the British. A detachment of 800 French troops, with six guns, starts this morning to relieve the Catholic priests who are held prisoners at Ching Li Sien, sixty miles south. A detachment of three hundred French troops started in the direction of Pao Ting Fu Saturday, to co-operate with 400 troops reported to have left Pekin.

It is understood that Field Marshal Count Von Waldersee refused to acknowledge Li Hung Chang's visit, Friday. The Field Marshal goes to Pekin in a few days.

London, Oct. 11.

A special despatch from Shanghai, dated Vet Ninth, says the Triads have met and repeatedly defeated the Imperial troops near Kow Loon. They are daily gaining fresh adherents.

Heavy Russian reinforcements are moving northward from Port Arthur, with the object of relieving pressure upon Mukden. Every place of importance in Manchuria, from Kirin to the Prim. ... boundary, and from the Amur to the Great Wall is now in Russian hands.

London, Oct. 10.—The Government of China has apparently not yet begun to realize to the fullest extent that only the doctrine of, an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, is the proper one to apply to the consideration of the present crisis. For the shedding of the blood of 150 Christian missionaries and 15,000 Christian converts, they offer the heads of three minor officials, the life imprisonment of three other officials, and the banishment of the chief offender. This is assuredly a punishment which does not fit the crime. Prince Tuan, who may be banished, which simply means a temporary retirement until serener times, and Prince Chwang, who may be imprisoned for life, which means release and extra honors as soon as the troubles have blown over, are the ringleaders of the Boxer movement, and if any heads fall theirs ought to be among them. The latest proposal of China is totally inadequate, as inadequate as previous ones. It is high time the powers decided among themselves what demands they will make, and then proceed to back up their demand with military force, the only power which can influence China. As a matter of fact, it is not believed in Berlin that the Chinese are acting as intend to act in accordance with the edicts issued, so little faith have German diplomats in the good faith of the Orientals. Under these circumstances it is not surprising that Count Von Waldersee contemplates resuming operations, which are bound to produce something.

GERMANS ARE RIGHT.

San Francisco, Oct. 10.—Among the arrivals from the Orient on the steamer American Maru is F. D. Gamewell, to whose energy and engineering skill the safety of the beleagured Pekin Legations till the arrival of the allied forces was in a large measure due.

"As to the war," said Mr. Gamewell, "it is no fault of the Boxers that allour missionaries over there are not dead today. If we make light of this thing and pass it by, merely demanding an indemnity, it is my opinion that the same terrible scenes will be repeated within a few years."

He was told that the Germans had determined to get the head of Prince Tuan, and they purpose not to leave China until they get it.

"Good," said he, "the Germans understand the situation, and I hope they will stick to their decision.

Mrs. Goodrich, a missionary, and her three children, have also arrived here from Pekin. The Rev. J. A. Miller and wife, Miss Kate Ogborn and Mr. and Mrs. O. Cady were the other missionaries on board the American Maru. Dr. Miller and wife were stationed at Pao Ting Fu, 100 miles distant from Pekin. On account of Mrs. Miller's illness they left for the coast about the first of May. The day after their departure the railroad track was torn up. There were three missionary and fifteen missionaries at Pao Ting Fu. The Rev. Dr. Miller is certain that none of them is now alive.

Miss Ogborn comes from Central China and Mr. and Mrs. Cady from Western China.

CHINA'S ANSWER.

Pekin, Oct. 10.—A response tot he German demands has been transmitted to Li Hung Chang. They say that Ying Nien, president of the Censorate; Kang Yi, assistant grand secretary and president of the Civil Board; and Chao Shu Chiao, president of the Board of Punishment, will be decapitated, and that Prince Chwang, Duke Tsai Lan and Prince Yih will be sentenced to life imprisonment, and Prince Tuan will be banished to the Imperial military post roads on the Siberian frontier as a further punishment for aiding the Boxers.

VICEROYS PROTEST.

Shanghai, Oct. 10.—Li Hung Chang Viceroy Liu Kun Yi, of Nankin, one of the Peace Commissioners, and Yuan Shih Kai, the Governor of Shantung, have telegraphed a protest to the Emperor and Dowager Empress against the removal of the Court to Singan Fu. They say this action will block the peace negotiations, and lead to hostile demonstrations by the allies in the southern provinces. If this should occur the court would be in such a position that it would be impossible to forward supplies from the south. There is no definite information as to the present location of the court.

THE FRENCH NOTE.

Paris, Oct. 10.—It is semi-officially announced to-day that the news received here from China is more reassuring than the English despatches make out; that an agreement between the powers will be arrived at on the basis of M. Delcasse's note; that the reported arrival of Li Hung Chang at Pekin has been confirmed; and that confirmation has also been received of the degredation of Prince Tuan.

While France has not yet received the formal reply of any power to the latest note the verbal statements made by the various Ambassadors on the presentation of the note leads the Government to believe it will be accepted everywhere, except in Great Britain and the United States. These powers agree to certain features while objecting to others, but do not take a stand which is inimicable, generally, to the propositions of M. Delcasse.

THE GERMAN NOTE.

Berlin, Oct. 9.—It was ascertained at the German Foreign Office to-day by the correspondent of the Associated Press that all the powers have agreed to the proposals of the second German note, with the exception of Great Britain, from whom no answer has yet been received to either the first or second note of Germany. The Foreign Office, however, expects Great Britain's adhesion to the second note and still looks for a reply to the first.

He Killed His Wife Now Wants Insurance.

REMARKABLE INSURANCE SUIT.

Professor Shortlidge, in an Insane Fit, Shot His Spouse, but was Not Punished—The Sequel.

Philadelphia, Oct. 10.—A suit to recover insurance on the life of his wife, whom he killed on December 21, 1893, has been commenced in this city by Professor S. C. Shortlidge, who is now residing at Kennett square, in Chester county. The suit, which is to recover the sum of $7,022 from the Provident Life and Trust Company, is one of the most remarkable in the history of life insurance.

Prof. Shortlidge was conducting in Media an academy for young men. In November, 1893, Prof. Shortlidge married as a second wife Miss Marie Dixon-Jones, and everybody pronounced it a happy match. Shortly after this the professor began to act strangely. Six weeks after the marriage Prof. Shortlidge commanded his wife to go out with him for a walk in the snow. A short distance from the house he drew a revolver and shot her through the heart. He then made an attempt to commit suicide, but was disarmed by a neighbor.

In the trial which followed Prof. Shortlidge was acquitted on the ground of insanity, and was confined in an asylum until a year ago.

MR. GEO. R. GUY CANED

Last night during the performance of the Guy Bros. Minstrels, an event took place that was not in the programme. Mr. Geo. R. Guy, the popular Manager of the Company, having contracted the evil habit of hanging around with his hands in his pockets, in order to cure him of the habit by giving him something to hold in his hands, the members presented him with a handsome gold-headed walking stick, advantage being taken of the fact that it was the anniversary of his 48th birthday. The presentation took place on the stage, before the large audience, and was a complete surprise to Mr. Guy, who was so overcome with emotion that he could only express his thanks in a few words. The Company are better than ever this year, their performance being one of the best that has ever been given in Peterborough.

A MILITARY CENTRE.

Proposed to Make Peterborough a Base of Supplies.

BIG THING FOR THE TOWN.

Both Political Parties Should be Committed to This Scheme.

By Making Peterborough a Place for Storing Military Supplies, would Probably also Mean the Place Where Ammunition Would be Manufactured, and where a Force of Regular Troops Would be Stationed

It will be seen in Mr. McClellan's address to the electors, a reference is made to having Peterborough selected as a military centre. Mr. McClellan says—

"The splendid achievements of Canadian soldiers in South Africa, make "them worthy of the gratitude of the "country. We have the best militia "material in the world, and if we keep "up a military establishment, let it be "worthy of Canadians. Situated as "Peterborough is, on the line of the "Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific "Railways, and on the line of the Trent "Valley Canal, begun as a military "work, and now under course of completion, no other point in this Province "is so well adapted for a military centre. I shall, therefore, feel it my "duty to press upon the Government "the advisability of constructing in "Peterborough new armories and "connected buildings for military stores for Ontario, and I feel that this is "practicable of attainment at the "hands of a Government which has "shown its interest in our volunteers "by placing the Militia Department, "so greatly neglected by a previous "administration, upon an effective "basis, and will, therefore, more naturally be well-disposed towards the "improvement involved in making "Peterborough a centre for military "stores."

Mr. McClellan was seen by The Times and when questioned in regard to this matter, said that the Minister of Militia was heartily in favor of the project, and he had every reason to believe that the scheme was feasible. He had not sprung the matter on account of the election, but had been working at it for years. Peterborough was the best place in Canada for a depot for military stores. This would mean, in the course of a short time, the manufacture of ammunition, such as cartridges, smokeless powder, etc. In addition to this a force of regular soldiers would have to be maintained here.

It may not be generally known that as far back as 1840 the Imperial Government began the construction of the Trent Valley Canal as a military project. Locks were built at Healey's Falls, Hastings and Peterborough. It is also said that Peterborough was the selected as the future military centre. There is no place in Canada so advantageously situated for the purpose, and The Times is pleased to note that Mr. McClellan has brought the matter forward at an opportune time. Our Tory friends may, and no doubt will, say that it is an election dodge. They must not forget that it was generally on the eve of an election that great promises were made by Conservative Ministers in regard to the Trent Valley Canal.

The Times would like to see both parties committed to the scheme. Mr. Kendry should, and no doubt will, be able to impress upon his leader the advantages which Peterborough possesses as a military centre, and secure from Sir Charles a pledge that we will not be forgotten when the matter comes up, should the Conservatives accede to power.

Strikers Fought With Non-Union Men

Sticks and Stones Freely Used in Schuylkill County—Two Shots Were Fired

Toronto, Oct. 10.

Pottsville, Pa., Oct. 10.—There was a clash this morning between strikers and non-strikers at the Coxe Bros. & Company colliery at Oneida, Schuylkill County. The strikers gathered in large numbers near the colliery and endeavored to persuade men on their way to work to return to their homes. When they refused a fight ensued and both sides used sticks and stones freely, with the result that several were injured, though not seriously. During the fracas two shots were fired.

The officials of the mine telephoned to Sheriff Toole asking for protection for their men at work.

KRUGER'S BIG BOX HAT.

Was Sold by Auction To-day for £25 Stg.

Island of St. Helena, Oct. 10.—The British transport Idaho landed about 200 Boer prisoners here yesterday.

Gen. Cronje and the other Boer prisoners are preparing a big celebration of former President Kruger's birthday, to take place to-morrow.

London, Oct. 9.—Former President Kruger's silk hat box, purchased in London about ten years ago, was sold by auction to-day. There was keen competition for its possession, and it eventually realised £25 sterling. A pipe, at one time used by Mr. Kruger, brought £8 10s.

TO LECTURE HERE

Col Sam Hughes has Promised to Speak on South Africa

Col Sam Hughes has been invited to deliver a lecture on the war in South Africa in Bradburn's Opera House, at an early date. The lecture will be given under favorable auspices, probably in December.

We are sure this will be good news to very many. To hear, from his own lips, the story of the war by Col. Hughes, who is a fluent speaker, will be a treat, and we predict that the Opera House on that occasion will be filled to the doors.

ALIENS WILL GO HOME

Cleveland Decorators who Have been Working on the Massey Residence Ordered Back to Ohio

The four Germans from Cleveland who have been decorating the interior of the Massey-Treble residence on Jarvis street, are going back to Ohio forthwith. They have been recalled by their firm, and they state that their places will be taken by Canadian workmen.

The Government has had no hand in the matter. W. B. McMurrich, Q.C., who is the officer under the Alien Labor Act for this district, has had no charge laid against the men, nor has any evidence been taken in the case. Their departure has evidently been a matter of arrangement between Mr. Massey and the foreign contractor who was employed to do the work. He will now be compelled to engage Canadians, who will have a job lasting till the spring.

DR. FRED. BRENNAN FOR EAST RIDING

Conservatives have at Last got a Candidate

FROM WAR TO POLITICS

Returned on Tuesday last from South Africa and is offered the Conservative Nomination of East Peterboro, Which he Accepts—The Doctor's Military Record in Africa Will Help Him.

The Times received intelligence last night from a reliable source that Dr. Fred H. Brennan has been tendered the Conservative nomination in East Peterborough and has practically accepted accepted same. Dr. Brennan, as our readers know, has just returned from South Africa, where he did good work in the hospitals.

Dr. Ford, who was all along regarded as the probably candidate, definitely declined to stand. He made no secret of the fact that the offer came too late. There is a strong feeling that the Conservative organizers, Messrs. A. Broder and W. H. Leavitt, are chiefly at fault in not seeing to it that a convention was called at an earlier date, and a candidate selected. The fact is, East Peterborough has always been slow in political work, and on the present occasion the Conservatives have certainly been asleep, for few will deny that their candidate enters the campaign badly handicapped on the start on account of not being able to meet the electors in the short time between now and polling day.

KILLED ON THE TRACK

Harry Crocker Loses His Life Yesterday in Ashburnham

Yesterday a sad accident occurred by which a young man named Harry Crocker, son of Mr. Wm. Crocker, an employee of Brightman's tannery, lost his life.

It appears that the deceased, who resided in Ashburnham, attempted to board a freight car at the Canal, and was instantly killed. He missed his hold in some way, and was dashed to the ground with such violence that his skull was broken. Death was instantaneous.

The deceased was an employee of Ackerman's Harness Works, and was about 17 years of age. He was a general favorite with his fellow workmen. Much sympathy is felt for the afflicted family.

FROM BUFFALO LAKE

Messrs Dickson Jewett and G M Rogers great Sporting Expedition

On Tuesday evening Messrs. Dickson Jewett and G. M. Roger, returned from Buffalo Lake, N.W.T., where they spent a month shooting. They had a delightful time, and returned well laden with game.

Buffalo Lake is situated about 70 miles from Moosejaw, and is a muddy body of water about 16 miles in length, by half a mile in width. It contains no fish of any size, but is covered more or less with wild rushes. Messrs. Jewett and Roger occupied the spot where the party camped the previous year, and where the late Tobias Fitzgerald died.

They killed all told 460 ducks, 180 geese and one pelican, the latter measuring 8 feet from the tip of one wing to the tip of the other. The sportsmen sent home several shipments of game, and brought with them 150 ducks and 75 geese. These were hung up at the Snowden House, where they were viewed by hundreds of people.

They broke up camp at Buffalo Lake on Saturday last. There was three inches of snow on the ground, with heavy frosts.

A Bold Band of Burglars

Three of Them, Loaded With Revolvers, at Work Last Night in Toronto

Toronto, Oct. 10.

There are three desperate, daring well-armed burglars at large in the city. From the record the two made during their first night's labor they evidently intend to do business in a business-like manner and to put up a fight before they are taken. The burglars commenced work last night or rather at 1 o'clock this morning at a little store at 514 Front street west, kept by Charles Craig, an aged man, and his wife. About 1 o'clock Craig was awakened by three masked men. Each man was armed with a revolver and one of the three pulled a second revolver from his pocket, with the remark.

"Oh, we've got lots of these."

One man searched under the old man's pillow for money and found none, but a second secured $10 from a pocket in Craig's trousers. The trio left, carrying with them a pair of shoes and about two pounds of tobacco. Enterance had been secured by breaking the glass in the door and drawing the bolts. Policeman Walker was notified, but he found no trace of the thieves.

At 2.30 the little band of burglars broke into Mrs. John Dick's residence at 30 Spencer avenue and stold a number of knives, forks and spoons. About an hour later Policeman Wright, who was standing at Dufferin and Melbourne streets, heard a crash of glass at King and Dufferin streets. He ran around by way of Elm Grove avenue and came to the corner of King and Dufferin streets from the west. As he approached the corner two men ran out of R. E. Virtue's store at the corner and turned up Dufferin street. He pursued them, but as he passed the corner a third man ran out of the store and turned east. Wright turned after the third man who went south in Mowat avenue. As the policeman turned into Mowat avenue, the fleeing burglar fired at him. Wright returned the shot, and the burglar fired a second and a third time, and Wright also used his weapon again, but the burglar escaped.

Five pounds of tobacco were stolen from Virtue's store.

Two of the burglars are described as short and stout, while the third is tall and slender. That is all the description the police have of them.

The thieves also entered the residnce of Mr. David Kennedy, 76 Dominion street, by way of a rear window. Mr. Kennedy was awakened by a servant, and armed with a shot gun started after the burglars, but they heard him opening a door and escaped before he could use his weapon.

Plunkett Turned Down South Dublin's Lesson

A Constituency That Remembered Actions of its Former Representatives

New York, Oct. 10.—There are signs of Radical resentment and reaction in England over the growing influence of the Liberal Imperialists on the Opposition side, says the Tribune's London correspondent. A convention has been called for the organization of a national democracy, which will be recruited from the labour and socialist factions. The advocates of this movement denounce Lord Roseberry even more bitterly than they do Mr. Chamberlain.

London, Oct. 10.—The announcement today of the results of yesterday's pollings show Liberals have made three gains, at Wisbech, Lancaster and Barnstaple, and that the Ministerialists have gained one seat, Dumfriesshire, and that the Nationalists have secured one, South Dublin.

The total number of members of Parliament elected up to the present is 549, as follows—

Ministerialists	351
Opposition	198

Sir Robert Fitzgerald, the newly re-elected Conservative member for Cambridge City, was brutally assaulted and kicked on the head by roughs, and badly injured, while addressing a country meeting yesterday evening.

In the three-cornered fight in South Dublin, Mr. J. Mooney, Irish Nationalist, ousted the Conservative member, Hon. Horace C. Plunkett, whose candidacy was also opposed by Mr. Ball, another Conservative.

The fight against Hon. Horace C. Plunkett in South Dublin was organized mainly by Unionists who are dissatisfied with his advocacy of an Irish Catholic University, and especially of his appointment of T. P. Gill to be secretary of the new Irish Board of Agriculture. T. P. Gill has been one of the chief agents of the plan of campaign, and the Unionists after trying to deprive Mr. Plunkett of the nomination for the district, nominated a third candidate, Mr. Ball, to represent their grievances. The third candidate seems to have polled enough votes to let the Nationalists into a seat which Mr. Plunkett carried in 1895, by over 1,300 majority. Mr. Plunkett was secretary for the Board of Agriculture for Ireland, and is the most conspicuous adherent of the Salisbury government to go down in the present fight.

WEATHER NOTES.

Probs. To-day—Moderate to fresh southerly to southwesterly winds, fine and moderately warm.

A storm of importance is situated near Bermuda, and pressure is also low over Manitoba. Rain continues to fall heavily in the Maritime Province, elsewhere in Canada the weather remains fine.

BOERS HAD TO GET OUT

THE BRITISH RE-OCCUPY TOWNS

Three Days Fighting in the Mountains—Buller Going to England

Bloemfontein, Oct. 10.—The British forces have re-occupied Smithfield, Rouxville, Wepener, and De Wet's Dorp, Orange River Colony.

London, Oct. 10.—(Special)—The Cape Town News states that ex-Premier Schreiner has issued a circular to each voter in his constituency, asking for their individual wishes regarding his resignation from the Colonial Parliament. He declares that if the replies show that the majority is opposed to the policy he has been advocating that he will resign.

STILL CHASING DE WET.

London, Oct. 10.—Despatches from South Africa says that Gen. De Wet, with 1,000 men and five guns, has been fighting with the Colonial division and the mounted men under Col. Delisle, who recently left Pretoria with two horses each and double teams for the guns, for the avowed purpose of capturing the Boer general. He has not been captured, but it is declared, as it has often been before, that his command is "thoroughly demoralized." The fighting has been going on for three days in the mountains near Vredefort.

The despatches say that De Wet's men were dislodged from their stronghold, and are fleeing in various directions.

The Boer losses are not given.

The British casualties are said to have been very slight.

A despatch from Maseru, dated yesterday, says that 100 Boers have entered Ficksburg, routing the police, who fled across the Basutoland border.

WILL GO HOME NOW.

London, Oct. 10.—The British War Office has issued orders that the bulk of the militia regiments called out for service during the South African war are to be disbanded. This will affect about 50,000 men.

FAREWELL TO BULLER.

Lydenburg, Transvaal Colony, Oct. 10.—General Buller bade farwell to his troops Oct. 6 and departed southward. There was a striking farewell demonstration. The troops gathered on both sides of the road for miles and cheered Buller vociferously.

BACK TO POLITICS.

Cape Town, Oct 10.—Mr. Cecil Rhodes will re-enter politics to-morrow, when he will preside over the deliberations of the Congress of the South African League.

DOUBLE MURDER SOLE TOPIC

Great Excitement in Manitoba over the Crime at Boissevain

Boissevain, Man., Oct. 9.—The residents of this town and district are greatly excited over the details of the tragedy enacted near Whitewater. The double murder of Charles Daw and Jake Smith is a crime unequalled in the history of this part of the Province, and the victims were well known here and at Whitewater. It is the one sole tropic discussed and many are unable to seek repose, to attend to business or even to talk elections.

Walter Gordon, the supposed murderer, comes from the Township of Whitby, Ont., and is about 22 years of age. As stated, the bodies were found in an old well on Sunday last, about 80 yards from the house. Daw had three bullet wounds in the head and Smith was shot in the neck with a shot gun at close range. Daw was a young Englishman about 25 years of age, and had the respect and good wishes of all who knew him. It was understood he had sold his chattels to Gordon for $6,400, for which an agreement of sale was given, but no money was transferred at the time. Gordon claimed to hold a receipt for $5,000, which he paid Daw immediately before his disappearance. Daw was to have returned to England in October at the request of his family.

The older victim, Jacob Smith, was about 45 years of age, was not thrifty, but was a popular man in this district, where he had resided for the last 20 years. He sold his horses and implements to Gordon, who holds a receipt which he claimed Smith gave him at the time of his disappearance on July 31. An inquest is being held at Whitewater on the bodies.

MALARIA AND MOSQUITOES.

Some months ago Dr. Patrick Manson of the British Colonial office set forth the theory that mosquitoes inoculated the human system with malaria. In order to prove this he proposed to have a couple of men live in the marshy campagna near Rome throughout the malarie season in a mosquito-proof hut, the intention being to prove that so long as they were not bitten by mosquitoes they would not suffer from malaria. Later this plan was abandoned for the simpler one of bringing some of the Roman mosquitoes to London and allowing them to bite healthy persons in order to see what would happen. British medical men have now been thrown into a state of professional excitement by the fact that the persons who allowed themselves to be bitten by the insects were promptly stricken with malaria in its most violent form.

Dr. Manson is now advocating a world-wide crusade against mosquitoes, or against the conditions which breed both mosquitoes and malaria. He is already seeking a sort of Anglo-American alliance in the matter, for he says the United States has an immediate and vital interest in the mosquito problem. He asserts that in Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippines, as well as in many of the Southern States, there exist conditions especially conducive to malarial diseases. As an attache of the British Colonial office he is convinced that the white man's burden can never be borne unless the mosquito be eliminated from it.

It is evident that the task of fighting the mosquitoes is too great to be undertaken even by the combined armies and navies of the two most powerful nations, with all their physicians included. It is infinitely worse than fighting Chinamen. A single mosquito, singing viciously in the darkness of a bedroom, has been known to unnerve the bravest of men. When all the myriads of mosquitoes of all the swamps of earth are considered, the thought is enough to chill the stoutest heart. If the swamps were drained it might simplify the problem considerably, but this is almost as large a task of killing the mosquitoes. Even the matter of drying up all the breeding places of mosquitoes and of malaria in the tropics and subtropics, as suggested by Dr. Manson, is a project beside which the Nicaraguan Canal pales into insignificance. The anti-mosquito campaign evidently calls for a grand international alliance of all the nations, civilized and barbarous, on the face of the earth. Until Dr. Manson can organize such an alliance it will be necessary to trust to the uncertain protection of mosquito netting.

Between the election guesses of the Grits and of the Tories there is a yawning chasm, but election day's ballots will fill it up all right.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The new premier of Quebec is named Parent. Those who know him best say he will prove himself the daddy of them all.

* * *

There is no doubt, as Sir Charles Tupper points out in the manifesto that he has just issued to the people of Canada, that there are vast possibilities for Canadian fruit producers in the building up of a trade with the rest of the empire in Canadian fruits. Sir Charles talks like an expert on the subject, and the wonder is that the government of which he was an adherent did not do more for the Canadian fruit producer when it had the chance. That is what so heavily discounts Sir Charles' denunciations of the Liberals for neglecting their opportunities in the matter.

* * *

The Toronto Weekly Sun, in an article by Bystander, discusses the subject of the departmental stores, and says that "it is difficult to see how the un-departmental stores are to live. But it is by no means difficult to see the future of the departmental stores. They will increase and do all the trade of this country. Half a dozen departmental stores in Toronto will have branch stores in every city, town and neighborhood, and will do the whole of the business. Then when they have monopolized the entire trade of the Province, the people, through their Legislature, will arouse themselves, seize the stores, expropriate them for a public benefit, and all profits beyond a percentage on the capital invested will go into the public treasury. That is what will take place, and that is one of the ways in which Socialism will develop itself.

Address to the Electors

To the Free and Independent Electors of West Peterborough—

Gentlemen.—Having accepted the unanimous nomination of the Liberals of this Riding, as a candidate for its representation in the House of Commons I hereby respectfully solicit your support in securing my return at the coming general elections.

The grounds upon which I base my appeal are not so much nor chiefly by any means, my personal fitness for the position of your representation though as a citizen of Peterborough and interested in its progress in common with that of the country, I can and do promise, if elected, an intelligent support of such a public policy and such measures as will best conduce to the promotion of all the interests of Canada, the developement of her great resources and the general betterment of the civil moral and material condition of the public; and my best abilities and most assiduous attention shall be devoted to the faithful discharge of my representative duties.

The strongest ground, however, of my appeal consists in the fact that I am a firm supporter of the Liberal Government led by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, which is entitled to the renewed confidence of the people both on the ground of its policy and the splendid record established by the application of that policy. The Liberal party appealed to the country in 1896 upon a clearly defined policy and the premised results followed.

The Liberal party promised a reduction of a high tariff that hampered our industrial and agricultural interests and was hostile to the Mother Country.

The tariff was materially reduced and otwise improved and in such a way as to help instead of hinder the manufacturer and farmer, with the consequence that never before in the history of the country hav our industries or our farmers enjoyed such great prosperity, our mechanics and working men such constant employment and high wages, nor our commerical and all other interests so flourished.

Our domestic and foreign trade have also greatly increased. The loyal gift of a trade preference, represented by a tariff reduction on British goods of 33 1-3 per cent., and our despatch of the Canadian Contingent, have resulted in a kindlier feeling towards Canada and greatly increased trade with the Mother Country.

With a largely reduced rate of tariff, our revenue has greatly expanded so that the Government was warranted in practicing true economy (reducing our postal rate one third, giving Imperial penny postage,) and premitting of the completion of great public works, deepening our canals, so long trifled with, pushing the work on the Trent Valley Canal which is now urged and will be urged to completion by the Liberal Government, and the application of a vigorous policy of general development and improvement of our transportation facilities, resulting and to result in easier access to the British market and batte rprices for all our products.

I cannot obviously here, enter into details of how in other ways the Liberal Government has implemented its promises and applied its policy, but with these and other public questions. I shall have an opportunity during the campaign of more fully dealing

As a supporter of such a Government I can appeal with confidence for the support of the Electors of West Peterborough, knowing that by helping to give, as you will do, through my election, a renewal of the trust the Liberal Government has discharged with such evident and gratifying results, they will be conferring a great and lasting good upon this riding, the country at large, and securing a continuation of the great blessings of prosperity and good government we now enjoy.

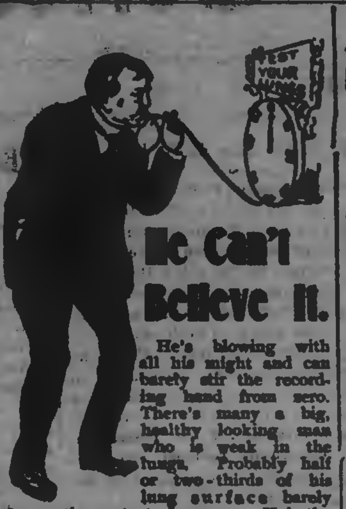
Again soliciting your support, your votes, and influence, in this contest,

I have the honor to be,

gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. H. McCLELLAN



He Can't Believe It.

He's blowing with all his might and can barely stir the recording hand from zero. There's many a big, healthy looking man who is weak in the lungs. Probably half or two-thirds of his lung surface barely knows the contact of oxygen. He's the kind of man, who, when a cough attacks him, goes galloping down the road toward consumption. Many such a man has found strength and healing for weak lungs and tissues lacerated by coughing and drained by hemorrhages, in the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The healing power of this medicine in pulmonary diseases seems little short of marvelous at times, so extreme are the conditions which it cures. The "Discovery" contains no alcohol, and no narcotics.

"When I started to take your 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" writes Mr. A. F. Novotny, of New York, N. Y., Box 1437, "I had a regular consumptive cough, of which I was afraid, and everybody cautioned me and warned me concerning it. I was losing weight rapidly, was very pale and had no appetite, whatever. Now my condition is changed entirely. I do not cough at all, have gained eight pounds in weight, have recovered my healthy color, and my appetite is enormous. I can recommend your medicine to everybody who may be in need of the same, as it is a sure cure."

Love

A NOVEL.

"I assure you, my sweet Loraine, you are making a mountain out of a mole-hill."

He drew the white arms around his neck and the golden head dropped on his breast.

"You know you are my world, Ulmont," she whispered. "Why should I not be solicitous about you? I always imagine that those who love deeply, yet do not show their love resemble the sun shining behind a cloud."

"That is certainly one way of looking at it Loraine," he replied, "but remember, still waters run deep. There are people who love intensely, yet have no power of expressing their affection."

Loraine pondered many a time over her husband's remark, and wondered more than once what he had meant by it.

Ulmont was more tender than usual, if that were possible, but beneath it all Loraine read a strange unrest.

He scarcely smiled, until the towering heights and sunny vales of Switzerland had faded from his sight.

* * * * * * * *

The sky was blue, but the air was keen and sharp, and the hoar-frost lay white on the ground, the trees, and the housetops, and shone like diamonds in the sunlight on the branching evergreens.

That was a coming home long to be remembered. Everyone spoke of the glowing beauty of the happy young wife and the lover-like devotion of the young husband.

The two mothers watched their children with great contentment. Ulmont's mother declared it was quite like living her own youth over again to watch the pretty love-dream of her son and his beautiful bride. Yet there was one circumstance, which puzzled her— there seemed to be some secret thought preying upon his mind.

The day he had returned home, a greeting had been given him which would have pleased a lord; yet, after it was all over he had flung himself down on the sofa, and turned his face to the wall, saying he "was tired of it all—he wanted to rest." An hour later, upon kneeling beside him, his mother found the pillow, upon which his fair head lay, wet with tears. Did this look like happiness—yet, why should he not be so?

There was another matter which did not escape the keen, watchful eyes of his mother; she noticed how eagerly Ulmont watched for the mails which brought the foreign papers, she did not fail to observe the look of relief that crept into his eyes as he laid them down, one by one, still she made no comment. She never remembered her son to have taken so much interest in foreign affairs before; she was exceedingly puzzled.

One evening Loraine sat at the piano, her white fingers running idly over the ivory keys. Ulmont sat near her, gazing thoughtfully into the gloomy coals in the grate, while his mother sat opposite him, deeply interested in the columns of the Boston Herald.

Suddenly she glanced up.

"Loraine, my dear," she said, "there is news for you."

"Good news, I hope," laughed Loraine.

"Better than might have been expected," replied Mrs. Ulvesford, as she continued; "it is about young Heath Hampton. Shall I read it?"

Loraine turned, with a look of wonder on her face.

"What of him? Read it, by all means. We met him abroad, in Switzerland. Has he returned?"

"No, my dear, nor is he likely to do so soon."

"Why?" asked Loraine; "has some Swiss beauty captured the devoted cavalier?"

"No," replied Mrs. Ulvesford, gravely; "not that."

As she spoke, she spread out the paper she held, her eyes voluntarily falling upon the face of her son; in that one instant it seemed as if long years had passed over his head; his face was hard and drawn, and his eyes wore a strange, unnatural brilliancy.

"You have not told us the news yet," persisted Loraine.

Ulmont's questioning eyes repeated the remark more eloquently than words could have done.

"It is about a duel," continued his mother, "a duel wherein a young and beautiful American lady was concerned."

"Is— is her name mentioned, mother?"

Both ladies looked up in surprise; they could scarcely believe the hoarse, unnatural voice they had heard belonged to Ulmont.

"No name is given," replied Mrs. Ulvesford.

Neither his young wife nor his mother heard the fervent "thank God" he breathed from his heart, although no sound issued from his lips.

"I always imagined him an impulsive young man," pursued Mrs. Ulvesford, calmly; "still, I never imagined his rashness would lead him to such an end."

"Surely he is not dead," gasped Ulmont, his impatience and intense anxiety almost overpowering him; in another instant he was kneeling by his mother's side, eagerly scanning the paper in her lap.

No, not dead; the wound on the hand had occasioned considerable loss of blood, ending the encounter, but was not necessarily considered dangerous, unless inflammation set in. His opponent had hurriedly left Savoy.

"See," exclaimed Loraine, pointing to the date, "this must have happened the evening before we left Savoy. I wondered why Heath Hampton failed to put in an appearance on the day of our departure; this accounts for it."

The news of the duel, which, for some unaccountable reason, failed to give Ulmont's name, proved a nine days' wonder.

Curiosity was rife concerning the lady, who she was, and everything concerning the scandal being the general topic of the day.

Ulmont heard it discussed on the streets, in his mother's drawing room, even his young wife, when they were alone, seemed eager to speak of the one absorbing topic, wondering who the young and beautiful lady was, and if she had loved Heath Hampton.

Ulmont thought he would certainly go mad. How little Loraine imagined she had been the cause of that combat, against which Ulmont had pitted his very life to protect her honor.

Soon after this an event happened which had long been expected. Ulmont's mother, who had never been strong, when the leaves began to fall, was laid at rest in the churchyard, where the ladies of their race had slumbered for long years. Otherwise, everything moved on in the same routine at the manor.

One December morning Mrs. Lorrimer had driven over from Lorrimer Place to see her daughter.

A deep snow lay on the ground, and the merry, jingling sleigh-bells rang sharply out on the morning air. It was just such a morning as brings a flush to the cheek, brightness to the eye, and a warm glow to the heart.

The sunshine gleamed ruddily through the leafless branches of the trees, and the deer bent their heads to drink, breaking through the thin ice that had formed over the clear, glassy pools.

Never did Loraine look so picturesquely lovely as she stood at the window, gazing out upon the winter landscape, her crimson robe forming a glowing background to her fair beauty.

She was so gentle, so clinging, just such a woman as men reverence, love and protect. Her life had been free from care. She was not at all the kind of a woman to be slain by love — smitten to the earth idly as the yellow buttercup that grows in the fields.

How was she to know, on this beautiful day, that the darkest shadow that ever fell upon a pure young life, was to cast its first blight upon her!

All the joy and happiness that life holds had been hers. She had married for love, and her handsome, debonair young husband's love was the crown of her earthly ambition, the star of her existence. She had been a loved and petted child, and was a loved and petted wife.

Loraine's life had always been gay and brilliant; the quiet isolation of home life was beginning to tell upon her.

It had been the custom for generations back to give a grand ball at Ulvesford Mansion every Christmas Eve.

It was at last decided, after much discussing, that the annual ball should be given. It was to be a grand affair, every one agreed.

Whatever the charming young mistress of Ulvesford Mansion did, would be done brilliantly.

"You know, dear," said Loraine, laying her hand upon her husband's arm "it is our first ball at home. I mean to make this a memorable one."

"As if anything you undertook would be aught else," he replied, smilingly.

A memorable one! Heaven pity her! That one night would shut out from her young life all the brightness of this world.

The chiming bells which would usher in that Christmas morning could have whispered a strange, startling secret to her.

Ulmont Ulvesford little knew, as he caressed his young wife's golden hair that the event which would happen on that Christmas Eve would bring him the keenest sorrow mortal man ever experienced.

CHAPTER XIII.

Isetta.

Some few months previous to the events narrated in our last chapter, the golden sun was just setting over the quiet little village of Silvernook.

The soft, dreamy silence which pervaded this quiet, rural spot, was broken only by the chirping of birds, the lowing of the distant kine, or bit of song from some blithe young milkmaid's lips, as she drove home the cows.

Along the flower bordered path that followed the winding of a deep silent, rock-bedded river, walked an old man, leaning heavily on his cane.

As he turned an abrupt angle he started back with a cry of surprise, before him, lying face downward in the long daisy-studded grass, lay a young girl, sobbing bitterly.

She was certainly a stranger in that locality; Abel never remembered having seen her before.

"Child," said the old flute-maker touching her gently on the shoulder, "why do you weep? Surely, youth cannot know so soon the bitter dregs life's cup holds; why do you weep?"

He never forgot the sad expression on the beautiful face raised to his in the gloaming; a sweet, foreign face, white with anguish, yet perfect as a marble statue.

Tear drops quivered on the long, dark lashes that veiled the beautiful, scornful, dark eyes.

For a moment only those eyes searched wistfully the rugged, yet honest face before her.

She only shook her head, and the tears flowed afresh, then a sudden thought came to her.

"Perhaps you will tell me, sir, what I ought to do," she said, with a low, pitiful sob. "I am helpless and cannot even think."

"Perhaps I may be able to advise you if you will tell me your trouble; you forget that I do not know," replied the flute-maker, seating himself on an adjacent rock. "Surely you are not alone, my child?" he asked wonderingly.

"Yes, sir, I am all alone," she replied. "I will tell you how it came about. Then, perhaps, you can tell me what I ought to do. My husband, who had been called suddenly home, gave me a note to bring to his old nurse in Silvernook, with whom I was to remain a few days until he came for me."

Again the tears started to the lovely eyes, and her voice quivered in a broken sob.

"I have lost the address he gave me, and —and the money my husband gave me I must have left in the train."

Abel Moore was lost in bewilderment; he could not understand it.

She married! This young creature, with the beautiful foreign face, scarcely more than a child, married! He could hardly credit what he heard.

"Have you no recollection of the name of the person you wish to find?" he asked.

"None, whatever, sir."

"Who is your husband, child, what is his name, I mean?"

"Alderic Ross, sir, and I am his wife, Isetta."

She repeated the words with a simple, child-like dignity, as if the words were the sweetest music to her.

"Mr. Ross, of where?"

"That I do not know, sir."

The old flute-maker was growing each moment more mystified.

London Young Men Don the Mitts

The Y.M.C.A. of London is in the forward movement. It has authorized the instruction of the young men in boxing. Some people do not see any harm in it, but it is affecting the moral atmosphere of others, and it may be the result in the withdrawal of their subscriptions. It does not take much to close a man's pocketbook. The manly art of self-defence should be encouraged, and we hope that the local association will bring it in to the curriculum of physical training in Peterborough.

Indian Relics

Mr. Johnston Paudash, of Hiawatha, has presented the Victoria Museum, through Mr. J. B. McWilliams, with two pairs of ancient epaulets. These shoulder ornaments were worn by his great grandfather, Chief George Paudash, one of the pairs having been worn by the old chief during the war of 1812.

After Chief Paudash attained the rank of captain, he was presented with another pair, with crests thereon, suitable to his rank, and were worn by him when he received the Prince of Wales in the year 1860. The two pairs of epaulets have been in the possession of the Paudash family ever since that time, and will make a valuable addition to the already extensive list of articles presented by that family to the Victoria Museum.

Politics in the West

Mr. Dickson Jewett, who with Mr. G. M. Roger, returned on Tuesday from Buffalo Lake, N.W.T., when asked by the Times regarding political matters in the West, said—"We had few opportunities of learning much about the political outlook in the West. What I did hear, however, was that the Conservatives would carry Manitoba and the West, clean to the coast, almost to a man. When in Brandon I heard four or five persons say that they intended to vote for Hugh John, and these men were Liberals, too. Then several others told me that they had voted Liberals last time, but intended to vote for Nicholas F. Davin, the Conservative candidate on the present occasion.

Mr. G. M. Roger possibly may not corroborate the above.

JOTTINGS ABOUT TOWN

—The Port Hope Times has discontinued its daily edition.

—Large quantities of freight are passing over the railways eastward just now.

—A camp of gypsies has been established in Douro, between Peterborough and Lakefield, for several months.

—Commadore Calcutt has just about completed arrangements for the big harvest excursion to Jubilee Point on Thanksgiving Day.

—Mr. R. M. Roy photographed the immense array of birds at the Snowden House yesterday, with them Jewett and Roger, in the foreground.

Dyspepsia is difficult digestion, due to the absence of natural digestive fluids. Hood's Sarsaparilla restores the digestive powers.

—The Guy Bros' Minstrels appeared before a full house last night. Their entertainment was, as usual, first class.

—The men's social in conection with St. John's church on Tuesday evening, was a decided success. As an entertainer, Mr. Jos. Halpeny proved to be a host in himself, and was ably assisted by Mr. James Brown, Mr. Ed. Graham, Mr. R. M. Dennistoun, Mr. F. D. Kerr, and a number of others. Refreshments were served during the evening.

—The thanks of the editor of this great family journal are due to Mr. Dickson Jewett and Ald G. M. Roger for a very fine wild goose, brought by these enthusiastic sportsmen from Buffalo Lake. We are preparing to do justice to the bird to-day, and if this g.f.j. is a trifle out of plumb to-morrow, our readers will understand the reason.

—The first of a series of lectures under the auspices of the Peterborough Engineering Club was held in the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday night and was largely attended. The chair was occupied by Mr. C. A. Barton, President of the society, and an excellent paper on the lift lock was read by Mr. F. J. Frances of the Trent Valley Canal Staff. Mr. Francis handled his subject in a masterly manner and enlightened many concerning the construction of this wonderful piece of work.

Messrs. James Epps & Co., Ltd., the well-known Cocoa Manufacturers of London, have just issued an exceedingly tasteful little medal in aluminium for distribution amongst their numerous customers and the public generally. It is called the National Medal of the United Empire, and having been struck on the termination of the war in South Africa, it forms at the present time an interesting souvenir of the Mother Country and her various colonies, typical figures of each being represented thereon. A pretty scarlet ribbon and a suitable inscription completes its equipment, and we feel sure that all sections of the public will be eager to possess Messrs. Epps & Co's patriotic medal.

ALL DAY SUNDAY

She Thought about a Food that Would Agree with Her

An unnatural appetite for rich and improper food is really kept alive by the use of such food, whereas a change to healthful, nourishing, and scientifically made food, will correct the unnatural appetite. A little woman up at Peekskill, N. Y., Margaret Smith, P. O. Box 193, says:—

"I was such a sufferer from dyspepsia that life was a burden. I could hardly keep from eating all sorts of pastry, cakes, and other rich foods, although they did not agree with me, nor in fact did any sort of food. I become low spirited and discouraged, was too weak to work and very seriously troubled with palpitation of the heart.

"Drugs seemed to make me worse rather than better. A friend said one day, 'I believe Grape-Nuts food would cure you,' explaining that that food was made with great care and intended for the prevention and relief od diseases that were brought about by improper food.

"That was Saturday night, and all day Sunday I kept thinking about Grape-Nuts, and the first thing Monday morning I sent for a package. I had it in my mind that the food would look like nuts, and was disappointed when I found it had to be eaten with a spoon. However, I followed the directions and made a meal of Grape-Nuts and milk, which I found to be delicious, and for the first time in months, I suffered no distress after eating.

"I at once began to feel hopeful that I might be cured at last. Since that day I have used Grape-Nuts constantly, morning and night and have steadily improved in health, until now I am as well as I ever was in my life; weigh 10 pounds more than I did a year ago, have no palpitation of the heart and can work all day long.

"At supper I have Grape-Nuts mixed with soft-boiled eggs. I make my dinner on any kind of food I desire. One of the best things about this cure by proper food is that I no longer have any desire for the rich, indigestible rubbish of which I used to be so fond."

Address to the Electors

To the Free and Independent Electors of West Peterborough—

Gentlemen.—Having accepted the unanimous nomination of the Liberals of this Riding, as a candidate for its representation in the House of Commons I, hereby respectfully solicit your support in securing my return at the coming general elections.

The grounds upon which I base my appeal are not so much nor chiefly by any means, my personal fitness for the position of your representation though as a citizen of Peterborough and interested in its progress in common with that of the country, I can and do promise, if elected, an intelligent support of such a public policy and such measures as will best conduce to the promotion of all the interests of Canada, the development of her great resources and the general betterment of the civil moral and material condition of the public; and my best abilities and most assiduous attention shall be devoted to the faithful discharge of my representative duties.

The strongest ground, however, of my appeal consists in the fact that I am a firm supporter of the Liberal Government led by Sir Wilfred Laurier, which is entitled to the renewed confidence of the people, both on the ground of its policy and the splendid record established by the application of that policy. The Liberal party appealed to the country in 1896 upon a clearly defined policy and the promised results followed.

The Liberal party promised a reduction of a high tariff that hampered our industrial and agricultural interests and was hostile to the Mother Country.

The tariff was materially reduced and otherwise improved and in such a way as to help instead of hinder the manufacturer and farmer, with the consequence that never before in the history of the country have our industries or our farmers enjoyed such great prosperity, our mechanics and working men such constant employment and high wages, nor our commercial and all other interests so flourished.

Our domestic and foreign trade have also greatly increased. The loyal gift of a trade preference, represented by a tariff reduction on British goods of 33 1-3 per cent., and our despatch of the Canadian Contingent, have resulted in a kinder feeling towards Canada and greatly increased trade with the Mother Country.

With a largely reduced rate of tariff, our revenue has greatly expanded so that the Government was warranted in practicing true economy (reducing our postal rate one third, giving imperial penny postage,) and promitting of the completion of great public works, deepening our canals, so long trifled with, pushing the work on the Trent Valley Canal which is now urged and will be urged to completion by the Liberal Government, and the application of a vigorous policy of general development and improvement of our transportation facilities resulting and to result in easier access to the British market and better prices for all our products.

The farming interests of the country are deserving of the best services of a Government, such as the present has given. The immense impetus given the produce trade between Canada and Great Britain, through the preferential tariff, has been greatly helped by the action of the Government in providing an excellent and adequate system of cold storage, by which Canadian products can be landed in Great Britain in first-class condition, guaranteeing the highest prices. The system is of the most modern character, sufficient for all the present needs of the trade, and it will be improved and enlarged as experience suggests, and increase of the produce trade demands, and I shall, if elected, feel it my duty to support any policy that will improve our trade with the Mother Country, and strengthens the bond of British connection, of which we are so proud.

In an industrial centre like Peterborough the claims of the working classes are especially deserving of consideration. No country is well governed that does not look after the interests of all classes of the community. The Conservative Government has been, and the Conservative party declared itself to be, extremely solicitous of the interests of the capitalist classes—the manufacturers—but it left the working classes to largely shift for themselves. A Liberal Government came into power, and the attitude towards Labour was changed, and the rights of Labour to its rights recognized, and in a practical way. A Department of Labour has been established and a Minister of Labour placed over it. A Labour Gazette has been established in the interests of workingmen, published monthly; conditions have been inserted in all Government contracts compelling contractors to pay the highest current wages, which the Government guarantees the payment of; the sweating system has been abolished on Government contracts; the Alien Labour Act is enforced by a special officer, and in many other ways the Government has shown by deeds that the rights of the workingmen, as well as the capitalist, shall be protected. I heartily support the Government in what it has done, and shall support them in extending the benefits which they have already conferred, and which it is their policy to continue, as need arises.

The splendid achievements of Canadian soldiers in South Africa, make them worthy of the gratitude of the country. We have the best militia material in the world, and if we keep up a military establishment, let it be worthy of Canadians. Situated as Peterborough is, on the line of the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Railways, and on the line of the Trent Valley Canal, begun as a military work, and now under course of completion, no other point in this Province is so well adapted for a military centre. I shall, therefore, feel it my duty to press upon the Government the advisability of constructing in Peterborough new armories and connected buildings for military stores for Ontario, and I feel that this is practicable of attainment at the hands of a Government which has shown its interest in our volunteers by placing the Militia Department, so greatly neglected by a previous administration, upon an effective basis, and will, therefore, more naturally be well disposed towards the improvement involved in making Peterborough a centre for military stores.

A town of the industrial and commercial importance of Peterborough, has certainly strong claims upon the good offices and of a Government. For the past four years the town has been represented, when it was represented in the House, by a member opposed to the Government. There is no doubt in the minds of unprejudiced observers, that the present Liberal Government will be strongly sustained in the country at the coming elections, and the question arises whether West Peterborough will have its interests better served by a member sitting in opposition and hostile to the Government and its policy, or by a member pledged to give the Government a fair support in the application of its policy. If elected I pledge myself to give my best ability and exertions to the promotion of the general good of the country, and to look especially after the interests of West Peterborough.

I cannot obviously here, enter into details of how in other ways the Liberal Government has implemented its promises and applied its policy, but I shall have an opportunity during the campaign of more fully dealing with these and other public questions.

As a supporter of such a Government I can appeal with confidence for the support of the Electors of West Peterborough, knowing that by helping to give, as you will do, through my election, a renewal of the trust the Liberal Government has discharged with such evident and gratifying results, they will be conferring a great and lasting good upon this riding, the country at large, and securing a continuation of the great blessings of prosperity and good government we now enjoy.

Again soliciting your support, your votes, and influence, in this contest, I have the honor to be,

ATTACK of ROYAL CANADIANS at Paardeberg

The present is a time when war pictures are in greater demand than ever. The conduct of the British soldiers on the battlefield has won the plaudits of admiring nations. We have at great expense published four large, beautiful pictures size 22x28, on heavy, superfine calendered paper. A picture that will commend itself and send a thrill to the heart of every true Canadian is the one called Attack of Royal Canadians at Paardeberg. there are literally hundreds of figures on this picture, the mountains or kopjes stretching out into the distance are swarming with men, while here and there a prostrate figure speaks only too well of the Boer rifleman. It was on this battlefield the gallant Major Arnold met death unflinchingly. Indeed, it is only too true that many of those gallant hearts that beat so high when the cheering thousands bade them Godspeed as they sailed from Canada's shores now lie still forever in lonely graves on the other side of the world under African skies. To every Canadian heart, to every Canadian home, the deeds of their brave soldier boys speak with an irresistible thrill of patriotism and pride. Gordon Highlanders at the Battle of Belmont, Charging the Boer Guns at Elandslaagte and the Charge of Gen. French's Cavalry on the Retreating Gen. Cronje's Army. These are all stirring pictures and cannot fail to commend themselves to anyone who will examine them. They are RED HOT SELLERS! Agents coin money. Big profits. Enormous success. Is doing more for its pupils than any other business school in Canada, or perhaps, than any other in the continent. How can we do this? First.

First: By giving them a practical, not a theoretical, preparation for business life.

Second: The business public has learned that there is this vast difference between the graduates of this school and those of other colleges, hence the strong demand for our graduates, which has enabled 80 to be placed in good positions between Sept., '99, and July, '00 a period of ten months.

The good work still goes on, and 17 have been placed between July 1st and Sept. 1st of this year.

14,000 TROOPS WILL MARCH UPON PAO-TING-EU

Headquarters of the Boxers in Pe-Bhi-Li Will be Attacked by Two Allied Columns

ONE FROM PEKIN THE OTHER FROM TIEN-TSIN

A French Force Will Join one of Them on the Way—Serious Condition of Affairs in Southern China

Berlin, Oct. 11. Count Von Waldersee, an official telegram announces will start for Pekin from Tien Tsin next Saturday. The Germans are awaiting re inforcements at Tien Tsin before undertaking further measures. They have effected telegraphic communication between Tien Tsin and Pekin. The same official press to-day asserts that there is no further doubt regarding the reported removals of the Imperial Court to Sing An Fu. This admission is accompained by a declaration that Emperor Kwang has returned to Pekin is now highly improbable, although his presence there is absolutely necessary to effect lasting peace.

London, Oct. 11.—The powerlessness of the Chinese Government to restore order within its jurisdiction is finely illustrated by the fact that at this late hour the allied powers find themselves compelled t odespatch a formidable expedition of 14,000 men to take possession of the town of Pao Ting Fu, the capital of the Province of Pe Chi Li, and the seat of the Viceroy. This place has for long been the headquarters of the revolutionists, and it was here that some atrocious murders of missionaries were prepetrated. From Tien Tsin to Pao Ting Fu is 96 miles by road, while from Pekin the distance is 85 miles by railway, most of which is in possession of the allies. The column of 5,000 operating from Pekin will therefore reach the vicinity of the town to be attacked before the one marching from Tien Tsin, which has not the benefit of the railway, but must march across country, probably hauling its supplies in boats up the canal which connects the two towns. The two columns, together with the French force of 4,000, which will join one of them en route, should therefore reach the vicinity of Pao Ting Fu within a week. Here fighting may be looked for, seeing that Pao Ting Fu is furnished with strong walls and a population of 140,000 It is one of the most popularous cities in the Province of Pe Chi Li, its people are wealthy, and its temples are numerous and palatial. Much loot is therefore dangled before the eyes of the allied troops as an incentive to exertion, while the "foreign devils" did with the treasure of Tien Tsin and Pekin will incite the defenders of the town to resist spoliation to the utmost.

PREPARING FOR ACTION.

Hong Kong, Oct. 11.—Admial Ho with two hundred troops has arrived at San Chun (San Shui?) from Canton. A detachment of four hundred other troops is about to land at Deep Bay. The British toropedo boat destroyed Otter has been ordered to Mira Bay.

The Bombay Infantry has been ordered to be in readiness to proceed to the frontier at two hours' notice.

LARGE FORCES WITH EMPEROR.

Shanghai, Oct. 11.—The Chinese report the arrival of the Emperor and Dowager Empress at Chau Ching (?). October 6th, 150 miles southwest of Yai Yuan Fu. After a day's rest, the Chinese and the Imperial party proceeded, escorted by large forces.

It is reported here that Russian troops from the southward occupied Mukden (Manchuria) without opposition, while Russians from the north captured Tie Ling, forty miles north of Mukden.

TROOPS MASSING AT HONG KONG.

Hong Kong, Oct. 11.—The thousand more troops from India have been requisitioned for Hong Kong. The 16th Bengal Lancers and the Hong Kong Regiment have been recalled from the north to Hong Kong. The present indications are that there will be a Boxer rising similar to that which was occurred in north China.

It is said that the authorities here have received information that a general rising in the southern provinces has been planned for the month of November. The whereabouts of the rebels in the Hinterland is not known, but it is believed to be ten miles north of the British borders. A detachment of 1,000 Chinese troops took up a position at Sanchung yesterday, and 1,000 more arrived there to-day.

BRITAIN BACKS GERMANY.

Berlin, Oct. 11.—Great Britain's answer to Germany's second note was received this morning. It is an unreserved and unconditional acceptance of the German position. A high official of the Foreign Office made the following statement on the subject this afternoon. "Great Britain has directed her representative in Pein to proceed in accordance with Germany's second note. Her answer makes no mention of the German note of September, but there was not no necessity for any reference, because the September note merely laid down certain general principles, while the second note devoted them into practical suggestions."

So far as the French note is concerned the impression gained in official circles here is that it will be sheived indefinitely, since it is not considered here as touching live questions. Official opinion seems to be that it will not disturb the harmony of the powers, since it will soon be foregotten.

U. S. REPLIES TO FRENCH NOTE.

Washington, Oct. 11.—The reply of the United States Government to the latest note from France offering suggestions as to settlement of the troubles in China has been completed and delivered to M. Thiebaut, Charge d'Affairs of the French Embassy. It is believed to take a favorable view of the suggestions submitted by the French Government, in a general way, although it does not commit this Government to all of them.

U. S. SOLDIERS USELESS.

London, Thursday, Oct. 11.—A Paris despatch to the Post says bad news has been received from Canton and Swatow. It is also believed that there is danger of serious trouble in Kwang Tung or Quon Tung.

A despatch from Howsiwn to the Post of date of October 2 quotes an "intelligent American," who favored the withdrawal of the American troops from China, as saying that the soldiers of this country fought well up to the time they reached Pekin, but since then have done as little as possible, even for Americans. Their presence only hampers the work of the soldiers of other nations. One thousand men, under command of General Wilson, he says, can do more than 5,000 under General Chaffee.

HEROIC CHINESE MINISTERS.

Victoria, B.C. Oct. 10.—The particulars of the execution of Hsu Ching Cheng and Yuen Chang, brought by the steamer Duke of Fire, show that the two Ministers died in the endeavor to save the foreigners. A Chinese vernacular paper gives the details as follows.

About June 21 or 22 Prince Tuan had a draft edict sanctioned by the Empress Dowager, and ordered the Ministers Hsu Ching Cheng and Yuen Chang to transmit it by wire to the Viceroys and Governors throughout the Empire, these two being charged with the duty of sending out Imperial messages. Hsu and Yuen came across a passage which said.

"You are hereby ordered to kill and destroy all the foreign missionaries, the Christain converts, the foreign houses, the churches, the foreign officials, and merchandise that may be found in the country, and you shall incur our displeasure by being slow in discharging the duties imposed upon you," etc.

Prince Tuan and Li Ping Heng were in a towering rage, and insisted on the immediate execution of the two culprits. So the punishment was carried out, and they were disembowelled.

Death Came From a Kick

Alleged that Josh. Clark Died as the Result of a Quarrel with his Brother James

Oil Springs, Ont, Oct. 11.—Josh Clark met his death here yesterday by violence, supposed to have been received from his brother James. The two brothers lieved on a joint farm on the 4th concession of Enniskillen, about three miles north of Oil Springs, together with the dead man's wife and family.

They went to Petrolea on Thursday with grain, returning home in the evening the worse of liquor. A dispute in the house led to a fight, and it was during this that the elder brother, James is alleged to have kicked Josh in the abdomen, causing internal injuries that resulted fatally.

Dr Chalmers was called and pronounced the case hopeless, and Clark died at three o'clock yesterday afternoon. Dr. Chalmers refused to issue the regular death certificate. Coroner Mott, of Petrolea, arrived and issued a warrant for an inquest.

THE BROTHER'S STORY.

When seen James Clarke said that he and his brother took a load of grain to Petrolea Thursday and returning home late in the afternoon stopped at Farr's hotel to procure a flask of whiskey from which they each took an occasional drink. At Oil City they met some friends and had a few rounds at Will's hotel and arrived home about eight o'clock, and after supper they began quarrelling. Then James called Joseph a liar and the two men clinched, and then James left the house for over an hour, and when he came back Joseph had gone to bed and was moaning, but James says he thought this was from the effects of the liquor. James Clark came to Oil Springs last night for the purpose of giving himself up to the police. He went to Magistrate Marshall, and as there was no authority for taking him into custody he was not detained and returned home. The Clark brothers have been living on the 4th line for about four years. Jos. the deceased, was 47 years of age, and leaves a wife and four small children. James is a bachelor, aged 50 years.

Maintains His Majority

Not Much of Interest in Yesterday's Election Conservatives Have a Net Gain of one Lord Cromer Recalled

London, Oct. 11.—Apart from Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman's reduced majority in the Stirling Burghs, and the success of Sir Edward J. Reed at Cardiff, a seat formerly held by Mr. James M. MacLean, prominent in Indian affairs, who did not seek re-election, there is little of special interest in yesterday's election returns.

The grand totals now are—Ministerialists, 355; Opposition, 206. The Evening News asserts, on what is declared to be trustworthy authority, that the Marquis of Lansdowne, Secretary of State for War, and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Chancellor of the Exchequer, will not retain their posts in the Cabinet after the election.

INFORTY CONTESTS.

Elections were held and the results declared in forty constituencies in various parts of the United Kingdom yesterday. In these pollings the Liberals have gained five seats, the Nationalists one, and the Conservatives one; the result being that the Conservatives have made a gain of 26 and the Opposition 25, a net gain of one seat for the Ministerialists.

The poll in South Dublin resulted as follows—

Mooney, Nationalist 3,410
Plunkett, Conservative 1,906
Ball, Unionist 1,539

The Daily Telegraph denounced the Unionist tactics as vindicative, reckless and scandalous. The Times, however, which opposes what it calls the Government's policy of killing home rule by kindness and soothing syrup, blames Mr. Balfour, the Government leader in the House, and Mr. Plunkett, the defeated candidate, for setting up one form of discontent and irritation in Ireland while trying to abolish another, and thereby driving the loyal Irish into a revolt.

THE PRICE OF PEACE.

Sir Lewis William Molesworth has been elected from the Bodmin division of Cornwall. He is a Liberal-Unionist, and succeeds the Right Hon. Leonard Courtney, who represented the district since 1885. As president of the South African Conciliation Committee since its inception last January, Mr. Courtney has been the head, practically, of the Peace party in Great Britain. In March last he memorialized Lord Salisbury in favor of early peace negotiations, and in May addressed another letter to the Premier, protesting against the Government's declared intention of annexing the two conquered republics, and urging that their internal independence be maintained.

OPPOSITION LEADER WINS.

Right Hon. Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, was re-elected from the Stirling district.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman addressing his supporters after the poll had been declared in his favor, said he was satisfied with the results, considering the state of the register, and the "most disadvantageous circumstances for an election that an ingenious Government could desire."

Sir Robert Fitzgerald, the newly re-elected Conservative member for Cambridge city, was brutally assaulted and kicked in the head by roughs, and badly injured while addressing a country meeting yesterday evening.

LORD CROMER SUMMONED HOME.

London, Oct. 11.—Baron Cromer, British diplomatic agent and Consul-General in Egypt, has been summoned to England, according to the Cairo correspondent of the Daily Express. It is understood in Cairo that he will not return to Egypt, and it is believed that he will become a member of the new Cabinet.

The Daily Express suggests that it is possible that Lord Cromer will replace the Marquis of Lansdowne, Secretary of State for War, and says that "A combination of Cromer, Kitchener and Roberts would ensure public confidence in a thorough reform of the War Office."

MUNICIPAL ELECTION MATTERS.

Messrs. Denne and McWilliams for the Mayor's Chair for 1901.

Ald. Denne, we understand, is likely to be a candidate at the approaching municipal elections for Mayor. He has been for eight years a member of the Council, having for some years filled the important position of Chairman of the Finance Committee. He is therefore, familiar with the duties of chief magistrate.

It is more than probable that Mr. J. B. McWilliams will also be prevailed upon to stand. Everybody knows how fearlessly he did his duty in guarding the interests of the ratepayers last year and how bitterly he was opposed in the Mayorality contest by corporation contractors, office holders and others who had axes to grind and friends to serve.

The Times is anxious to see a council elected next year that will pledge itself to certain definite reforms, and put an end to well-known evils that at present exist. To such The Times will give a hearty support.

MINISTER LEADS DUAL LIFE.

Pastor Richard Einsiedel, of Beloit, Deceives His Congregation.

Beloit, Wis., Oct. 12.—When the Rev. Richard A. W. Einsiedel, who for six years had been pastor of the First German Lutheran Church of this city, left for his birthplace in Germany last July the congregation gave him a well-filled purse in token of their appreciation of his past services as spiritual guide. He declared his intention of returning in two months and said he had bought a return ticket.

Soon after his departure the trustees discovered that their former pastor had led a dual life and was not likely to return. Before leaving he sold his life insurance policy to an unsuspecting farmer, but failed to settle claims of local tradesmen and outside parties aggregating large sums.

His successor, a boyhood chum in Germany and later a co-worker in St. Paul, found that Einsiedel had left 900 empty whiskey bottles in the rectory.

It has developed that the pastor, who had collected sufficient funds to pay for a new bell, purchased last April, never settled for it. Inquiry of the steamship company brings information that Einsiedel did not purchase a return ticket.

RHODES PRESIDENT OF SOUTH AFRICAN LEAGUE

He Attributes the War to the Mugwumps and but for them Kruger Would not have Dared to send His Ultimatnm

Cape Town, Oct. 10.—Mr. Cecil Rhodes received an ovation to-day when he assumed the Presidency of the Congress of the South African League. During the course of his address he attributed the South African war to the "mugwumps," and said that but for them Mr. Kruger would never have dared to send an ultimatum to Great Britain.

Generally speaking, Mr. Rhodes was conciliatory in his remarks. He declared that now that "Krugerism had vanished," Great Britain would establish a liberal government, "which would do everything possible to unite the interests of South Africa with those of the Empire."

Mr. Rhodes also said there was no desire "to plaster Rhodesia on Cape Colony," intimating that it was "likelier to be the other way." But he thought Rhodesia would be one of the federated States, with great opportunities for expansion in the direction of the Congo.

He then said—"Now that the battle is over the dispute on the origin of the war ought to cease. The race question must be subordinated. The league should support three points, the supremacy of flag, equal rights, and show the Dutch that there is no feeling against them. Having won what it is entitled to, the league ought to demonstrate that interests of races are the same. Then there will be great hope for the country."

The Congress adopted a resolution approving the Government's policy and the "splendid services" of Sir Alfred Milner, and tendering sincere thanks to the colonies for the "Imperial spirit which prompted them to send troops to South Africa."

Walter Gordon, the Manitoba Murderer Probably Insane

Walter Gordon, the young man declared guilty of the double murder in Manitoba, is a native of Whitby township, Ont. Our esteemed townsman, N. Poutley, is well acquainted with him and thinks that although apparently allright when he last saw him, he was probably out of his mind at the time the deed was committed, as there is insanity in the family. The young man is known in Peterborough, where he lived for a short time some years ago.

BOERS AMBUSH BRITISH TRAIN, HEAVY CASUALTIES

Two of Roberts' Men Killed, Seven Wounded and Eleven Taken Prisoners

GEN. DE WET DRIVEN NORTH OF THE VAAL RIVER

De Lisle's Mounted Men and the Colonial Contingent Engage Him in Hard Conflict for Three Days

King Williamstown, Oct. 11. The Boers have torn up the railway north of Bethenie, and captured a British outpost.

Paris, Oct. 11. It is semi officially denied here, that the French Government has been approached on the subject of the suggested disembarkation of former President Kruger at Marseilles, whence he would cross thence to The Hague. On the contrary, it is added, Mr. Kruger is expected to land directly in Holland.

London, Oct. 11.—Despite circumstantial reports to the effect that General De Wet had reached the neighborhood of Wepener, it is scarcely likely that he has recently been anywhere near that place. The fact that he has just been driven to the north of the Vaal by the mounted infantry and colonial troops, under De Lisle shows that after all he has not penetrated as far south as has persistently been reported. Strange to relate, the scene of the three days' fight between the noted guerilla and his British pursuers turns out to be identically the same as that of the latter part of the memorable pursuit by Kitchener and Methuen in the midle of August last. De Wet and his newly raised force are now at Venters Kroon, on the Vaal, a few miles south of Potchefstroom. It was at Venters Kroon that Lord Methuen engaged De Wet on August 6th, driving him from strong positions and hastening his northward flight. Three days later Lord Kitchener overtook the Boer rear guard at Lindeque, a short distance to the eastward, and fought a brisk action. De Wet subsequently crossed the railway northeast of Potchefstroom, and effected a junction with Delarey. If history continues to repeat itself he may again pursue the route followed on the previous occasion and attempt to join the Boers who are said to be in the Pietersburg district, far to the north of Pretoria. That De Wet should be going through practically the same performance with the British as he went through two months ago is certainly a remarkable fact. The advantage on this occasion is, however, with the British, who now know the country and will be able to profit by their former experience in it. So that the capture of De Wet is nearer than it was when Kitchener called the Canadian infantry to aid him in what was thought to be the last fight against De Wet.

BRITISH LOST HEAVILY.

London, Oct. 11.—The following despatch has been received at the War Office from Lord Roberts—

"Pretoria, Wednesday, Oct. 10.—An engine with a truck, conveying a party of engineers belonging to Paget's Rifle Brigade, while proceeding yesterday to Kaapmuiden, was ambushed by Boers. Captain Stewart with forty men of the Rifle Brigade went to their support. The casualties, unfortunately, were heavy. Stewart and one private were killed; Capt. Paget, Lieut. Stubbs and five engineers were wounded, and Lieut. Sewell and ten of the Rifle Brigade were made prisoners.

"De Lisle's mounted men and colonials, after three days' fighting, have driven De Wet north of the Vaal near Venter's Kroon. De Wet has been assuring the burghers that Europe would stop the war October 10th. The Boers were thus buoyed with the hope that something would intervene to end the war in their favour. I trust they now realize how futile were there expectations."

Challenge For The Canada's Cup

Canadians Will Stand by the 35 Foot Yachts For the Next Race

A Committee of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club has been appointed to interview Mr. Aemilius Jarvis, the crack skipper of the lakes, and endeavor to obtain his consent to participate next year in international races between Canada and the United States.

If Mr. Jarvis' reply is in the affirmative a formal challenge will be sent to the Chicago Yacht Club, the present holders of the Canada's Cup, for a series of races for the trophy, to take place next August on Lake Michigan or wherever the defending club chooses to race. The R. C. Y. C. will stipulate that the event be for 35-foot yachts, as was the case in 1899, when the Genesee won the trophy at this port. Members of the club will build three or four boats, and outside clubs will also be invited to join in the competition for the honor of representing Canada.

The annual meeting of the R. C. Y. C. will be held on the Saturday night of the second week in November, when the new Sailing Committee and other officers will be elected. The Canada's Cup challenge should be in this month, but it will be remembered that the Chicago club's challenge in '99 did not reach here until late in November, so it is believed that the present holders will reciprocate the courtesy and accept a challenge whenever it is sent from here.

The R. C. Y. C. will expand on its policy of encouragement to the 16-footers next season, and this class will receive a special notice in the distribution of the prize money. The annual ball will probably not be held until January, but the usual Monday night hops will continue for the balance of the month.

VICTIMS OF THE FEVER.

The Telegram had the following special cablegram yesterday—

London, Oct. 11.—Three deaths amongst the Canadians have been reported to the War Office from South Africa. Enteric fever was the cause in each case. The victims of the disease, which has played such havoc with the troops, were—

Pte. W. F. WHITERLEY, late of 5th Regiment, R.C.A., British Columbia and Manitoba Company Royal Canadian Regiment of infantry.

Pte. W. HAINES, formerly with R.C. R.I., Toronto Company, Royal Canadian Regiment of Infantry.

Pte. L. P. DAVIS, late 46 Leonard street, New York, "C" Squadron Strathcona Horse

Pte. W. Haines came from Newmarket, Ont., where he was employed as a harness maker. He was 19 years of age.

This cable officially confirms the news that had previously reached Canada concerning these young soldiers.

FIVE STRATHCONAS KILLED.

London, Oct. 11.—A special despatch from Lydenburg says—"A Boer prisoner tells the story of the way in which a patrol of five troopers of Strathcona's Horse, under Sergeant Brothers, met death. It appears that they were suddenly surrounded by a strong force of Boers. The Canadians indignatly refused to surrender, and a murderous fire was exchanged at short range until every man in the party was riddled with bullets, but not before each Canadian had accounted for three Boers.

"Sir Redvers Buller, while passing through Machadodorp and bidding farewell to the troops, said he should be greatly pleased to tell Lord Strathcona of the magnificent work of his troopers."

GREAT FAREWELL TO BULLER.

London, Oct. 10.—A despatch from Pietermaritzburg, Natal, says it is officially announced that General Buller will arrive there on Oct. 15. It is assumed from this that he is coming home.

Our Exhibit at Paris

Note Written by Former Governor General in Canadian Commissioner's Register

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 11.—Reports received at the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa from some of the Department's agents in the cities in Great Britain, state that several shipments of Canadian butter have been landed there without any shipping marks on the bags which cover the packages. It would be to the interests of shippers to put the shipping marks on the outside of the bags as well as on the packages themselves; otherwise the bags have to be removed on the wharf, thus exposing the packages to the risk of being soiled.

Another report says that the Prince Edward Island shippers send the best made boxes for both cheese and eggs (the cheese boxes of P.E.I. are made from birch, instead of the easy split soft elm used in many other places.) The Department of Agriculture at Ottawa has just received from Mr. W. A. MacKinnon, in charge of the exhibit of Canadian food products at the Paris Exposition, a copy of a note written by the Earl of Aberdeen in the register of the Canadian commissioner at the Exhibition. It will be observed that his Lordship has not lost any of his old-time interest in Canada, nor his felicity in expressing his appreciation of its good things. His Lordship wrote as follows—"Thoroughly practical character of the exhibit, combined with effective and tasteful arrangement (which is in itself a mark of business capacity) cannot fail to strike the observer with highly favourable impressions, are, of course, made peculiarly agreeable because of the many pleasant associations awakened by renewed acquaintance with the products of the country which must hold a firm place in the regard of those who have partaken of the hospitality of 'Our Lady of the Sunshine.'"

A report just received at the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa from Mr. MacKinnon, in charge of the exhibit of Canadian food at the Paris Exposition says—"Re exhibit at Vincennes. There are not so many visitors at Vincennes as at the Trocadero gardens, but those who go far out of the way have an object. On the week days of this diary exhibition nearly every one in the pavilion was directly or indirectly interested in the cheese trade. Some days there were great crowds, among whom were many of the merely curious, but as thousands tasted our Canadian cheese, no other being given away, that product was made known in one day to inhabitants of all parts of France."

An Enjoyable Event

The annual Harvest Home Dinner, given by the Woman's Auxilliary and Senior Girls' Guild of All Saints' Church last night, was well attended, and proved to be a very enjoyable affair. Following the dinner was an organ recital, given by Mr. J. C. Rodgers, assisted by Mrs. C. A. Barton, soprano soloist. The musical selections were well received, and showed to advantage the strength, volume and sweetness of the new organ. Mrs. Barton's singing was especially good.

WEATHER NOTES.

Probs. To-day Fair.

The storm development which has been threatening the Maritime Provinces has now occurred, and an important disturbance is situated to the south ward of the Bay of Fundy. Very heavy rains have been experienced in the Maritime Provinces, together with gales, but elsewhere in Canada the weather has remained fine with no immediate prospect of a change.

A PROSPEROUS INSTITUTION.

We congratulate the management of the Molson's Bank on the result of the year's operations, as shown by the annual report which appears elsewhere in to-day's issue.

The net earnings of the bank for the year ending 29th September, after making full provision for bad and doubtful debts, amounted to $308,-128.92, equal to about 13 1-2 per cent. on the average capital. This has been disposed of by two half-yearly dividends of 4 per cent. each, and a bonus of 1 per cent., business taxes $6,252.51; Bank premises, $20,234.63, and exceptional donations, $12,250, leaving $61,-083.01 to be disposed of, $50,000 of which has been added to the Rest Account, and the balance, $11,083.01, carried to Profit and Loss Account. The premium obtained on the $500,000 new stock, amounting to $375,000 has been placed to Rest Account, which, with the $50,000 transferred from the past year's profits, now amounts to $2,050,-000, equal to 82 per cent. of the capital.

The President, in his remarks, paid a fitting tribute to the late Mr. F. Wolferstan Thomas, who for 30 years was general manager, and referred to the fortunate position of the Bank in having a gentleman of Mr. James Elliott's experience and ability to fill the vacant position.

LAWYERS' FEES

Some little time ago Colonel Denison, the police magistrate of Toronto, says the Hamilton Post, took occasion to advert very strongly to the large fees which lawyers sometimes take from clients. This was, as will be remembered in connection with a matter that came before him, in which, out of about $400 collected by a lawyer, the client received between $30 and $40. The client thought that this was a somewhat unfair division of the spoils. Had the lawyer taken as his share one-half or even three-fourths, it would not have been so bad. The client drew the line, however, at nine-tenths. And when the magistrate gently intimated that this was a trifle excessive on the part of the lawyer, the latter naively asked, "How then are lawyers to live?" A somewhat similar case has occurred in Winnipeg, where, out of $40,000 collected, the lawyer claimed $31,000, and was willing to allow the client $9,000. The proportion of costs in this case was, it will be seen, not quite so large as in the former case; the lawyer, on account of the large amount involved, having made a reduction in his costs. This last case, we believe, is as yet undecided. We cannot say, therefore, whether the courts recognized the forbearance of the legal gentleman in not claiming the whole sum.

But, in all seriousness, is not this question of excessive legal fees becoming a somewhat burning question? Are there not altogether too many cases in which the client receives the shell, and the lawyer the oyster? It is to be feared that there are, and that the profession in general suffers from the grasping avarice, if not the dishonesty, of certain of its members; suffers, not only in public esteem, but also, to take even a lower view, in actual dollars and cents. The public will not indulge in the luxury of law when the costs and fees eat up almost all the proceeds. They would be very foolish if they did. The two legal gentlemen in the instances cited may be very estimable persons, and they may have been unjustly maligned in connection therewith. We are expressing no opinion on these cases. It is well known, however, that there are members of the profession who make a practice, whenever possible, of "bleeding" their victims. The sooner such men are disbarred or struck off the rolls, the better for the profession and the public.

Love Won - and - Lost.

A NOVEL.

(Continued.)

"Perhaps your own people could advise you best," he said, thoughtfully. He never forgot how the beautiful face turned away from him with the saddest cry he had ever heard from human lips, as the words slowly trembled on the white lips.

"I have no one, sir; no one in all the wide world but Mr Ross."

"I could find no one in Silvernook who knew my husband," continued Isetta, "though I went from house to house; then I tried so hard to think what I should do, sir, until Alderic came for me, without home, friends, or money."

"How long have you been in Silvernook?"

"Since early yesterday morning. I could not find my husband's old nurse, so I came to this spot to think what was best to do."

"Have you been out in the cold and darkness all night?" he asked.

"Yes, sir; but I did not feel the cold, and I hid my face among the daisies to shut out the darkness until morning came again."

Abel Moore could have wept for her, but one thought drifted across his mind, the same thought that had come to all who had heard her story.

Poor child! heaven help her; she is cast drift on the world; whether from folly or inexperience, they could not tell; it was hard to judge her.

The flute-maker hid his face in his hands; he could see she loved this man who had won her love with all the depths of her young, trusting heart.

It was one of the cruelest of tasks to undeceive her; how could he tear from her eyes the veil of innocence and trust, showing her the cold, mocking world, that would laugh at the woe which stretched out before her?

"Some villain has taken this means of ridding himself of this beautiful girl," he thought. "Oh, Lord!" cried Abel, holding up his hands to heaven, "how canst Thou have patience with men?"

He wondered how they could live and breathe God's pure air, while such a sin as this stained their souls.

"You must bide your time patiently until he comes, my poor child. Has any thought occurred to you as to where you could go in the meantime?"

"No, sir; I had not thought much of that. I had a little change left, quite by accident, in my pocket, with which I could purchase food until my husband comes for me. I shall go to the depot when each train arrives, that I may be sure he will not miss me."

"God help her," mentally ejaculated the old flute-maker. "I fear those raven locks will whiten beneath the snows of many a year before the return of him for whom she would watch and wait!

"If she only had a mother to advise her," he thought; "she is so young, beautiful, artless, and so helpless. If she had sinned it was with a soul so pure it might plead to heaven for pardon, and fin forgiveness there."

The flute-maker scarcely knew which way to point out to her.

"I have a good old wife at home, my child; come to her; surely Marguirette above all others will know what is best for you."

His face was so kind and his voice so gentle, Isetta arose and followed him at once.

"There is one thing I would like to ask you," said the old man, stopping short in the path. "Mind, I do not doubt what you have told me, but before I take you home to my Marguirette, I should like to ask you one question."

Isetta raised her eyes earnestly to his face.

"You have told me, child, your mother is dead."

Isetta looked up at the blue arched dome above her.

"If death were to claim you, would you have the hope of meeting your sainted mother, spotless, in heaven?" he asked, solemnly.

"Yes," answered Isetta, clasping her hands, reverentially, and turning her dark, sorrowful eyes up to the fleecy clouds above her.

From that moment the flute-maker would have staked his life upon Isetta's truthfulness and purity. Not another word was spoken, as he led her through the gloaming to his humble home.

How little she knew, as she walked up that shell-bordered path that, far away in his stately home, at that moment the good old doctor was bending over her husband's prostrate form, saying:

"His life hangs by a single thread; if he lives, his reason may be partially restored; never wholly, unless by a violent shock, which would probably cost him his life. If he lives at all, you must be content."

In the midst of a bower of honeysuckles, purple lilacs, and nodding sun-flowers, quite hidden from view like a bird's nest, was the flute-maker's cottage.

From the open doorway the soft whirring of a spinning- wheel fell upon their ear, and the low notes of a woman's voice singing the sweetest, most plaintive melody Isetta had ever heard.

The room was furnished plainly and neatly. A shaded lamp burned upon the mantel, from which the single occupant of the room was partially turned as if in expectancy.

"Is that you, Abel?" she called, as he paused on the threshold.

"Yes, Marguirette, wife, it is I."

"Ah!" exclaimed the old lady softly. "I thought I heard a stranger's footsteps."

The venerable face, framed in its snowy hair, was bent slightly forward, and the blue eyes were turned inquiringly toward the door; yet in them was no sight. Poor lady! she was blind.

"You are right, Marguirette," answered the flute-maker; "I have brought a stranger with me — a young girl."

Isetta noticed how soft and low his voice grew as he spoke to her.

"A young girl, did you say, Abel?"

"Yes, one just about the age of our Amy, when— when—"

He did not finish the sentence, and Isetta saw him turn aside, a tear rolling down his furrowed cheek.

Isetta wondered why the poor lady clasped her in her arms so firmly to her beating heart, while her hands wandered trembling over her long.

(To be Continued.)

Many a woman has periodic crying spells. She meets her husband with eyes red and swollen and he cries out: "What has happened?" "Nothing" his wife replies. "I don't know what is the matter with me, but I just had to have a good cry." Men don't have crying spells. It would seem therefore that an affection confined to women must have its cause in the womanly nature. There is no doubt that a diseased condition of the delicate womanly organs, is in general responsible for feminine nervousness and hysteria.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes women happy by making them healthy. There are no more crying spells. "Favorite Prescription" cures inflammation, ulceration and female weakness. It makes weak women strong, sick women well.

There is no medicine "just as good." Accept no substitute.

"For three years," writes Mrs. Mary A. Sasser, of High, Lamar Co., Texas, "I suffered with falling of the womb, also ulceration of the womb. After using three bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription,' four of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and two vials of 'Pleasant Pellets,' I found relief. I am able to do my work with ease. I recommend your wonderful medicine to all my friends, for I truly believe it saved my life."

THE MOLSONS BANK.

Annual Meeting of the Shareholders.

A SATISFACTORY REPORT

Pension Fund to be Established for the Officers—Change of Date of Annual Meeting—Directors Re-elected.

The forty-fifth annual general meeting of the Shareholders of the Molsons Bank was held in the Board Room of that institution at 3 o'clock yesterday. The president, Mr. W. Molson Macpherson occupied the chair, and among those present were—Messrs. S. H. Ewing, Vice-President; J. P. Cleghorn, Samuel Finley, F. C. Henshaw, H. Markland Molson, directors; A. G. Watson, George Filer, George Durnford, Clarence McCuaig, J. Try-Davies, John Crawford, E. H. Copland, John Molson, S. W. Ewing, Hon. James O'Brien, R. W. Shepherd, F. W. Molson, Herbert Molson, A. T. Taylor, James Wilson, W. de M. Marler and—Macculloch.

The President, having called the meeting to order, requested Mr. A. D. Durnford to act as secretary, and after that gentleman had read the advertisement convening the meeting, the President named Messrs. J. Try-Davies and A. G. Watson to act as scrutineers.

REPORT OF THE DIRECTORS.

The General Manager, Mr. James Elliott, then read the annual report of the Directors as follows—

At this the forty-fifth annual meeting of the Shareholders of The Molsons Bank, the Directors beg to present the report for the year ending 29th September, 1900.

The net earnings of the Bank, after making full provision for bad and doubtful debts, amount to $308,128.92, equal to about 13 1-2 per cent on the average capital. This has been distributed by two semi-annual dividends of 4 per cent., and a bonus of 1 per cent., in all $205,288.72; business taxes, $8,259.51; Bank Premises, $20,254.68, and exceptional donations, $13,250, leaving $61,083.01 to be disposed of, $50,000 of which has been carried to Rest Account. The balance, $11,083.01, has been carried to Profit and Loss Account, which, with the balance carried over from last year, now amounts to $26,992.48. The premium obtained on the $500,000 new stock, authorized by you at our last meeting, amounting to $375,000, has been placed to Rest Account, which, with the $50,000 transferred from the past year's profits, now amounts to $2,050,000, equal to 85 per cent. of the capital.

We are pleased once more to record the fact that the officers of the Bank continue to perform their duties with efficiency and zeal, and possess the confidence of the Board.

The branches of the Bank have been inspected once at least during the year.

It is with deep regret we refer to the death since last we met, of our much-esteemed General Manager, Mr. F. Wolferstan Thomas. His connection with the Bank lasted for thirty years, during which time it grew under his able management from a local institution to its present position. Mr. Thomas's personality was well known not only in this city, but throughout the Dominion, and his death was a loss to many important interests outside the banking sphere.

We have also to record the loss by death of Mr. Henry Archbald, a Director of the Bank for many years, whose cautious and prudent counsel was much valued. Lieut.-Col. Henshaw was called to fill the vacancy on our Directorate.

The position of General Manager was filled by the appointment thereto of Mr. James Elliott, Manager of the Montreal branch, who had been in the service of the Bank for upwards of forty years.

(Signed), W. MOLSON MACPHERSON,
President.

THE DISCUSSION.

The President then said—I have much pleasure in submitting to you our statement for the year, which I am sure you will regard as satisfactory.

At the last annual meeting we asked you for authority to increase the capital of the Bank by $500,000, which power was granted, and I am happy to say that it has all been subscribed, and that the business of the Bank has benefited by the large capital. The Rest Fund now amounts to $2,050,000.

The business of the Bank throughout its various branches has been entirely satisfactory, and we are most fortunate in having a staff of interested and efficient officers, numbering in all 240 throughout our various branches.

The room available for the public in our Bank here proved inadequate, and we have found it necessary to enlarge the space for the public as well as for the officers, and I am inclined to think that the alterations have been entirely satisfactory, and should be adequate for years to come.

We deplore the death of Mr. F. Wolferstan Thomas, who for thirty years was General Manager of The Molsons Bank, and during his management it attained a position of influence and prominence. Mr. Thomas was a banker with sound business views, and his counsel in connection with our Banking Acts proved of great advantage to the commercial community. His long services in the Bank endeared him to the officers of that institution, and also to all who come in contact with him.

I am happy to say that we were fortunate in having Mr. James Elliot, Manager of the Montreal branch, ready to accept the position of General Manager of the Bank. Mr. Elliot had for years worked with the late General Manager in matters relating to the general management of the Bank, so that he will be well fitted to assume the general management.

Death has removed from our Board, I regret to say, Mr. Henry Archbald, one of our most careful and painstaking Directors. He for years watched the affairs of the Bank.

A by-law will be submitted to you asking that the Board be authorized to establish a Pension Fund for the benefit of the officers of the Bank. It is usual now for banks to have a Pension Fund, and we have realized the hardship arising through not having one. I feel sure that our application will meet with your approval.

I have much pleasure in moving the adoption of the report.

The motion was seconded by Mr. S. H. Ewing, Vice-President.

The General Manager—We have two by-laws to propose. The first, which is by-law No. 2—we passed No. 1 last year—reads—

"The annual meeting of the Bank shall be held on the third Monday in October in each year."

On account of having so many branches, as we now have, spread over such a large extent of country, we cannot get the returns in in time properly for the second Monday, so that we would like to have the annual meeting take place on the third Monday in October.

The by-law was unanimously adopted.

The General Manager—By-law No. 3 reads—

"The Directors are authorized to establish a Pension Fund for the officers of the Bank and to set aside annually, from the earnings of the Bank, such contribution as they may think proper for the said fund."

It empowers the Directors to contribute a trifle to the fund if they think proper. We are presenting it for the approval of this meeting.

Mr. John Crawford thought that as the by-law now read, it placed unlimited power in the hands of the Directors to donate whatever amount they might choose.

The President, in reply to Mr. George Durnford, said that the amount donated would appear in the annual statement of the Bank.

Mr. George Durnford—In that case anything the shareholders thought was too excessive could easily be referred back.

Mr. A. G. Watson—Would you enlighten the Shareholders, Mr. President, as to what proportion of the fund will be payable by those for whose benefit it is intended?

The President—The intention is that 3 per cent. should be charged on the salaries of the officers; that is, that 3 per cent. should be deducted from their salaries.

The by-law was then adopted unanimously.

Mr. James Wilson made reference to the general financial statement, which he considered an admirable one, and expressed the hope that the Bank would go on and prosper, as it seemed in a fair way of doing.

Mr. John Crawford was also well satisfied with the financial statement, and in view of the position of the Bank, he thought that a regular annual dividend of 10 per cent., payable quarterly, should be initiated. He observed that Lt.-Col. Henshaw had been appointed on the directorate to succeed Mr. Henry Archbald, deceased, and whilst paying a nice little compliment to the colonel as a business man, he objected to the filling of such vacancies by the Directors within a few weeks of the annual meeting of the Shareholders. Mr. Crawford then went on to offer a few words of caution respecting the extension of branch banks, of which it was stated that there were [illegible] of which 36 were outside the city; none had been opened last year. He spoke of the distances that intervened between the branches and the head institution, as well as of the difficulties of inspection, and remarked that it was generally in the branches where trouble arose. He referred to the increased capital of the Bank and said that last year at the annual meeting $1,000,000 might have been authorized, but only 50 per cent. was issued, the remainder to be issued at any time afterwards, as might be deemed advisable. It cost a good deal of money to go to Ottawa and get the consent of the Government for the $500,000 that had been issued, and he held that as the ice had been broken, it would be infinitely better to increase the capital to $3,000,000, and there let it rest; an odd sum of $2,500,000 would not, he thought be satisfactory to the bank. He asked if the President had read clause 45, of the amended Bank Act, and what was his interpretation of it.

Mr. A. G. Watson thought that, perhaps, Mr. Crawford was suggesting too much for the directors to take up at once. If a regular annual dividend of 10 per cent., payable half-yearly, were considered, to begin with, it would be an improvement.

Mr. Crawford was quite agreeable to accept this change, and added,—"Then it is understood, Mr. President, next year is to be 10 per cent., half on yearly."

The President—It is very pleasing to hear the shareholders move that resolution a year in advance, and we shall feel very grateful if we can offer the dividend to you next year; but you cannot expect it to come from me that such will be the case. As regards a dividend, of course, the first thing we have to do as your trustees, is to take care, you can rely on your dividend every year, and in the way we have been paying it in the past, but don't ask us to pay more than we feel warranted in doing, because safety is the great thing. As regards the increased capital of the bank, I remember Mr. Crawford's remarks last year in reference to it, and it might have been wise to have asked power to issue $1,000,000 when we required; or $500,000 at the time, and $500,000 in the future. But we required only the $500,000, as shown by the statement, and so far we have not discovered that we require further; when that time comes, we must ask you to extend that power to us. As to branches, I think there is no doubt that all the banking institutions in Canada realize the necessity of branches. I am happy to say that we have not found it necessary to extend them this year. The year before the one just closed we discovered places which, owing to the growth of the country, and its enlargement towards the Pacific, made it necessary for us to open branches, and in connection with that, we naturally had to strengthen our inspecting staff, which is of a very strong character, and we have every confidence in it. We fully appreciate what Mr. Crawford says; there is great danger, but we have got to face it, and we must ask you to entrust us with its management as far as possible. As regards the Banking Act, which Mr. Crawford spoke about, I don't think he expects me to answer him at the moment (Mr. Crawford, "No, no.") It is very possible for varied opinions. We have not had occasion to take an opinion upon it, and at the moment, I am afraid I cannot give one.

The motion for the adoption of the report was unanimously carried.

Mr. John Crawford then moved,—"That the thanks of the Shareholders are due and are hereby tendered to the President, Vice-President and Directors for their valuable services to the Bank during the past year."

This was seconded by Mr. E. H. Copland, and unanimously concurred in.

The President expressed the thanks of himself and co-Directors for the very kind remarks that had been made in reference to the year's work.

Mr. S. H. Ewing also desired, on behalf of himself and co-Directors, to thank the Shareholders for the vote just passed. To himself, as one of the oldest Directors of the Bank, it was very gratifying to be present as a director that day. When he first became connected with the Bank, it was a very humble institution, compared with the position it occupied today. They had dark days away back in 1879, and thereabouts, but they lived through them and steadily progressed, and he had no doubt the time would come when they would be able to pay a regular dividend of 10 per cent., but he would not say quarterly. He would like to see the Rest of the Bank brought up to 100 per cent. of the capital, which had always been his desire, because it then made it easy for the General Manager and the executive to make a dividend, and the Shareholders were always pretty sure of getting it, which was a great thing. It would have been a foolish thing to start some years ago with 10 per cent. and then reduce it. The Molsons bank, since his connection with it, nearly a quarter of a century ago, has always increased, never gone back. He had often discussed the question of branches with the late Mr. John H. R. Molson, as at first the directors thought that they were opening too many; but they found out at last that it did not seem to be a weakness. A few years before he had spoken to the President of the Clydesdale Bank, Glasgow, on the subject, and that gentleman told him that his bank had 300 agencies in Scotland and England. He (Mr. Ewing) reported that to Mr. Molson, and it made the Directors easier in their minds about the number of branches they had.

Mr. John Crawford spoke a few words of admiration and appreciation of the alterations and improvements that have recently been made in the Bank.

The meeting then proceeded to the election of Directors, and the scrutineers soon reported that the former Board had been re-elected, viz.—Messrs. James P. Cleghorn, S. H. Ewing, Samuel Finley, H. Markland Molson, W. Molson Macpherson, W. M. Ramsay, F. C. Henshaw.

At a subsequent meeting of the Directors, Mr. W. Molson Macpherson was re-elected President, and Mr. S. H. Ewing, Vice-President.

The Deer in Luck.

"The election campaign may kill off a few political parasites," remarked Mr. Wm. Snowden yesterday, "but it will spare the lives of those monarchs of the forest, the deer. The season for their slaughter is from the first to the 15th of November. The elections coming in the middle of the season has had the effect of breaking up more than one hunting party; for those who indulge annually in this sport are, as a rule, also politicians of more or less activity, and they prefer the excitement of the campaign to that of the chase. The deer are in luck this year.

The Business Man's Rostrum.

Every person who is in business of any kind must have something to communicate to the people from whom he expects to derive an income. A successful merchant says that he regards the advertising columns of the newspaper as his rostrum, from which to tell to the people what he would say to them if he could meet them in his store. The public looks to the newspaper advertisements for such information as the merchant has to give, and in giving it he confers a benefit both upon the public and himself. Everybody reads The Times.

Teachers Salaries To Go Up.

The Educational Department expects that the salaries of Public school teachers will go up considerably. This fall the professional third class teachers' certificates will all expire according to the regulations passed in 1896, and there will be no students at the provincial Model school this fall holding anything less than a junior leaving certificate. This means that there will be a drop in the number of prospective teachers from about 1,400 to about 800 or 900. The number of new teachers annually required to fill vacancies about 1,200, consequently the demand will be for some time considerably greater than the supply, hence salaries may be expected to go up.

Address to the Electors

To the Free and Independent Electors of West Peterborough—

Gentlemen.—Having accepted the unanimous nomination of the Liberals of this Riding, as a candidate for its representation in the House of Commons I hereby respectfully solicit your support in securing my return at the coming general elections.

The grounds upon which I base my appeal are not so much nor chiefly by any means, my personal fitness for the position of your representation though as a citizen of Peterborough and interested in its progress in common with that of the country, I can and do promise, if elected, an intelligent support of such a public policy and such measures as will best conduce to the promotion of all the interests of Canada, the developement of her great resources and the general betterment of the civil moral and material condition of the public; and my best abilities and most assiduous attention shall be devoted to the faithful discharge of my representative duties.

The strongest ground, however, of my appeal consists in the fact that I am a firm supporter of the Liberal Government led by Sir Wilfred Laurier, which is entitled to the renewed confidence of the people, both on the ground of its policy and the splendid record established by the application of that policy. The Liberal party appealed to the country in 1896 upon a clearly defined policy and the promised results followed.

The Liberal party promised a reduction of a high tariff that hampered our industrial and agricultural interests and was hostile to the Mother Country.

The tariff was materially reduced and otherwise improved and in such a way as to help instead of hinder the manufacturer and farmer, with the consequence that never before in the history of the country have our industries or our farmers enjoyed such great prosperity, our mechanics and working men such constant employment and high wages, nor our commercial and all other interests so flourished.

Our domestic and foreign trade have also greatly increased. The loyal gift of a trade preference, represented by a tariff reduction on British goods of 33 1-3 per cent., and our despatch of the Canadian Contingent, have resulted in a kindlier feeling towards Canada and greatly increased trade with the Mother Country.

With a largely reduced rate of tariff, our revenue has greatly expanded so that the Government was warranted in practicing true economy (reducing our postal rate one third, giving Imperial penny postage,) and permitting of the completion of great public works, deepening our canals, so long trifled with, pushing the work on the Trent Valley Canal which is now urged and will be urged to completion by the Liberal Government, and the application of a vigorous policy of general development and improvement of our transportation facilities, resulting and to result in easier access to the British market and better prices for all our products.

The farming interests of the country are deserving of the best services of a Government, such as the present has given. The immense impetus given the produce trade between Canada and Great Britain, through the preferential tariff, has been greatly helped by the action of the Government in providing an excellent and adequate system of cold storage, by which Canadian products can be landed in Great Britain in first-class condition, guaranteeing the highest prices. The system is of the most modern character, sufficient for all the present needs of the trade, and it will be improved and enlarged as experience suggests, and increase of the produce trade demands, and I shall, if elected, feel it my duty to support any policy that will improve our trade with the Mother Country, and strengthens the bond of British connection, of which we are so proud.

In an industrial centre like Peterborough the claims of the working classes are especially deserving of consideration. No country is well governed that does not look after the interests of all classes of the community. The Conservative Government has been, and the Conservative party declares itself to be, extremely solicitous of the interests of the capitalist classes—the manufacturers—but it left the working classes to largely shift for themselves. A Liberal Government came into power, and the attitude towards Labour was changed, and the rights of Labour to its rights recognized, and in a practical way. A Department of Labour has been established and a Minister of Labour placed over it. A Labour Gazette has been established in the interests of workingmen, published monthly; conditions have been inserted in all Government contracts, compelling contractors to pay the highest current wages, which the Government guarantees the payment of; the sweating system has been abolished on Government contracts; the Alien Labour Act is enforced by a special officer, and in many other ways the Government has shown by deeds that the rights of the workingmen, as well as the capitalist, shall be protected. I heartily support the Government in what it has done, and shall support them in extending the benefits which they have already conferred, and which it is their policy to continue, as need arises.

The splendid achievements of Canadian soldiers in South Africa, make them worthy of the gratitude of the country. We have the best militia material in the world, and if we keep up a military establishment, let it be worthy of Canadians. Situated as Peterborough is, on the line of the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Railways, and on the line of the Trent Valley Canal, begun as a military work, and now under course of completion, no other point in this Province is so well adapted for a military centre. I shall, therefore, feel it my duty to press upon the Government the advisability of constructing in Peterborough new armories and connected buildings for military stores for Ontario, and I feel that this is practicable of attainment at the hands of a Government which has shown its interest in our volunteers by placing the Militia Department, so greatly neglected by a previous administration, upon an effective basis, and will, therefore, more naturally be well disposed towards the improvement involved in making Peterborough a centre for military stores.

A town of the industrial and commercial importance of Peterborough, has certainly strong claims upon the good offices and of a Government. For the past four years the town has been represented, when it was represented in the House, by a member opposed to the Government. There is no doubt in the minds of unprejudiced observers, that the present Liberal Government will be strongly sustained in the country at the coming elections, and the question arises whether West Peterborough will have its interests better served by a member sitting in opposition and hostile to the Government and its policy, or by a member pledged to give the Government a fair support in the application of its policy. If elected I pledge myself to give my best ability and exertions to the promotion of the general good of the country, and to look especially after the interests of West Peterborough.

I cannot obviously here, enter into details of how, in other ways the Liberal Government has implemented its promises and applied its policy, but I shall have an opportunity during the campaign of more fully dealing with these and other public questions.

As a supporter of such a Government I can appeal with confidence for the support of the Electors of West Peterborough, knowing that by helping to give, as you will do, through my election, a renewal of the trust the Liberal Government has discharged with such evident and gratifying results, they will be conferring a great and lasting good upon this riding, the country at large, and securing a continuation of the great blessings of prosperity and good government we now enjoy.

Again soliciting your support, your votes, and influence, in this contest,

I have the honor to be,
gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
J. H. McCLELLAN

ATTACK of ROYAL CANADIANS at Paardeberg

The present is a time when war pictures are in greater demand than ever. The conduct of the British soldiers on the battlefield has won the plaudits of admiring nations. We have at great expense published four large, beautiful pictures size 20x24, on heavy, superfine calendered paper. A picture that will command itself and send a thrill to the heart of every true Canadian is the one called Attack of Royal Canadians at Paardeberg, there are literally hundreds of figures on this picture, the mountains or kopjes stretching out into the distance are swarming with men, while here and there a prostrate figure speaks only too well of the Boer riflemen. It was on this battlefield the gallant Major Arnold met death unflinchingly. Indeed, it is only too true that many of these gallant hearts that beat so high when the cheering thousands bade them Godspeed as they sailed from Canada's shores now lie still forever in lonely graves on the other side of the world under African skies. To every Canadian heart, to every Canadian home, the deeds of their brave soldier boys speak with an irresistible thrill of patriotism and pride. Gordon Highlanders at the Battle of Belmont, Charging the Boer Guns at Slandslaagte and the Charge of Gen. French's Cavalry on the Retreating Gen. Cronje's Army. These are all stirring pictures and cannot fail to commend themselves to anyone who will examine them. They are RED HOT SELLERS! Agents coin money. Big profits. Enormous success. One agent sold 85 in one day. Sample and terms 25 cts (none free); four for 80 cts; $1.75 per dozen; $5 for 50; $9 for 100; for $12.00 Write to-day for a dozen and make money. Home Novelty Mfg. CANADA BUSINESS COLLEGE
Chatham, Ont.

Is doing more for its pupils than any other business school in Canada, or perhaps, than any other in the continent. How can we do this? First.

First: By giving them a practical, not a theoretical, preparation for business life.

Second: The business public has learned that there is this vast difference between the graduates of this school and those of other colleges, hence the strong demand for our graduates, which has enabled 220 to be placed in good positions between Sept., '99, and July, '00 a period of ten months.

The good work still goes on, and 73 have been placed between July 1st and Sept. 1st of this year.

RABID PRO-BOER IS BEATEN AT THE POLLS

Dr. Cavin-Brown Clark Rejected by the Electors of Caithness

A FOOLISH BOER PREDICTS A GREAT REVOLT

A Boer Envoy Now in Michigan Says that the Whole of South Africa May Fly to Arms—Tablet for Private Findlay

Capetown, Oct. 12. Sir Alfred Milner, the British High Commissioner, has gone to Bloemfontein.

London, Oct. 12.—Dr. Gavin Brown Clark, M.P. for Krugerdom in the British House of Commons, has met his deserts at the hands of the electors. His defeat at Caithness yesterday shows that the people of the north will not tolerate in their camp an enemy of Great Britain and one whose advice to the Boers undoubtedly helped to stiffen their necks for the struggle which commenced a year ago. Dr. Clark took a prominent part in organizing opposition to the war, advocating, to put it mildly, an extremely unpatriotic stand. Two of his letters to Kruger were discovered among the archives at Pretoria, when Lord Roberts captured that place, and clearly convicted him of conniving with the Boers against his own countrymen. In one of these letters he gave the impression that England was divided on the question of the war—a palpable misrepresentation — and told Kruger that his hand would be strengthened by seizing the passes of the Drakensberg, precisely the course which was followed. He further observed that the British Cabinet had no justification for the course they were pursuing. The second letter was to General Joubert and was couched in [illegible] terms, which he styled "wanton and wicked," intimating that the peace party in Britain was growing. That such letters, written a couple of weeks before Kruger's ultimatum, exercised a tremendous effect in bringing on the war, nobody doubts, and it is only to be regretted that defeat at the polls is the only punishment awarded to one who sided with the enemies of his country in so great a national crisis.

DR. CLARKE DEFEATED.

London, Oct. 12.—Dr. Gavin Brown Clark (Radical), the former Consul General of the Transvaal to Great Britain, and a pronounced Boer sympathizer, was defeated by Leicester Harmsworth (Liberal Unionist) in the election at Caithness yesterday. Dr. Clarke had represented the district since [illegible].

NONSENSE FROM A BOER.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 12.—P. Louis Wessels, Special Commissioner of the South African Republics to the United States, yesterday received a letter from Secretary D. Bruyen, of the Boer envoys, now in Holland, containing the first reliable and definite information of the plans of ex-President Kruger that has been made public. The letter states that President Kruger will leave Delagoa Bay on the Netherlands warship Gelderland early in October. He will be taken to Holland, where the envoys are awaiting him. In regard to the intimation in British newspapers that English warships might be sent in pursuit, Mr. Wessels said that any such action by Great Britain would be accepted by the Netherlands as a direct declaraction of war, and the little Dutch nation would act according. Ex-President Kruger bears a commission from the Boer Republics, but exactly what it is not even the envoys of the Boers know. They suppose, however, that he will endeavor to secure intervention by one or all of the European powers to the end that the individuality of the Republics shall not be annihilated.

Mr. Wessels, in his interview, stated that the representations of large numbers of Boers immigrating to America were unfounded. He said—

"You need not be surprised if there is a rebellion of the whole of South Africa before the year is out. The only reason the Cape Colonists did not join us at the outset was because they had no arms, and neither they nor we expected war, and were unprepared."

TABLET TO PRIVATE FINDLAY.

Barrie, Oct. 12.—The tablet to be erected in the Presbyterian church, Barrie, in memory of the late Pte. Findlay, will bear the following inscription—

In memory of
James Halkett Findlay,
Killed at the Battle of Paardeberg,
February 18, 1900.
Aged 27 years.
The first Canadian to die in South Africa for British principles.
In life esteemed by all, in death a noble example.

Erected by the officers and men of the 35th Regt. (Simcoe Foresters).

"I well fear no evil, for Thou art with me."

THEY WANT AN INDEMNITY.

New York, Oct. 12.—Eight American citizens who were foolish enough to identify themselves with the Boers in the South African war and became implicated in the plot to kidnap Lord Roberts recently arrived penniless in this city, have petitioned the United States Government to present claims for indemnity against Great Britain. They declare that although neutral in the recent conflict, they were kidnapped from their homes, leaving wives and children behind. As prisoners of war, the men say they were driven out of Johannesburg on July 31, railroaded to the seacoast in cattle trucks and then sent in the steerage of a transport to Holland.

These men arrived here in the steerage of the Spaarndam, of the Holland-American line, on Thursday, September 27. They are Charles Fowles, a mining contractor, of Whitefield, Me.; James J. Maloney, a miner, of Chicago; Frank Sharpe, an engine driver, of Detroit, Mich., Frank Crees, a mining expert, of New York; and the following naturalized American citizens—Francisco Pudjamas, a manufacturer; William Phillips, a gold miner; John Anderson, a carpenter; and Henry Mormonstein, an interpreter.

They left South Africa on July 31 on board the transport Manhattan, after two weeks' confinement in prison.

TROOPS ARE SUFFERING FROM TYPHOID FEVER

Hong Kong, Oct. 12. Admiral Ho is pursuing the rebels in a north-easterly direction from San Chung. The reformer, San Yat Sen, according to a despatch from Canton, has unfurled the Reform flag in the important town of Wei Shou, on East River. This act has given rise to considerable excitement in military circles in Canton, as it is believed that the object of the Reformers is to denude Canton of troops, so that they can seize the city.

A British expedition, consisting of the 22nd Bombay Infantry, with artillery, is going to the Kow Loon hinterland, though the district is reported quiet.

Paris, Oct. 12. A despatch received by the Havas agency from Tien Tsin, says the general opinion of those knowing Chinese way is that the punishment of the high officials contained in the edict of October 1, will not be executed. The edict is incincere.

It is affirmed that Li Hung Chang has been ordered to reject all demands forterritonal compensation and other war indemnities. The troops at Pekin are suffering from typhoid fever and dysentry.

SALISBURY HAS 383 SEATS

There are Only Forty-Five Members to be Elected to the British House of Commons

London, Oct. 12.—The results of yesterday's elections, given out this morning, give the Unionists four gains and the Liberals three, their respective totals of gains being 34 and 32.

The total number of members of Parliament elected is 625, as follows.

Ministerialists	383
Opposition	242

There are only 45 members to be elected.

The Hon. F. W. Lambton, the successful Unionist candidate in the South east division of Durham, who ousted Mr. J. Richardson, Liberal, the sitting member, is a brother of Capt. Lambton, of the British cruiser Powerful, the hero of the relief of Ladysmith.

Perhaps the most striking of the Unionist successes to-day was in the Walthamstow division of Essex, where Mr. D. J. Morgan, Conservative, converted a minority of 300 into a Conservative majority of 2,465, ousting Mr. Samuel Woods, Liberal, a labor representative, who worked in the mines in his youth.

LYING TELEGRAMS SENT OUT BY EX-PRESIDENT KRUGER AND HIS GENERALS

Cronje Lied to Kruger and Kruger Lied to Everybody About the Various Battles—Held out Hope When There Was no Hope, Says a Telegrapher.

London, Oct. 12.—The Pretoria correspondent of the Daily Mail sends the following interesting despatch—

"From an English telegraphist who was controller of things for the Transvaal, I learn that there was systematic tampering with all telegrams during the war in order to misrepresent operations in favor of the Boers. He says that Mr. Kruger was constantly wiring to the commanders inquiries as to how many British had been killed and that Gen. Cronje, after the fight at Magersfontein, wired Mr. Kruger that he had counted many thousand British dead on the battlefield.

"Early in the campaign Commandant Gen. Joubert appealed to Mr. Kruger to stop the Boers looting, but he received no reply. Later he wired from Colenso advising the President to sue for peace. Mr. Kruger replied— 'Have you lost all faith in God?'

"On another occasion, when the Boers were suffering severe reverses, Mr. Kruger wired to all the generals that 10,000 men were coming to their assistance from the Cape.

The lists that will be used in the fight that is on will be those of 1899, and those of 1900 that have been certified to prior to Sept. 1, 1900. In the majority of cases, however, the lists will be those of 1899. Alex Smith, Liberal organizer, has given a gloating interview to the Liberal press, in which he explains how it was that the Liberals have been taking no active interest in the revision of this year's lists. The Liberals were given a tip a year and six months ago to stay with the lists of 1899.

Samuel J. Young, B.A., will represent the Liberals and West Hastings in the coming campaign, against Harry Corby, M.P. Though he is an able and highly esteemed young man, his chances of victory are very slim. Corby is almost unconquerable in this riding, and Young will put up as brisk a fight as any Grit in the constituency. Early last week the name of Major Lyons Biggar, now in South Africa, was prominently mentioned, many party men feeling a "khaki" candidate would create sufficient enthusiasm to carry the election, but wiser ones thought, and the Biggar family especially, that even if the Major had conquered Kruger alone out on the African veldt, West Hastings would not elect him over Henry Corby and his "glad hand." As long as Corby lives he can count on the riding electing him M.P., unless something remarkable strikes the riding.

MINE WORKERS ARE IN CONVENTION

It Will Soon be Known Whether the Coal Strike Will Continue—Mitchell Gives Warning

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 12.—The convention of striking anthracite mine workers, called by President Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers, for the purpose of considering the 10 per cent. net advance offered by the mine owners, commenced in Music hall this morning. The little hall, which has a capacity of about 700, was soon filled after the doors were opened. Unlike most conventions, there was an utter lack of decorations in the hall. As each official of the United Mine Workers entered the hall he was applauded, but the most enthusiastic demonstration was reserved for President Mitchell.

The convention got down to work very quickly. Ten minutes after the national president's arrival, he called the delegates to order, and delivered an advisory address to the delegates, admonishing them to consider seriously the course they intend to pursue. "The eyes of the American people are centered on the city of Scranton to-day, anxiously awaiting the result of this convention. I do not wish you to accept one cent less for your labor than it is possible for you to secure. I do not wish the great organization which has been built up among you to be wrecked and ruined through any mistake of mine or yours," said President Mitchell in the course of his address, which was well received.

The next order of business was the appointment of the Committee on Credentials. The committee consists of nine members, three from each of the three districts.

After the Credentials Committee had collected the credentials of the delegates the convention at 11 o'clock took a recess until 1.30 p.m. to allow the committee to examine the credentials and make a report thereon.

TROOPS WILL REMAIN.

Shenandoah, Pa., Oct. 12.—General Gobin says there will be no movement of troops homeward until after the Scranton convention. His latest advices are that quietness prevails throughout the entire region.

OFFER IS NOT ENOUGH.

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 12.—Wednesday's parade of the United Mine Workers was probably the largest labor demonstration ever seen in Scranton. The miners came in from all the towns in the Lackawanna and Wyoming valleys, and it is estimated that no fewer than thirty thousand men took part in the procession.

The miners were accompanied by many brass bands and carried flags and transparencies, the latter displaying quaint mottoes bearing on the strike. Several floats were in line, and illustrated certain phases of the anthracite industry.

President Mitchell rode at the head of the procession in a carriage, with Mayor Moir, of this city, and "Mother" Mary Jones.

After traversing the principal streets the procession moved to the Ash street grounds, where a mass meeting was held. Here, for the first time since the strike, President Mitchell declared that the ten per cent. offer of the coal companies was not enough, and his words were cheered to the echo by the assembled thousands.

Mr. Mitchell added that neither he nor the officers of the union would undertake to settle the strike. That must be done by the miners themselves.

SETTLEMENT IS REMOTE.

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 12.—With the miners' convention now in session there is still an absence of anything on which to base a prediction of what the delegates will decide to do. A canvass of many delegates to-day shows that a settlement of the strike by the convention is just as remote as ever.

The following Liberal conventions have been summoned to nominate candidates,—

Oct. 11—South Renfrew, at Renfrew.
Oct. 11—South Huron, at Brucefield.
Oct. 11—West Toronto, at Wardell's Hall.
Oct. 12—East Toronto.
Oct. 12.—North Waterloo, at Waterloo
Oct. 12.—Halton, at Milton.
Oct. 13—Cornwall and Stormont.

Oct. 15—South Leeds, at Athens.
Oct. 19—Carleton, at Stittsville.
Oct. 20.—North Oxford, at Woodstock.
Oct. 22.—South Lanark, at Perth

Conservatives will hold a pow-wow at Sydenham to-day. The speakers will be N. Clarke Wallace, M.P.; J. P. Whitney, M.P.P.; J. W. Bell, M.P.; J. S. Gallagher, M. P. P.

The majority of the Government was increased by the by-elections so that in 1897 the normal majority was 44. On the last division in July, 1900, the Government had a majority of almost two to one. The actual majority was 45. The vote was 68 Liberal, 23 Conservative, on the Solicitor-General's bill to give Quebec three judges.

REVOLT IN THE NORTH MAY SPREAD TO SOUTH CHINA

Germans Undertake the Construction of a Railway Under Military Protection

THE POWERS STILL CONTINUE TO NEGOTIATE

No Agreement Has Yet Been Reached as to the Demand to be Made Upon the Government

London, Oct. 12.—The dominating feature of the Chinese affairs is the increased likehood of a serious outbreak in Southern China, which up to the present time appeared likely to remain quiescent while the north underwent the threes of a revolution. Should the wave of anarchy spread to the south it will be different to foresee the complications in which the powers may find themselves involved. The British sphere of influence in the valley of the Yang Tze Kiang would be seriously endangered, and the loss of millions of pounds invested in railways already constructed and under construction would stare British capitalists in the face. The powers have not yet arrived at any conclusion as to joint action in China, and amid the multiplicity of proposals which are being considered the question becomes more complex every day.

A CRITICAL SITUATION.

Berlin, Oct. 12.—According to a despatch received by the German Navy League, the situation in South China is exceedingly critical. The despatch says that Chang Weih Hong, who advised the Dowager Empress to enroll the Boxers in the army, has been appointed Governor of the new Chinese capital, Sianfu. It is further asserted that many Chinese have been decapitated at Chinkiang, Province of Kiangsu, and that Gen. Yuan Shi Kai has increased his army to 40,000.

SHANGHHAI EXCITED.

Shanghai, Oct. 11.—There is great excitement here because the forign troops have gone outside the concession limits to drill and partol. This action is deeply resented by the Chinese officials, because there has been no sign of any trouble.

SERIOUS DANGER IN KWANGSI

Shanghai, Oct 12.—Sheng, the Taotai, has received a telegram from Gen. Suu reporting that a serious rebellion has broken out in the southwest of Kwangsi province; that his 30,000 troops are inadequate, and that he needs at least 100,000 men to cope with the danger which is directed against the Manchus and threatens to become worse than the Tai Ping rebellion.

GERMANS IMATATE RUSSIA.

New York, Oct. 12.—The German Navy League has received a telegram from Tsing Ta, says a Berlin despatch to The Herald, stating that the construction of the railway from Kiao Chao to Kaumi has been taken up again, under German military protection.

General Yuan Shi Kai retired with his regular Chinese force to a distance of fifty kilometres from the railway when requested to do so be the German Governor, Herr Jaeschka. The Germans occupied Kaumi. It seems that the Germans are now following the Russian method in Manchuria.

ATTITUDE OF POWERS.

Paris, Oct. 12.—Negotiations are proceeding actively on the subject of the propositions contained in the note of M. Delcasse, the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, regarding China, and it is said here that the situation is as follows. "Russia, Italy and Austria accept it unconditionally. Germany has not yet communicated her reply officially, but the French Government has been given to understand that the German Government considers that the French note affords a basis for negotiations.

"Great Britain, also, has adhered to the French note, except respecting the permanent prohibition of the import of arms into China, on which point it makes certain reservations.

"The answer of the United States is known. Japan has not replied officially, but is expected to acquiesce. Although the French Government is anxious to receive the reply of Japan, in view of the importance of the role Japan is intitled to play in the Chinese question, the French note has resulted so satisfactorily that M. Delcasse has asked that the Pekin Ministers be authorized to confer, with the view of opening preliminary negotiations with Li Hung Chang."

London, Oct. 11.—The officials of the Foreign Office say Lord Salisbury assents to M. Delcasse's Chinese note, with a reservation as to methods of suggesting also that each nationality garrison one place instead of the proposed joint occupation of each locality.

AWAITING REINFORCEMENTS.

Berlin, Oct. 11.—Count Von Waldersee, an official telegram announces, will start for Pekin from Tien Tsin next Saturday. The Germans are prohibiting the import of arms, and awaiting reinforcements at Tien Tsin before undertaking further measures. They have effected telegraphic communication between Tien Tsin and Pekin.

TO MEET THE CZAR.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 12.—The Chinese Minister here has left town. It is believed he has gone to the Crimea to see the Czar.

MYSTERIOUS DEATH OF A YOUNG WOMEN

Unknown Female Died at Mrs. Wiley's Maternity Hospital and Information is Sought About Her

Toronto, Oct. 12.—Coroner Young has filed a warrant for an inquest on the body of a young woman about 18 years of age who died this morning at Mrs. Wilsey's licensed maternity house at 237 Victoria street. On Wednesday night the deceased was brought there by a young man was stated that she came from Buffalo, but who did not leave his name or adress, nor did he say what her name or adress was. During last night she was suddenly taken ill and Dr. Johnston, of Elm street, was called in. He treated her as he deemed best, and left. Betwen 6 and 7 o'clock he was again called to the house, but the unfortunate young stranger was dead.

Who is she, where she came from, who brought her there and what caused her death are questions the coroner will seek to have answered.

The body was removed to Ellis' undertaking establishment, where the inquest will be held on Monday.

Dr. Primrose is making a post-mortem examination this afternoon.

THANK OFFERING MEETING

Of the Foreign Missionary Society of St. Pauls Church

A Thanksgiving meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of St. Paul's Church took place yesterday afternoon in the lecture room of the church.

Miss Dickson, the President of the Society occupied the chair. Interesting papers were read by Mrs. Robt. Hall, and Mrs. Brown, on missionary work.

Mrs. Kendry was present from the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the George Street Church, and stated that by the will of the late Mr. Pethic, the sum of $600 was bequeathed missions in China, India and Japan. As their Society had no missionaries in China or Japan, it was decided that the money be divided amongst those churches in Peterborough who had workers in these lands. She had therefore much pleasure in presenting the Society with $50.

The sum of $170 was given, as a result of the meeting.

SALMON FISHING NOW ON

Will Stony Lake Become a Second Fraser River?

The season when the salmon rise is now on, and great preparations are being made for a big catch. Heretofore netting was prohibited, but this year nets are to be used.

There are miles of nets out, and more being put down every day. The Chief Game Warden and four deputies are at the lake to see that bass and maskinonge caught in the nets are again returned to the water.

The Stony Lake salmon run from 15 to 40 pounds in weight, and are equal, if not superior in flavor to the Fraser River Salmon, of British Columbia. It is expected that tons of the fish will be taken this year. These will be salted and prepared for future use.

The result of the free netting privelege will be watched with interest, and if the fish are as plentiful as they say they are, the salmon fishery of Stony Lake may become quite an industry.

Being advised to take Ozone and from the time I began to take it I perceived good results and am glad now to say I am entirely free from the complaints mentioned. I have only taken one bottle in all. Some of my friends to whom I recommended it have also experienced good results. It gives me much pleasure to bear this testimony and to say that Ozone has been a great boon to me.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, OCTOBER 13 1900.

THE POLITICAL OUTLOOK.

After an extended vacation, Events, edited by a member of the Liberal party, has resumed its review of current politics. The paper says—

"The Conservatives are inspiring a confidence in their success, which means a lot at the polls, while the government seems content to figure out what the good times will do for them. There is no denying that the good times will help them greatly, but something more than that is needed. They have a lot of things to defend, and abuse of the Conservative past is no defence of the Liberal present. Sir Wilfred Laurier's government is not by any means as strong as it was two years ago. It reached the summit of its popularity during the Queen's Jubilee, but since then it has been falling steadily in the public estimation. Scandal after Scandal has been cropping up, until the government has such a load of shady transactions to shoulder, that it is hard to see how they can win out in the race. In the West there is very little hope for them. Mr. Sifton is looked upon as a doomed man in his own constituency, where Hon. Hugh John Macdonald opposes him. Indeed the only really popular Liberal seems to be Mr. Richardson, M.P. for Lisgar, and he deserves every bit of popularity he has.

"But even the west is not the worst field for the Liberals. Ontario is going to give the government a surprise this time. The vote that left the Conservatives in 1896 on the school question will be back into line this time, and will give the opposition a majority and a good one. In Quebec too the government is going to lose some seats. It may not lose a great many, but as it cannot afford to lose any at all, the few it will lose will be disastrous. I have had information from a number of points in the province, and I am convinced that the opposition has a fair fighting chance even in Quebec. It must not be forgotten that Quebec is the province that never does what is expected of it. In 1896 it was reasonably expected that it would support the government of Sir Charles Tupper, but instead it gave that administration its death blow. So in the coming contest the unexpected may happen, and Laurier, Tarte and Company find themselves out in the cold.

Resolution of Condolence.

To Bro. William Jones—

At a regular meeting of L.O.L. No. 321, held at Orange Hall, Downer's Corners, Otonabee, on the evening of August 7th, 1900, the following resolution was unanimously passed—

We desire to express our sincere sympathy to you and your family in the very great affliction you have had to bear in the death of your only son and our brother, William H. Jones. Our hearts go out in sympathy in your sad bereavement. We pray that our Heavenly Father may comfort you in this great sorrow. May you feel that our Heavenly Father will not needlessly cause you to suffer, and that you may feel His abiding presence ever with you, and that He is both able and willing to bear you up under this crushing weight of grief—for we hope and have the assurance that our divine Father has received him into His Kingdom, there forever to sing praises to the Lamb who has purchased his pardon. Many blessings rest upon you and your family, is the prayer of L.O.L. No. 321.

Good News for Our Readers.

Who have scrofula taints in their blood, and who has not? Scrofula in all its forms is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla which thoroughly purifies the blood. This disease, which frequently appears in children, is greatly to be dreaded. It is most likely to affect the glands of neck, which become enlarged, eruptions appear on the head and face, and the eyes are frequently affected. Upon its first appearance, perhaps in slight eruptions or pimples, scrofula should be entirely eradicated from the system by a thorough course of Hood's Sarsaparilla to prevent all the painful and sickening consequences of running scrofula sores which drain the system, sap the strength and make existence utterly wretched.

A NOVEL.

dark curls, as she murmured, quite under her breath:

"So like—ah, Abel, so like!"

Again Izetta, in her artless way told Marguirette her pitiful story there were tears in the sightless eyes when she ceased speaking.

The young girl spoke in such hopeful eagerness of the few days which must soon pass before her husband came for her.

Abel Moore looked at her, pondering what was best to be done. The sun had set; the birds were folding their wings, and the flowers long since had closed their eyes, while the bright stars slowly fixed themselves in the sky above.

"Marguirette," he said gently, "what shall we do for this child?"

Marguirette led him quietly to the window.

"Look," she said; "I cannot see that white cross upon which the stars are shining through the trees; but you can see it, Abel."

"I can see it," he replied, with a husky voice.

"For the sake of her who sleeps there, Abel— our all, who was so like this one— let us keep her here until the first great sting of her grief is over. I can better judge then what is best for her future."

"Child, would you like to remain here for a few days?" he asked, turning to Izetta.

She crossed quickly over to where the old flute-maker and his wife stood by the window.

"I am very grateful to you," she said; "my husband will be very pleased that I have found so good a shelter."

"You love your— your husband very much?" said Marguirette, sadly.

"More than I can tell you," answered Izetta.

She wondered why the good woman said, "poor child!" while she was so rich in her husband's love.

For many days that followed, the passengers on the incoming trains saw, eagerly watching from amid the green trees a beautiful, expectant, joyful face, the most gloriously beautiful foreign face they had ever seen, and they never forgot the white, despairing woe that settled over it from which all joy, all light and happiness died out as the train slowly moved onward, leaving her there alone in her pitiful sorrow.

Thus the days dragged slowly along, lengthening into a week and the week into a fortnight; and yet he came not, and dark thoughts were creeping into the sad girl-wife's heart as she crept slowly home by the path on the brink of the dark river.

CHAPTER XIII.

He Cometh Not.

Who could attempt to describe the next few days that followed; the rosy dawns watched her with such a pitiful, pleading face, and the tears which ushered in each gloaming.

After each train had departed and Izetta came not, Abel always knew where to look for her— down by the dark, silent water where he first met her, with her face buried in the long, cool grass.

There were no tears now; it might have been better had there been.

Abel and his wife were sorely troubled about her.

"Love often makes a woman desperate," she thought, as she listened to the girl's low, quivering sighs. "There is no telling what she might do if left to herself."

Abel had thought her scarcely more than a child; he was amazed at the tragic sorrow that swayed her soul; the haunting look in the dark eyes was terrible to see.

Slowly the thought was beginning to dawn upon Izetta— what if he never came? Ah, God how was she to live through the suspense.

The week and two succeeding days had slowly dragged away, bringing Izetta no tidings.

She crept slowly back to the flute-maker's home, where Marguirette sat knitting in the twilight, sitting down on a low footstool by her side.

Marguirette knew well the terrible, heart-rending lesson of disappointment that young heart was learning.

She knew there are times in life when silence is a blessing— this was one of them. At last Izetta broke the silence.

"Mrs. Moore," she said, "why do you think my husband does not come to me?"

There seemed to be years added to that young voice; all the sweetness was gone from it.

"My child," replied Marguirette, "God forbid my lips should be the ones to speak that which must give you pain, but it is my duty. You will look back to this moment all the years of your after life, and remember it was my duty to speak."

She could not see how marble white the beautiful face had grown.

"Izetta," she continued softly, "the world is wicked; there are men who have helped to make it so; there are crimes too dark for young minds to fully comprehend; but the cruelest of all crimes is the blighting of innocent girlhood."

Izetta's lips parted, but no sound issued from them.

"There are men," continued blind Marguirette, sadly, "who are attracted to a pretty face; beauty is often a fatal gift child; the voice is tender, the smile sweet. I have not wondered they win the love of young girls, but the folly does not rest there, Izette; they soon tire of them; can you think what would happen then, child?"

"No," came the girl's answer, in a low voice, something like the truth of Marguirette's meaning flashing across her brain.

"They too often tire of a light romantic love, and with a smile on their lips or a kiss on their cheeks, they leave them. Heaven pity the poor, unprotected innocents! They never return, Izetta, never. May heaven pity the heart of her who waits; they never come, child."

"It cannot be so with Alderio," sobbed the girl; "I am his wife, Mrs. Moore; surely that makes a difference. Why did he marry me if he meant to desert me?"

"Abel tells me you are fair to look upon. He was young and reckless; your beauty was the fatal rock; it was admiration, not love."

Izetta recalled her husband's every word and look. She did not remember the words, "I love you," ever to have crossed his lips.

"Surely God would never be so cruel to me," moaned the girl passionately, "when I love him so. Ah! Mrs. Moore, I did not know then my life

HEART-SICK.

There are a great many people who have heart sickness, who have no chronic derangement of the heart. When the stomach is diseased it may affect many other organs, and produce all the evidences of diseased heart, diseased liver or kidneys, or disease in some other organ. The inexperienced practitioner treats the wrong disease, and hence the constant statement of Dr. Pierce's correspondents: "Doctors could not help me."

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. It increases the assimilative powers and purifies and enriches the blood. When diseases of organs remote from the stomach are caused by the stomach, the cure of the stomach results in the cure of the other diseases, in heart, lungs, liver, kidneys, etc.

"Six years ago my stomach and heart troubled me so much I had to do something, as the doctors could not help me," writes Mrs. S. A. Knapp, of San Jose, California, Box 99. "I went to San Francisco and had treatment for catarrh of the stomach, and was better for some time, then it came back. I then used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets.' These medicines cured my stomach. I do not have the pain and indigestion as I did. It is very hard for me to tell you what I suffered before I commenced taking your valuable medicine. I recommend it to all the sufferers whom I meet."

Address to the Electors

To the Free and Independent Electors of West Peterborough—

Gentlemen,—Having accepted the unanimous nomination of the Liberals of this Riding, as a candidate for its representation in the House of Commons I hereby respectfully solicit your support in securing my return at the coming general elections.

The grounds upon which I base my appeal are not so much nor chiefly by any means, my personal fitness for the position of your representation though as a citizen of Peterborough and interested in its progress in common with that of the country, I can and do premise, if elected, an intelligent support of such a public policy and such measures as will best conduce to the promotion of all the interests of Canada, the developement of her great resources and the general betterment of the civil moral and material condition of the public; and my best abilities and most assiduous attention shall be devoted to the faithful discharge of my representative duties.

The strongest ground, however, of my appeal consists in the fact that I am a firm supporter of the Liberal Government led by Sir Wilfred Laurier, which is entitled to the renewed confidence of the people, both on the ground of its policy and the splendid record established by the application of that policy. The Liberal party appealed to the country in 1896 upon a clearly defined policy and the promised results followed.

The Liberal party promised a reduction of a high tariff that hampered our industrial and agricultural interests and was hostile to the Mother Country.

The tariff was materially reduced and otherwise improved and in such a way as to help instead of hinder the manufacturer and farmer, with the consequence that never before in the history of the country have our industries or our farmers enjoyed such great prosperity, our mechanics and working men such constant employment and high wages, nor our commercial and all other interests so flourished.

Our domestic and foreign trade have also greatly increased. The loyal gift of a trade preference, represented by a tariff reduction on British goods of 33 1-3 per cent., and our despatch of the Canadian Contingent, have resulted in a kindlier feeling towards Canada and greatly increased trade with the Mother Country.

With a largely reduced rate of tariff, our revenue has greatly expanded so that the Government was warranted in practicing true economy (reducing our postal rate one third, giving Imperial penny postage,) and premitting of the completion of great public works, deepening our canals, so long trifled with, pushing the work on the Trent Valley Canal which is now urged and will be urged to completion by the Liberal Government, and the application of a vigorous policy of general development and improvement of our transportation facilities, resulting and to result in easier access to the British market and better prices for all our products.

The farming interests of the country are deserving of the best services of a Government, such as the present has given. The immense impetus given the produce trade between Canada and Great Britain, through the preferential tariff, has been greatly helped by the action of the Government in providing an excellent and adequate system of cold storage, by which Canadian products can be landed in Great Britain in first-class condition, guaranteeing the highest prices. The system is of the most modern character, sufficient for all the present needs of the trade, and it will be improved and enlarged as experience suggests, and increase of the produce trade demands, and I shall, if elected, feel it my duty to support any policy that will improve our trade with the Mother Country, and strengthens the bond of British connection, of which we are so proud.
